

THE RETAIL

FLORIST.....

THE VACANT CHAIR.

The accompanying illustration is offered as an excellent example of a difficult design. The average vacant chair has two faults: it is apt to be shapeless, partly because of unskillful workmanship and partly because of the second fault—an attempt at too great elaboration. In this case the design was of sufficient size so that elaboration in the decoration did not obscure the outlines of the design; there was space for plain areas to contrast with the drapings, and the piece was on the whole tremendously effective.

Instead of the usual wire frame, an ordinary green willow porch chair was used and mossed over, then covered solidly with Enchantress carnations, great care being taken to have the work smooth and even. With this groundwork in place, the design was ready for trimming. For this, cattleyas, roses, valley, sweet peas and lilies were used, with chenille cord and tassels on the arm and ribbon on the back. One of the merits of this piece was that it presented an equally good appearance from all points of view.

This chair was made by the Alpha Floral Co., Kansas City.

THE SCIENCE OF PRICE.

Placing a Value on One's Skill.

While we may always have to sell flowers in bulk by the dozen or hundred, it does not follow that the price of a decoration or design shall be determined solely by the amount of stock which it consumes. If we ever expect to see floral decorative art take its place in the front rank with other departments of art, it will be when the majority of florists learn to place a value upon their work as work, and not as so many dozen flowers, so many pounds of moss and a frame. Then, when that happy day comes, he will no longer expect to value a funeral piece by dozens, pounds and hundreds only, any more than an artist would price his picture by the number of paint tubes, brushes and square feet of canvas which were required to reproduce his ideal for other eyes.

Right here, however, we might as well understand that we must be able to put the art into our work before we can expect to get our money out of it. But somebody will suggest that he does not know how high a grade of work his productions are. In the first place, if his work is in the prevailing style and like everybody else's, he has not attained a rank higher than the man who can build a brick wall, no matter how perfectly he builds. But when he can add or take from, some notice may be taken of how he adds his ornaments to the brick wall or opens a passage through it.

A Tradesman, but Also an Artist.

If I can construct a wreath after the common fashion and remain satisfied with it, I may have learned my trade well, but I have not yet begun to learn my profession. But when I can remove some of my flowers from the wreath, or bricks from the wall, and open a passage through to something beyond or opposite, or when I can add a flower or a leaf which shall cause my wreath to differ from what one may see any day, anywhere, then I may be encouraged to believe that I have name some day, and, other things being equal, I shall reap the benefits financially.

A Picture in Flowers.

At this point somebody will say, "But we take orders in advance. People often do not see in advance what they are getting. They must have some idea of what to expect, some specifications as to size and number." To be sure, they must. So must one when ordering his portrait. Give him a general idea of what your plan is for him, but it is poor policy to promise so many dozens of one, so many dozens of another, so many inches of length and width to the piece. A good general description and some idea of the style and effect are all that can reasonably be demanded.

Make the piece so that a spray or a group may have as much value to the whole piece as a bit of drapery or a position of the hand may have to the portrait as a whole. In short, make a picture with your flowers as paint, with your stems as brush strokes, your con-taken a step in the upward path. When I pursue some plan of color distribution which is any distance removed from hit or miss, I am at least a hopeful, and may be classed as a professional artist. I may make all kinds of unprofessional blunders, but if my courage holds out I shall deserve my structive flowers or foliage as background, your lighter material as high lights, and your individuality as the little signature across the corner. Then let it sell for what it is worth in character, in beauty of coloring, in skill of blending, in strength and beauty of expression. This isn't as difficult as it may seem. In every community there are people who appreciate the artistic touch and are glad to pay its price.

Better Value with Fewer Flowers.

Say, then, that you will decorate a room or one feature of it for so much, and do not bind yourself to a definite number of flowers or other materials of a certain grade. That will allow you an opportunity to use fewer, finer and larger specimens if it suits the purpose, or a larger number of smaller ones. If decoration is artistically done with reference to the place, not many will inquire about the number of flowers employed. In fact, impress upon them that they get better value in an artistic effect than in superabundance of material.

All this takes for granted that your material is worth so much, your time so much and the wear and tear so much, added to the value of the picture. In other words, do not make the selling price of the flowers and the making-up materials, added to the time, the only determining factors in estimating the price of work. All these things must be considered, but they are by no means the only ones.

"But the other man won't do that." Well, probably he has the same opinion of you. At any rate, let him go his way. Big quantities, too much for the money, do not pay. It can not last in the long run. Gertrude Blair.

THE WORLD DESIGN.

The accompanying illustration is reproduced from a photograph of a unique design made by the Fleischman Floral Co., Chicago, February 27. The design was ordered by the friends of John J. Bohn, publisher of the Hotel World, who was instantly killed by an automobile. The idea, of course, was to connect the name of the paper with the form of the design, a reproduction of the world in flowers. George Wienhoeber states that the piece was over seven feet high, the oceans on the sphere being made in white carnations, with violets for the continents. Every now and then a maker-up is compelled by the necessities of his business to study the design of some society or other emblem, but in this case it seems a safe assertion that the florist had to get out his geography, for the design, though it shows only the western hemisphere in the picture, was complete on both sides; the whole world was there.

FEATURING THE ACCESSORIES.

Every modern flower store carries in stock a great many things besides flowers, and upon the skill with which they are displayed depends to a large extent the volume of business done with the innumerable accessories which so enhance the attractive qualities of the work turned out, and which add so materially to the profit that is made in the operation of the store. In fitting up a flower store it is worth while to give considerable study to the facilities for the display of the accessories. You know the old proverb, "Out of sight, out of mind." Pause long enough to give a thought to the fact that the old saw applies to yourself and your clerks as well as to your customers; salesmen are as prone as others to forget. Whatever you have to sell, it should be kept in sight—in sight of everyone and all the time.

The illustration on the opposite page was prepared from a photograph made recently in the new store of C. P. Mueller, Wichita, Kan., who has achieved two worthy ends in his effort to make things handy as well as up-to-date. In the first place, he has an attractive establishment, one that would be a credit to a much larger town than Wichita, but a no less important fact is that he has so arranged his store that the baskets, vases, jardinieres, pot covers and ribbons are where clerk and customer both have them in view—and seeing is believing in this as well as in other things. By all means keep your accessories attractively in sight—play them up and your use of them will increase, and with this increase will come added profit.

THE BEGINNER.

I was much interested in the paper published in The Review, by S. S. Skidelsky, entitled "Are We Progressive?" especially in the question he raises about the would-be florist. There is no doubt that there is a common delusion that there are tremendous profits to be made in the growing of flowers that induces many small capitalists, who have absolutely no knowledge of the subject, to go into the business; most of them after a few years sell out at probably one-third to one-half the original cost; a few struggle along and by hard work manage to make both ends meet. This constant flow of capital into the business, for which there is no adequate return, must tend to reduce the profits of the legitimate grower.

It does not follow, because a man has succeeded in raising a few plants in his own little greenhouse or hotbeds, or because he has, or thinks he has, a love for flowers, that he is competent to grow stock for market. If this man wishes to become a florist, there are opportunities offered in private establishments, which work would probably suit him better. Is there any other profession in which the ways and means are so easily accessible to the public as the florists'? Could not a more definite line be drawn between private and commercial horticulture? I do not think we require horticultural schools so much as schools where commercial growing can be taught. Why do not some of our best growers take pupils? We seem to have plenty of colleges, presided over by learned professors, which is all very well for the private gardener. I believe horticultural schools for young men, who are not and never have worked at the business, only tend to increase the number of incompetents. They get chock full of theory, and when they start at the practical work they expect to begin too high up, without having a thorough knowledge of small details, which, in this business, is one of the chief factors which go to make success in growing; also it tends to make them forget the hard work, even drudgery, connected with it, which, no matter how learned a man may be, has to be performed by everyone in most commercial establishments. I have failed to find or know of any one who can recommend one comprehensive and really practical work from the market growing standpoint on the science of the soil. I am as anxious as any one to learn and improve my knowledge in this line, but where are you to turn to find really reliable instruction? How many of our growers have ever had a complete analysis made of their soil, and, if they have, know how to make practical use of it in the growing of various crops? I should like to see some letters on these subjects in the columns of The Review by more able men than I, who am only a working florist.

F. Williams.

A great many people will differ with the idea that those who go into the florists' business should first gain a comprehensive knowledge of its details. The fact is that until recent years few of those who made a start in the trade had any special knowledge of it. They simply made a start and worked out their own salvation. Nor will there be agreement that those who make a start and then drop out reduce the profits of the established florists. The man who isn't making any too good progress is in no position to undersell—not for long. The consumption of plants and flowers is increasing far too rapidly to have the mere presence of a few beginners affect its profits to any appreciable extent.

GIGANTEUM LILIES.

What is the matter with my giganteum lily bulbs? I sent my order in early to one of the most reliable houses in the country, but did not receive the bulbs until November 3, when they were at once potted and placed on a bed of cinders under a bench, where there is no drip, in a house run at a temperature of 40 to 45 degrees and covered with excelsior. I have been careful about watering, so as not to get them too wet. They are only slightly rooted and have not shown any signs of top growth. Under the same bench and with exactly the same treatment I have some Formosa and Harrisii potted at the same time and they are three inches high and finely rooted. Kindly advise me what to do to get the longiflorums in for Easter. I can give any temperature from 35 to 90 degrees. I have grown lilies for five years and have not failed to have fine lilies and on time too.

E. W. H.

The bulbs of Lilium longiflorum giganteum are always later in arriving than other varieties of the Easter lily. L. Harrisii and Formosa L. longiflorum are both naturally much earlier and are received in the United States two to three months earlier than the giganteums, and the fact that they had been dormant quite a long time before you received them would make them form roots and start to grow much more quickly than the later form. Your treatment for the giganteums has been quite right. Leave them where they are until the pots are well filled with active roots and the growths have appeared above the ground. Then move them into a house run at 60 to 65 degrees at night and you will have your plants in nice shape. They will be too late for Easter unless you can count the buds early in March. If late, better carry cool for Memorial day than bring in just after Easter, when demand is slow.

TO MAKE HYDRANGEAS BLUE.

One of our customers writes us inquiring what chemical to use and in what quantity to make Hydrangea paniculata grandiflora and Hydrangea arborescens sterilis bloom blue. Can you give us any information?

W. B. N. C.

I do not know the method whereby H. arborescens and H. paniculata grandiflora can be made to produce blue, instead of white flowers. The more tender H. Otaksa, a Japanese variety, frequently produces blue instead of pink flowers. Some varieties of this are always blue. Some, again, will be pink under glass and blue if grown outside, and vice versa. Certain chemicals in the soil are believed to cause the flowers to become blue. A little broken alum mixed with the soil when potting will assist in making the flowers blue. Other growers have found that the incorporation of iron filings in the compost produces similar results. I have no faith, however, in either alum, iron filings, or any chemicals turning the white varieties blue.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS.

For Outdoors.

The present is a suitable time to make a sowing of sweet peas in pots for planting outdoors. These should not be placed in any artificial heat at all. A coldframe, which can be protected with mats and board shutters, is an ideal place for them. Stand the pots close together on a bed of clean cinders. Sow two seeds in each 3-inch pot and thin out to one, or five or six in a 4-inch pot and thin out to three. Never mind if the temperature in the frame falls to 32 degrees, or even below it; no harm will come to the peas. As the seedlings germinate, keep them well aired, and before planting-out time arrives remove the sashes entirely during the day and on mild nights. Planting out can be done any time from the middle of April until the beginning of May. Plant those from 3-inch pots a foot apart and the 4-inch ones eighteen inches apart in the rows. It is better to have the brush or other supports in position before setting out the little plants. Closer planting than recommended is not advisable, as at the distances named the plants will make strong haulm and soon cover the supports. They will also carry much finer flower stalks than when planted more closely. Of course, the ground in which they are planted should be rich and well prepared. It is a mistake to start the plants in heat. They will come along faster, but never prove so satisfactory as those raised in cooler quarters.

A small selection of good outdoor varieties is as follows: White, Dorothy Eckford, White Spencer; lavender, Asta Ohn Spencer, Frank Dolby; orange pink, Helen Lewis, Miss Willmott; pink, Countess of Spencer; blush, Mrs. Routzahn Spencer; scarlet and crimson, King Edward VII, John Ingman; blue and purple, Navy Blue, Lord Nelson. As a general rule the light pink, orange pink, white and lavender shades are in the best demand. Anyone planting mixed seed is away behind the times. There are few customers who want mixtures and they are unsalable in the flower markets. Plants started at once in pots will give flowers ten to fourteen days ahead of the earliest outdoor sown ones and better flowers at that.

Under Glass.

The later sowings of sweet peas are now growing rapidly and will soon have flowers opening. With the increasing sunheat and longer days, it is now possible to ventilate much more freely. Avoid, however, anything in the nature of cold drafts. In March we frequently get a day which starts out hot; soon a black cloud will start a snow squall, with alternate sunshine and cloud the rest of the day. It is necessary under these conditions to watch the ventilators closely, or mildew will get a start, and is not easily eradicated. Prevention is much better and easier than cure. With the plants growing so fast, the work of stringing and fastening them up will need constant attention and must never be neglected, as once a stem gets bent the flowers are unsalable. Houses which are now in full crop should have more feeding now, either in the form of liquid manure or top-dressing of cow or sheep manure lightly pointed in with a fork. A dressing of fine bone, scratched in, is also good. Maintain a night temperature of 48 to 50 degrees and the plants will enjoy it. It is a great error to run them at 55 degrees. You may get longer stems, but the flowers are softer and do not stand up like the cooler grown ones.

SHAMROCKS.

Can you tell me how and when to plant shamrock seeds and what care to give them in the greenhouse, or out in the ground? J. R. W.

The only time when shamrocks are in demand is March 17. It is, of course, much too late to secure plants from seed now for that date. The seed should be sown during October or November, in shallow flats in a house kept at about 45 degrees at night. When sufficiently large to handle, prick out in other flats and later pot singly, or place several plants in small pans. Always grow them in full sun and not in any temperature exceeding 50 degrees, 5 degrees lower being better. C. W.

FORCING SHRUB BLOOM.

How long does it take to bring dormant branches of apple, plum and cherry into blossom? We are figuring on a decoration for a millinery opening. M. & J.

From two to three weeks in a temperature of 65 degrees at night will be required. Place the branches in a good bulk of water and spray freely until the flowers start to expand. Forsythia will open within two weeks. The apples, pears and cherries require a few days longer. C. W.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS.

Propagating.

Increasing sunlight, longer days and the fact that the cuttings are getting longer, all serve to warn the chrysanthemum grower that he must be getting his stock under way for the year 1911. If the cuttings are leggy they can be topped, leaving about six to ten inches of stem, and later these stems will throw out an abundance of quite good shoots, though the ideal cutting is one that is taken from the base of the plant and is called a sucker.

It is assumed that these stock plants are growing in a cool house. A temperature of 40 degrees, with lots of light, suits the chrysanthemum fairly well.

If one desires to grow his plants exceptionally well, stock of all the slow kinds should be in the sand as soon as possible. This would include such varieties as Beatrice May, A. J. Balfour, October Frost and others of the early varieties. October Frost is not a slow growing variety, but it should be gotten under way in good season, because one must secure an early bud on it in order to get a heavy, full flower. It is quite impossible to plant October Frost from a June cutting and then expect a good flower. Some good growers take cuttings from their plants in November or December, as soon as they are through flowering, and these, when potted up and benched in the new year and afterward planted out in a light, airy bench, soon throw an abundance of nice, healthy cuttings for late spring propagating.

One Cause of Failure.

The grower who sticks his stock plants under the bench and keeps them there until this season of the year, always invites failure and nearly always meets with it. Where the stock plants have been growing cool and hardy and the cuttings are hard, there will be practically no loss in the sand bed, with reasonable treatment. Where the cuttings are soft, they will simply melt away in most cases when propagating begins.

A sand temperature of 50 degrees is ample, and we find in this season of the year that if cuttings in a north house receive a good soaking when they are put in the sand, this is generally enough water to carry the cuttings until they are rooted and ready to come out. When one is propagating in a house that is more or less exposed to the sunlight and has more ventilation, it is, of course, a different proposition, and cuttings in such a position would stand spraying almost every day.

The process of separating the cuttings is well known to almost every grower and consists merely in removing the bottom leaves of the cuttings and shortening back the tips of the upper ones. This permits setting the cuttings closer in the bench and gives the air a chance to circulate through them, thus lessening the possibility of loss by damping. Chas. H. Totty.

FERTILIZING THE FIELD SOIL.

I am seeking a little of your valuable advice about the planting of carnations in the field. I sowed the land last fall with rye, so as to plow it under this spring to serve for manure. Farm manure is not obtainable in this section and I have been thinking of putting bone meal on after it is plowed and then harrowing it in. How much bone meal per acre would you advise me to use? Any other advice would be gladly welcomed. A. C. W.

Be careful that you do not overdo the fertilizing of your carnation field. There is danger of starting stem-rot by having it not in the proper state of decomposition. The green crop which you are intending to turn under this spring would be all that I would advise for this spring. If you have a lot of wood ashes it would be a good idea to put on a good sprinkling of it before you harrow, instead of the bone. If you need more fertilizer on the field, and you cannot get stable manure, I would advise you to get ground sheep manure instead of bone. Plow the field late next fall, after you have dug all the carnations. Then put on the sheep manure at the rate of about two tons to the acre and harrow it in slightly. Be sure this fall plowing is deep. In the spring plow only moderately deep, so the manure will not be worked down too deep.

I might add that it is not considered wise to make your field soil too rich. You do not want a rank growth in the field, and if your soil is moderately rich in plant food, so that the plants will make a moderate growth, it is better than if it were extremely rich. The soil in your benches should be a great deal richer than that in the field, as that is where you want the strong growth.

NAME OF CARNATION.

We are sending you under separate cover a carnation bloom which was taken from an odd plant that is among a bench of our Rose-pink Enchantress. We consider it something special, for it is a strong grower and free bloomer. I have taken from it seven blooms and forty-eight cuttings and there are five flowering shoots left on the plant. Please give me the name of the variety.

A. M. B.

The plant that is mixed with your Rose-pink Enchantress is Afterglow. This is a good record for that variety, and if you succeed in getting as good results on an average per plant next season you will find it highly profitable. It will give you a high quality of bloom, but most growers have found it hardly prolific enough in flowering.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

Department of Registration.

William Kleinheinz, of Ogontz, Pa., has registered Carnation Miss Dimple Widener, Mrs. Thos. Lawson x Lady Bountiful; scarlet; size, three and one-half inches; clean grower; free bloomer; long, stiff stems and free from disease; never splits and every flower comes perfect.

Entries for the Boston Show.

Members of the American Carnation Society will please bear in mind that all entries for the Boston show should be in the hands of Secretary A. F. J. Baur, Indianapolis, Ind., by March 18; $2 will be charged for each entry made after that date.

Only members of the A. C. S. are eligible to compete in the general carnation classes, excepting section G. If you are not a member, send in your application now or when you forward your entries. Include $3 to cover the first year's dues and entrance fee. The fact that you may not be a member now need not prevent you from competing at the show, but you must become a member before your entries will be accepted.

Send for a premium list. Copies have been mailed to all members.

In section H, class 51, the donors request that the requirement of five inches in size be omitted. The $25 gold medal or $25 in gold will be awarded to the twelve largest blooms, one or more varieties, regardless of size. Make a note of this.

Members of the A. C. S. may now secure membership buttons. A wide distribution is desired. The price is 75 cents. When you send in your dues, just add 75 cents for one of these buttons.

Why not send in your dues now, and thereby save the secretary some work at the convention?

A. F. J. Baur, Sec'y.

THE SOIL OR THE FERTILIZER?

I am sending you a sample of soil from our benches, in which we are trying to grow roses, carnations, violets, lettuce, etc. Will you kindly let us know whether it is a suitable soil for this purpose, as well as for a full line of pot plants?

I also enclose a sample of a fertilizer which we have used on this soil. The advertised analysis of the fertilizer is as follows: Animal ammonia, 6.5 per cent; nitrogen equivalent, 5.85; animal phosphate, 1.8; phosphoric acid, 8.26; pure potash, 3.0. When used as a top-dressing, it creates a mold on the soil, and young stock planted in soil in which this has been used damps off. We have to buy all our soil each year, and this is what was delivered last year. Our stock is not in the best of condition; the plants do not seem to take hold and grow as they should, especially the roses. We have used liberal quantities of both cow manure and bone meal. If you can give me any information on this, it will be much appreciated. W. R.

The sample of soil has not reached me, so I can say nothing about it.

The fertilizer used, if the analysis is correct, should have no ill effect on plants. It would be advisable, however, to refrain from using it on very young stock. By mixing it with twice its bulk of good sod, when using it as a mulch, it will be rendered safer. Cow manure is the safest and most suitable manure when it can be had pure, and by using it in the proportion of one part to four or five of soil good results can be obtained. Ribes.

VALLEY IN COLD STORAGE.

What temperature is correct for valley when held in cold storage? How should valley be treated upon being taken out of cold storage? What is the coldest the temperature can become before it will hurt valley in cold storage? Would not injury be more likely to occur if the temperature should run up?

H. H. K.

A temperature varying from 25 to 28 degrees, but as near the latter figure as possible, is best. I have had good success in holding them at 26 degrees, but 28 degrees seemed to give even better results. When taken out of cold storage, valley must not be at once placed in a warm, light house, or it will sustain great injury and will perhaps be rendered entirely useless for forcing.

Thaw out in a cool cellar, shed or other building; if dark, so much the better.

The temperature, if allowed to remain below 24 degrees for any considerable time, is liable to damage the pips. On one occasion a batch was held at 20 degrees for an experiment, but one experience of that kind sufficed. The greatest injury, of course, comes from the temperature running up. Lily of the valley in the open ground becomes active even when the temperature is below freezing, and if your cold storage temperature should rise and remain at 32 degrees or even a degree lower for a few days, the pips would sustain injury.

A fluctuating cold storage plant must be avoided. If you cannot keep an even temperature, it will be far better to purchase from some reliable firm which specializes in this class of valley pips.

SEASONABLE

SUGGESTIONS

Azalea Mollis.

The pale yellow and pink shades of Azalea mollis are in good demand at Easter; in fact, none of these azaleas are of the sour, unsalable shades. A period of six to seven weeks, in a temperature averaging 50 degrees at night, is ample to flower Azalea mollis. Its treatment differs little from that of the lilacs. As the flowers start to expand, give them protection from the direct rays of the sun and be careful never to allow them to become dry. One drying out will completely spoil the flowers.

Acacias.

Acacia paradoxa, or A. armata, as it is commonly called, merely requires a cool house to flower it for Easter; 45 degrees at night from this time on will suffice. None of the acacias will tolerate forcing. It is also a mistake to get such varieties as A. armata in flower before Easter, unless there are special calls for it, as the little, circular, pale yellow flowers soon turn brown and, when once they have turned this shade, it is quite a task to pick them over and make them salable. Acacias are among the most beautiful of Easter plants. Particularly charming is the graceful A. pubescens, while heterophylla, Drummondii, Riceana and others are all lovely.

Amaryllis.

As the amaryllis spikes advance, some liquid manure may advantageously be given to the plants, using it in moderate doses only, at intervals of four or five days. Amaryllis, when either growing or developing their flower spikes, enjoy a little bottom heat and always seem to thrive better where they can be plunged in leaves, cocoanut fiber or some other material. In the case of seedlings that are flowering for the first time, it is not good policy to allow more than one spike to develop. The bulbs frequently throw two spikes, the flowering of which would be a severe strain upon them. Leave a single spike and the flowers will be of much finer quality. Where the spikes are to be cut, it is better to do this before the first flower becomes fully expanded. Amaryllis are not easily packed without damage to the flowers, when fully opened. Seedlings sown early in the year should be potted off singly into 2½-inch pots when they show their second leaves. Use a light compost, containing two-thirds leaf-mold, at the first potting.

Show Pelargoniums.

Show pelargoniums should, where required, now receive their final potting. Use a compost containing two-thirds fibrous loam, one-third dry cow manure, also a dash each of sand and fine bone. Drain the pots efficiently and pot firmly, leaving a good margin for water. Continue to grow the plants cool and airy and they will pay for it when they flower; 45 degrees is as high a night temperature as they need. Of course, they can be grown warmer, but are never so good. Green aphid is the arch enemy of the show pelargonium and must never be allowed even to show itself. We often see batches of these beautiful plants simply alive with aphid. The growers then give them a heavy smoking, which is likely to remove the pests and flowers at the same time. Fumigate often in light doses. Keep the plants spread out and as light as possible, and on warm days give them a syringing. If they are treated thus, you will get nice, stocky plants, which will be creditable to you and satisfactory to your customers.

Stevias.

Of course you remembered to save a few old plants of stevia. If not, get some cuttings at once and place them in the cutting bench. There is, of course, still ample time in which to propagate them, but you can throw away the old plants when your cuttings are in, and get all the additional cuttings you will need from them. The stevia is an old-fashioned flower, perhaps, and one which can be grown easily and inexpensively. It remains, nevertheless, one of the most useful of winter flowers, and no florist who has any local trade or design work can afford to be without it.

Gardenias.

Gardenia cuttings put in after Christmas should be well rooted and potted off before now. Use a moderately heavy loam for them and give small shifts at a time. A prime cause of the yellows, so often seen, is overpotting and overwatering. In benches the trouble is even more general than in the case of pot plants. Any growing in pots should be fed with chemical fertilizers, such as Clay's or Bon Arbor, in preference to liquid manure. It is the same with benches. If the soil is shallow and porous, there is little danger of their getting sour at the root. Judicious top-dressings from this time on will keep a veritable network of active roots on the surface. The spray nozzle must be used twice a week to keep down mealy bug. Avoid drenching syringings directly out of the open hose. This soddens the soil and does more harm than good. Plants intended for late winter and early spring flowering will now be carrying a heavy crop of buds. There is now little danger of these falling. Chilly and too damp root conditions will, however, cause them to fall in showers.

Geraniums

PROPAGATING GERANIUMS.

My place is heated with a hot water system and the pipes are all under the benches. Under ordinary conditions how long does it take a geranium cutting, put in a 2-inch pot, to root and be in a good condition to sell? How many stock plants should a person have to provide cuttings for a bench that will hold 10,000 2-inch pots, and keep it full? I have a good market, so can move them as soon as they have nice roots. Are stock plants best grown outside or under glass in benches, or in pots? If in pots, what size? Also state what treatment I should give them through the summer. G. L. E.

Under ordinary conditions geranium cuttings in 2-inch pots will make roots within four weeks and be fit to sell in six to seven weeks. They should have a little bottom heat; 60 degrees is sufficient, with a night temperature of 50 to 55 degrees, and they should receive full sun all the time.

Some specialists make extravagant claims about the quantity of cuttings they can secure from a single stock plant. Much, of course, depends on the kind of stock plant, its size and whether bench or pot grown. If you can spare bench room it is better to plant them out in four inches of soil. Then, again, some geraniums produce many more cuttings than others. I should say you would need 500 to 1,000 stock plants; the smaller number would suffice if they were strong and in a sunny house.

Plants grown under glass all the time are decidedly the best, but if you need the bench space in summer for other purposes you can grow in 7-inch or 8-inch pots outdoors, plunging them to the brims in a bed of ashes. I would, however, much prefer indoor culture all the time. Cuttings produced under glass are harder and less liable to damp off than those taken from outdoor plants.

If you are intending to start in the business another fall, I would recommend planting a bench with young plants about the time your bedding-out would be finishing. Use fibrous loam, fine bone and some well-spent old manure. Too much animal manure produces a soft, sappy growth. When propagating time arrives in early fall, you would have a splendid lot of cuttings ready. The plants would need no sun, but should have plenty of air. It is also better not to water as freely as you would chrysanthemums or carnations. C. W.

JACKSON DAWSON.

Jackson T. Dawson, who January 7 was awarded the George R. White medal of honor for eminent services in horticulture, has for a long term of years been one of the best known horticulturists in New England. He is also well known all over the United States, as well as in Europe. He was born at York, England, in 1841. He came while a child to the United States and at the tender age of 8 years worked in the nurseries of an uncle at Andover, Mass. A few years later he went to Hovey's then noted establishment at Cambridge, from which many new things were introduced. The Civil war found our friend fighting for the Union. He was twice wounded and has a leg which still reminds him of that terrible conflict. Even during the war he took an interest in the trees of the south, and sent many packages of seed home to Massachusetts.

Mr. Dawson became well known to a large part of the public when it was stated that he had found a good sized colony of the real Scotch heather growing wild. In 1871 he was offered a position under Francis Parkman, of the horticultural department of the Bussey Institution. In 1873 Prof. C. S. Sargent took the place of Mr. Parkman, and a little later assumed the directorship of the Harvard Botanic Gardens. Mr. Dawson supplied him with many plants and thus familiarized himself with plants from all parts of the world. He became specially interested in the wild roses of Japan and started to hybridize them, obtaining as a result of his crosses such varieties as Dawson, the first of the rambler type raised; William C. Egan, Lady Duncan; Farquhar, a popular variety; Arnoldiana Sargent and others.

As a result of twenty-five years or more of labor the Arnold Arboretum has become one of the Meccas for all tree lovers in the New World, and every European arboriculturist makes it his shrine. Here are gathered together, from all parts of the globe, all trees and shrubs which will withstand the winters of New England. All trees and plants in the Arboretum have, with few exceptions, been planted by Mr. Dawson.

As a propagator he stands without a peer. He first showed nurserymen how to graft conifers. He was first to raise rhododendron seedlings in quantity under improved methods. Of these latter he now has some 20,000 in sixty varieties from China, introductions of E. H. Wilson's. He has grafted many hardwooded trees, such as oaks, chestnuts, hickories, maples, etc. In an interview he said: "Eternal vigilance has been the secret of the success which has come to me. All the oaks, elms, ashes, catalpas, birches, beeches, conifers, junipers and the rest of the thousand and one varieties and species of trees and shrubs which we have here have been under my eye all the time through these years. In one year I collected 50,000 native shrubs to plant in the Arboretum. I also collected all the laurels and yews."

Prof. C. S. Sargent said: "Jackson Dawson seems to be able to look at a plant and tell you what its affinities are—that is, what it may be grafted upon. He is a real wizard in this line. He seems to know the art of grafting by intuition, what stock to use, in what condition to use it, and how to use it.

Jackson Dawson.

This knowledge and skill he has acquired by patient practice and by loving the things with which he works. Plants seem to respond to affection and he has that affection in large measure. In addition to the great numbers of trees and shrubs he has raised here, no one can tell how many hundreds of thousands he has sent to every part of the United States and to all the countries of Europe."

Mr. Dawson is a member of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society and has won many medals at its shows for his novelties. He is one of the original charter members of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, serving on the executive committee in 1888, as vice-president in 1892 and president in 1893. His youngest son, Henry, operates the Eastern Nurseries; an elder son, J. Frederick, is a member of the firm of Olmsted Bros., the noted landscape architects; one son, Charles J., who for some years was in the nursery business and also secretary of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, is deceased. Two daughters, Mrs. Harold Blossom and Miss Laura Dawson, are living.

Many visitors to the coming national show will remember Jackson Dawson well, and no doubt many of them will embrace the opportunity to see the Arnold Arboretum, which is beautiful even when vegetation is dormant. Mr. Dawson is 70 years of age, but few days elapse when he is not to be seen at his accustomed stand, caring for his thousands of seedling trees and shrubs, many of which will some years hence make wonderful additions to our gardens.

FINE THINGS NOTED BY KNIGHT.

One of the choicest collections of twelve hybrid cypripediums ever exhibited was staged by Mr. McKenzie, head gardener for E. B. Dane, at the spring Boston show last week. It consisted of some of the finest crosses and several of them exhibited for the first time in the United States. The names follow: Cypripedium aureum Virginale x Actæus; Cypripedium x aureum candida, a most beautiful type of light colored C. aureum; Cypripedium Leonidas magnificum, one of the darkest of Lathamianum types; Cypripedium Venus (insigne Sanderæ x niveum), carried two superb flowers, perfect creamy white; Cypripedium aureum Rex had five splendid, well-developed flowers, the best type I ever saw; Cypripedium aureum Hyea-num, a large, bold flower, choice and scarce; Cypripedium Gay Gordon, exhibited for the first time in the United States, a cross between Thompsonianum magnificum and Lady Wimburne, the most magnificent hybrid I have ever admired; Cypripedium signatum carried seven magnificent flowers; Cypripedium Thompsonianum and Cypripedium Lady Wimburne completed this excellent group.

What is acknowledged to be the largest specimen of Cymbidium Tracyanum in the world was exhibited by Mr. Harvey, head gardener to Mr. Leeson, carrying fifteen spikes of perfect flowers, averaging twelve flowers to a spike.

Dendrobium nobile Virginalis was in perfect form and its pure white flowers were admired. Thousands of people inspected these groups with great interest, denoting that orchids are to become universal favorites. The latter was exhibited by W. C. Rust, gardener to Dr. C. G. Weld. Thomas Knight.

FUMIGATION OF VIOLETS.

What effect would too much fumigating with tobacco dust have on Marie Louise violets? H. W. & S. W. A.

Too much fumigating will hurt almost any plants, violets being no exception to the rule. The effect on Marie Louise violets would be to cause a browning of the edges of the foliage and a bleaching of the color of the flowers. Many of the large commercial growers now use hydrocyanic acid gas for fumigation, but this must be used with extreme caution. A safe method is to use one of the tobacco papers, which will injure neither foliage nor flowers and leave no unpleasant odor behind them. C. W.

THE BEST VIOLETS.

I have been growing violets for a number of years, and thought of planting new stock the coming season. Is Princess of Wales better than California? I see the former is recommended as a good violet. I have the California, but think that I should have new stock, as I have had the same plants for nine years. Is Lady Hume Campbell subject to leaf-spot, like Marie Louise? J. F. J.

Princess of Wales is a much superior violet to California. The latter has been discarded for some years by most of the big specialists. You can obtain young plants of this finest of all single violets from many advertisers in The Review a little later. If you once try it you will want no more California. All the single violets should be left out until they have had a few degrees of frost.

Lady Hume Campbell is sometimes attacked by leaf-spot, but not so badly as Marie Louise. Many who failed with Marie Louise have good success with Campbell. The latter is of a paler color, however, than Marie Louise. My own opinion is that, for those who can grow it, there is no double violet which yet equals the old Marie Louise. C. W.

PROPAGATION OF PETUNIAS.

Will you tell me what is the trouble with my double petunias? When I make cuttings the old plant generally dies. The cuttings root well, but as soon as I cut again over one-half die. What temperature do they like? Do they want shade or plenty of light? I give them all the sun I can and plenty of water. J. J. K.

Petunias root well in a bottom heat of 60 degrees, with a top heat of 50 to 52 degrees. Any cutting bench suitable for carnations or chrysanthemums will answer equally well for petunias. A warm propagating bench, such as is necessary for coleus or alternantheras, is unsuitable for petunias. Shade until rooted and for a few days after potting, until they become established; then give full sun and a temperature of 50 degrees at night. Many of the cuttings on old petunias are blind. They can be rooted, but, like yellow marguerites, which often act similarly, they will never produce any growths, and if the tops are cut off that ends them. Before doing any propagating, it is a good plan to head back the plants somewhat and thus induce a crop of soft, succulent cuttings, which are more likely to give satisfaction. C. W.

THE IRRIGATOR FLOWER POT.

William Whitney Lewis, an architect in Boston, Mass., has invented and patented a self-watering flower pot which is extremely simple in its construction and yet is so peculiar in some of its details as to challenge attention, if not approval.

The invention is called the Joy-O Irrigator Flower Pot. As the illustration shows, it consists of a pot within a pot, and the interesting peculiarity of the inner pot is that the bottom of it is not perforated, as in common flower pots, but is made of a porous quality of clay, while the rest of the pot is thoroughly waterproof.

"This inner, or plant-holding pot," Mr. Lewis says, "is made of the ordinary clay or any material suitably porous, but this pot is imperforate, and more or less of the walls of the pot are waterproofed on the exterior surfaces. The pot is enclosed in a reservoir of any material impermeable by water, and the water is supplied to the plant by soaking through the porous portion of the plant pot, the porous surface being, on the average, restricted to the bottom of the pot. Water also rises, by capillary attraction, in the body of the upright walls of the pot, and is given off to the soil. One filling of the reservoir will water the plant for from eight to fifteen days, the length of time depending on the temperature, humidity of the atmosphere, etc. The surface of the soil in the pot is never caked over, but is always porous enough to admit air to the soil. The soil is not washed away from around the stem or roots of the plant, as in the usual methods of watering, and the plant receives a constant and sufficient supply of water without flooding of the roots. In the case of plants requiring much fertilizer, the lower portion of the pot may, previous to filling with soil, be packed to a reasonable depth with sheep manure or other fertilizer, which is slowly dissolved by the percolating water and carried to the plants."

Conservative advocates of the different sorts of self-watering devices generally argue that these inventions, even if not always useful to a practical, expert florist, may be helpful, nevertheless, to many of that same florist's customers, since the customers' methods of culture are less skillful than those of the florist, and more in need of mechanical aid. A contrivance, it is maintained, that does not add anything to the success of an adept may greatly increase the success of an amateur. The action of a self-watering flower pot, even if not absolutely perfect, may easily approach nearer to perfection than the action—or inaction—of many unprofessional growers. And the conclusion of the argument is, that self-watering flower pots and the like may be excellent articles, therefore, for florists to keep in stock and sell to their patrons.

In support of this opinion, mention might be made of the Illinois Heater & Mfg. Co., of Chicago, whose self-watering flower boxes have been extensively sold by florists. There is a good demand, too, for the metal reservoir vases, which also embody the self-watering principle and are intended for use on lawns, and in parks, cemeteries, etc.

The inventor of the Irrigator Flower Pot, in describing his own experience with it, says again: "When the idea is first broached to those interested in flower growing, I am told that the plan is impractical for many reasons, but meanwhile the plants obstinately continue to grow and flourish as we never before have had them do in the house. In fact, our previous want of success is what led my attention to the subject of the self-watering pot."

As to the future possibilities that are involved in his invention, Mr. Lewis has this to say: "My patent covers the adaptation of the idea to window boxes, tubs for large plants, etc., and is by no means confined to the ordinary flower pot. I hope to induce florists to adopt a modification of the idea by which it would be possible to automatically replenish the water supply for an indefinite number of pots, so that the water would be supplied the year around with absolutely no work or attention on the part of the florist or his assistants. This would be a money-saving device that should be of great value in large conservatories."

GOOD VARIETIES OF ASTERS.

What are the best varieties of asters for outdoor growing, and when should the seed be sown? What is the probable number of plants to each ounce of seed? K. W.

The varieties of asters are quite numerous. A few good sorts are: Dawn of Day, double white, the earliest of all to flower; Queen of the Market, procurable in a number of shades, early, of strong branching habit, free flowering; American Branching, robust, large flowers, for late crops; Semple's and Vick's are excellent, vigorous strains for main or late crops; improved Victoria, Crego of Comet type and peony flowered are other good varieties; Early Wonder, procurable in pink and white, flowers outdoors early in July and is a valuable early sort. For early flowering sow seeds under glass in March. Later sowings can be made at fortnightly intervals, and during May the seed can be sown outdoors. The latest sowing should go in the first week in June. If restricted to three varieties, grow Queen of the Market, American Branching and Victoria.

The number of plants an ounce of seed will produce depends on the quality of seed and its treatment after sowing. If of good quality and intelligently sown, an ounce should give 4,000 to 5,000 plants. In purchasing seed always secure the best; cheap aster seed will only give disappointment. Select a sunny piece of ground for your plants. Manure it liberally. Asters naturally thrive best in a heavy loam, but will grow in almost any soil which is well enriched if they are kept thoroughly cultivated while growing.

MANDA'S POLYPODIUM.

Polypodium Mandaianum came into the limelight at the national flower show, where it defeated two first-class nephrolepis sports for the award as best new fern and later captured the gold medal offered for the best plant not then an article of commerce. The accompanying illustration shows a house of it at W. A. Manda's, South Orange, N. J.

Polypodium Mandaianum originated at South Orange as a seedling from Polypodium aureum glaucum. It is a free grower under the ordinary treatment given ferns, with a temperature of 60 degrees to 75 degrees. It can be grown in pots, or as a basket fern, or on boards, like a staghorn fern. The fronds grow up to three feet in length and become beautifully fringed, a peculiar glaucous blue in color.

At the national flower show it was said, perhaps as a joke, that possibly the judges made their award to this new polypodium as a means of gracefully sidestepping the unwelcome task of choosing between two fine nephrolepises, but there can be no question that public and private conservatories all will want Polypodium Mandaianum as soon as they find out about it.

NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW.

Arrangements are well under way for the national flower show, to be held in Boston March 25 to April 1. The space both for competitive and trade exhibits is being rapidly taken, and from present indications it will be the largest affair ever seen in connection with the florists' trade. The final schedules have been printed and sent to all the members of the different societies under the auspices of which the exposition is held. Manager Chester I. Campbell has had designed attractive art advertising cards for the exposition and these will shortly be sent to all the larger cities in the country. An advertising sticker for stationery has also been arranged for and these also will be sent to all the exhibitors and members of the society. Manager Campbell has had long experience in the exposition business and realizes fully the importance of such advertising. Among the many expositions of which he has charge are the Boston automobile show, the national motor boat and engine show, the style show, office appliance, textile machinery, electric, exhibition of aerial craft, and he will also guide the destinies of the great Boston Chamber of Commerce industrial and educational exhibition, which will be held next October.

Every mail is now bringing in applications for space from those who intend making what may be classed as show exhibits. A number of Boston florists, while not entering in the competitive classes, intend offering novelties in artistic decorative effects, and it may safely be predicted this exposition will long be remembered as portraying the acme of floriculture.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

Convention Program.

At a meeting held in New York city last week a program was mapped out for the general meeting at Boston this month. The general business meeting will be held Monday, March 27, at 2:30 p. m. It is planned to have August F. Poehlmann and Wallace R. Pierson present two fine papers. Tuesday morning election of officers and a general discussion on new roses will take place. Tuesday at 2:30 p. m. a meeting, designated by President Elliott as the amateurs' meeting, will be held, with papers by Richard Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, Md., on what he saw in Belgium; by Rev. Dr. Spencer S. Sulliger, of Vancouver, Wash., on his visit to the national rose show in London, England; by William G. McKendrick, the man whose aim is to make Toronto beautiful, an amateur rose grower of extensive experience.

Department of Registration.

A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., files the following described new roses for registration:

Double White Killarney, a sport of White Killarney, originating with the J. A. Budlong & Son Co., Auburn, R. I., in January, 1910. It is stronger in growth than the parent, with the same general characteristics of foliage and growth. The flower is pure white in color, with an average of from forty to forty-five petals. It is a wonderful improvement over the parent, having size and substance in summer, when White Killarney is comparatively single. The variety will be disseminated by A. N. Pierson, Inc., in 1912.

Killarney Queen, a deep pink sport of Killarney, originating with the J. A. Budlong & Son Co., Auburn, R. I., in 1909, that has the high color of Dark Pink Killarney with an increased vigor in growth. It compares among Killarneys as American Beauty does with other varieties, the stem and foliage being much heavier and the petals nearly twice the size of the petals of Killarney. The variety will be disseminated by A. N. Pierson, Inc., in 1912.

I., in 1909, that has the high color of Dark Pink Killarney with an increased vigor in growth. It compares among Killarneys as American Beauty does with other varieties, the stem and foliage being much heavier and the petals nearly twice the size of the petals of Killarney. The variety will be disseminated by A. N. Pierson, Inc., in 1912.

OUTDOOR CULTURE OF DAHLIAS.

Kindly give me the treatment of the dahlia, commencing with the large dormant roots that have been wintered in a frost-proof cellar. Having no glass to start them under, I should like to know the course to pursue to achieve the best results as regards the production of flowers. H. H.

Dahlias want a sunny spot in which to grow and flower. The soil should be well manured and deeply plowed or spaded. If the soil is heavy, use some loose, gritty material, such as sand, fine coal ashes or road scrapings, to make it freer. For best results, do not plant your roots until the middle of May or the first part of June. Cut up the roots with a sharp knife, leaving a single eye to each division. Cover the roots five to six inches. Lay them flat with the crown point upward. A distance of thirty to thirty-six inches between the plants gives space for their proper development, but if you intend growing a quantity under field culture, eighteen to twenty-four inches in the rows will suffice. If you plan to support your plants, drive the stakes in position before setting out your roots. Allow four to five feet between the rows. If you do not propose to stake the plants—but we would advise you to do so if you are only growing a few dozens or hundreds—pinch the top out of the young shoot when it appears and has made two or three pairs of leaves. This will make the plants dwarfer and stockier. Cultivate the plants freely from the time they commence to grow. C. W.

MILE-A-MINUTE VINE.

A recent issue of The Review contained the following inquiry, signed by G. H. P.: "I should like to know the botanical name of a vine that is used around Wilkesburg, Pa., for porches. It has a leaf like the oak, about one and one-fourth inches wide. They call it Mile-a-minute, but I have never seen it advertised by that name."

The following reply to this query has just been received from William M. Turner, who, like G. H. P., is also a resident of Wilkesburg, Pa.: "The only name, other than Mile-a-Minute, that I have heard used for it is Pilogyne suavis. It is a rapid grower and a beautiful vine, with small, white, star-shaped, fragrant flowers. I have never seen it grown anywhere but in this section, but have had inquiries concerning it from many different states. The Review's columns are certainly the right place in which to ask questions, if you want to find out anything."

Mr. Turner's brief description of the vine agrees well, as far as it goes, with the description of Pilogyne suavis which is given in the botanical dictionaries, and thus the correctness of Mr. Turner's identification of the vine seems to be confirmed. The rapid growth of Pilogyne suavis would also make it appear not unlikely that the name Mile-a-Minute might be popularly or locally applied to it.

Pilogyne suavis, by the way, also has at least two other botanical names. Bailey's "Cyclopedia of American Horticulture" says of it: "Melothria punctata is a beautiful climbing herbaceous perennial, better known as Pilogyne suavis and sometimes called Zehneria suavis. Even when protected, it is too tender to stand the northern winters. It blooms in clusters; flowers, small, white and star-shaped, with a strong musk fragrance; leaves, green, small and glossy. Being a very rapid grower, it is desirable for covering verandas or for house culture. It will do well in any part of a living room where it has light. It will grow as much as sixteen feet high in one summer by having a liberal supply of water every day and liquid manure once a week. After growing outdoors it can be cut down to six inches, potted and taken into the house for the winter. In the spring it can be cut back, again planted out and it will do well. The roots can almost be called tuberous, and can be kept dormant during the winter, the same as dahlias, buried in sand in a cool, dry place, free from frost. Rapidly increased by cuttings."

The opinion of Mr. Turner with reference to the name of the vine in question is further supported by a letter, just come to hand, from N. E. Beck, of Massillon, O. Mr. Beck says: "I notice, in The Review of January 26, that G. H. P. wants to know the name of a vine which is called in his locality Mile-a-Minute vine, and which has a leaf like that of the oak. I think this must be Pilogyne suavis. We have been growing this for some time and it is the most rapid growing vine we know of. The foliage resembles that of the oak, and it blooms through the summer and fall until cut down by the frost. The flowers are small, pure white, literally cover the vines and are particularly fragrant. We propagate it by taking cuttings in the fall before frost and keep it in the house through the winter. Four-inch plants planted in May, about three feet apart, will cover a large space in a short time. This vine is preferred by many to hardy vines on account of not covering the wood-work in the winter and holding the moisture."

TORONTO.

The Market.

Trade has been normal and stock coming in quite plentifully. The sun has made its presence felt, and on several days last week stock was rushed on the market. Daffodils are a glut. Roses are coming in good. Violets are plentiful and of exceptionally good quality. Beauties are scarce. Sweet peas are also on the short side, but some of the stores have a few fine ones. Lilacs of excellent quality are coming in, both cut and on the plant. Prices are ruling good. The T. Eaton Co. and the S. H. Knox Co. are holding cheap sales of daffodils, carnations and violets. Violets sell at 15 cents a bunch, daffodils 15 cents a dozen, and carnations 30 cents. The quality is poor, however.

Various Notes.

J. H. Dunlop recently was taken ill with appendicitis while on a business trip to Barrie, Ont. He was brought to Toronto and operated on, with gratifying success. He is at present in the General Hospital and is recovering as rapidly as can be expected.

Recent visitors in town were S. H. Waller, of Zanesville, O.; Robert Greenlaw, of the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co.,

Philadelphia, and the representative of the Roseville Pottery Co., of Zanesville.

Geo. Werley, formerly of J. H. Dunlop's, has accepted the management of a retail store in Calgary.

Miller Bros. and F. H. Lawrence both report a good wholesale business.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Clearer skies and somewhat more spring-like weather have been our lot in the closing week of February, a month which has proved unusually cool and has caused a heavy drain on the coal pile. Supplies are more abundant all around and there is a general decline in prices. Roses average a drop of 2 cents to 3 cents. The short-stemmed flowers, which were making 6 cents, are now down to 3 cents. The decline is less pronounced on the better grade flowers. Beauties are arriving of excellent quality and Richmonds show a great improvement. Mrs. Aaron Ward continues in favor, while Killarney and White Killarney continue the prime favorites. Carnations are seen in much greater abundance and the quality continues of the best. Violets are of superb quality, especially the singles. The quantity of these arriving is now immense. The best average 50 cents per hundred, many going lower. Sweet peas are steadily improving and long-stemmed flowers are plentiful. Prices are as variable as the quality—50¢ for $1 in some cases, and 75 cents to $1 per hundred for select flowers. Popular sorts are Christmas Pink, Mrs. Wallace, Mrs. Sim, Greenbrook and Florence Denzer.

The warmer weather has brought in an avalanche of Dutch bulbous flowers and these have taken a sharp drop in price. The quality remains uniformly good. Lilium longiflorum is overplentiful and lower in price. L. speciosum is not selling well. Mignonette is plentiful, but of poorer quality. Callas are excellent. Valley has been rather druggish. The quality is a great deal better than it was a month ago. Gardenias are in heavier supply and the crop of Cattleya Trianae is still ample for all demands. Celogyne cristata is now seen in many of the stores, also a variety of dendrobiums. Green goods continue in good demand. Pot plant trade is picking up nicely. Rambler roses in variety are getting to be quite a feature in many stores, also acacias and ericas.

Midwinter Flower Show.

Owing to the near approach of the national show, the midwinter exhibition of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, February 24 to 26, was much smaller than usual, most of the regular exhibitors holding back their plants for the later show. Still there were some interesting and meritorious exhibits. Particularly noteworthy was the beautiful collection of hard-wooded plants from George Page, gardener to Mrs. Frederick Ayer, which included splendid flowered plants of Erica melanthera, E. Mediterranea, E. Caffra densa, Acacia verticillata, A. Drummondii, A. longifolia and A. heterophylla. For a grand specimen of Erica melanthera a cultural certificate was awarded. Winthrop Ames, Daniel Whyte head gardener, had the best specimens of Primula Kewensis and P. obconica, taking first and third for the former and first and second for the latter, other prizes going to Mrs. F. Ayer and Mrs. J. L. Gardner, William Thatcher gardener. In the cyclamen classes William Whitman, M. Sullivan gardener, Mrs. J. L. Gardner and Mrs. F. Ayer were the winners. Mr. Sullivan almost swept the deck in the various bulb classes, including a silver medal and first prize for the best group of miscellaneous bulbs arranged for effect. Some excellent bulbs from amateurs were staged by Miss Margaret Rand and Henry L. Rand.

A. W. Preston, John L. Smith gardener, had a fine bank of cinerarias, schizanthus, acacias, primulas, genistas and bulbous plants; Mrs. J. L. Gardner, specimen cinerarias; William Whitman, a table of primulas; Mrs. E. M. Gill, a fine general display, and William Sim, a splendid table of single violets and sweet peas. The latter were of superb quality and included Wallace, Greenbrook, Christmas Pink, Florence Denzer and Mrs. W. W. Smalley. E. B. Dane, Donald McKenzie gardener, had some fine cypripediums. Certificates of merit were awarded to C. Maudie magnificum and C. Venus (insigne Sanderæ x niveum). Dr. C. G. Weld, W. C. Rust gardener, had the best specimen orchid, showing Dendrobium nobile virginale; second, J. T. Butterworth, with Cattleya Trianæ. W. P. Harvey, gardener to J. R. Leeson, received a silver medal for superior culture of Cymbidium Tracyanum, a superb plant in a tub, carrying fifteen spikes. The carnation and rose men made no response to the prizes and medals offered, with the exception of Eber Holmes, who had a fine vase of Richmond roses. W. A. Manda had a large display of Cattleya Trianæ, including many good types.

Club Banquet.

There was an attendance of about 300 at the annual club banquet in Horticultural hall, February 28. The tables were beautifully decorated with roses, carnations, sweet peas and other flowers, also flowering plants in pots. C. C. Whittemore catered in his usual efficient manner, the menu being the best he has ever served. At the postprandial exercises W. J. Stewart officiated as toastmaster and the speakers included Alderman Walter Ballantyne, acting mayor of Boston, who spoke felicitously for the city of Boston. Peter Fisher responded for the florists; W. N. Craig for the private gardeners, and C. W. Parker for the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. P. M. Miller also spoke. Miss Eisenhardt played zither. Neill Miller sang bass solos. Mrs. McKeon and John Miller sang duets. Miss Connelly proved an excellent elocutionist and the Misses Nellie and Jeannie Irvine made a great hit with their dances. Miss J. S. Rifford officiated ably at the piano. After the speechmaking the floor was cleared and dancing enjoyed until after midnight, music being furnished by Hutchins' orchestra, nearly all present joining in the grand march and circle.

William McGillivray, as floor director, was in his right place. John Reid was assistant floor director, while James L. Miller, W. J. Patterson, Edward Rose and Kenneth Finlayson acted as aids. The reception committee consisted of P. J. Turley, chairman; Duncan Finlayson, Frank Murray, W. A. Hastings, P. J. Van Baarda, W. D. Nickerson, Eber Holmes and George W. Butterworth.

SEEDS CUM CUNE

Various Notes.

At H. R. Comley's, on Park street, last week I noted some good waxy ericas, rambler roses in variety, white Lælia anceps, Strelitzia Regina and a fine vase of John Barr's new white variegated carnation, Mrs. B. P. Cheney.

Prof. E. A. White, of Amherst, with a number of floricultural students, spent two days in Boston and vicinity last week, visiting the leading growers, retailers and the wholesale flower markets.

W. B. Goodenow, of Stoughton, states that double violets with him are blooming less freely than usual. He picks 30,000 a week, against 50,000 a year ago. He will follow the violets with tomatoes.

William Sim has one of his large sweet pea houses in full crop and will have two others in before the national show.

Many of the largest single violet specialists who grow for our market are in and around Woburn. Among these J. H. Newman is one of the best. He has 30,000 plants and his average daily pick is 20,000, which are all contracted for at the retail stores.

The Exeter Rose Conservatories, of Exeter, N. H., are excellent growers of Chatenay roses and they have a nice coppery yellow sport from it. Their Richmond and Killarney are also fine.

David Duncan, of Arlington, has an extra good variety of bulb stock, both cut and in pans, which finds a ready sale at the Boston Coöperative Market.

Paine Bros., of Randolph, among bulb specialties have fine Victoria and Sir Watkin narcissi and Couronne d'Or tulips, which sell much better than the single Thomas Moore. Murillo is a good seller, also King of the Yellows. In sweet peas they have F. J. Dolansky, Christmas Pink, Mrs. Wallace and Florence Denzer.

Thomas Roland, of Nahant, has a magnificent lot of acacias, ericas and other hard-wooded plants coming on for the national show, which will prove something of a revelation to many of the visitors.

Visitors last week included Maurice Fuld, representing H. F. Michell Co., Philadelphia; George W. Strange, representing W. A. Manda, and Thomas Head, of Stumpp & Walter's.

Sidney Hoffman is showing some beautiful acacias, ericas, genistas, rambler roses and other pot plants at his big Massachusetts avenue store. He has his Mount Auburn greenhouses filled to repletion with stock coming on for Easter. The new store in the financial district continues to prosper.

W. N. Craig.

William F. Aylward, C Park street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy. His liabilities amount to $4,077, assets $600.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

A terrific blizzard, the worst of the season, struck Buffalo on Valentine's day and lasted throughout the day. Traffic was held up and delivery was hard. From reports and from appearances at the commission house, business was exceptionally good and everything was cleaned up early. Violets were the leader and brought from 75 cents to $1. Everything sold well; in fact, the totals showed a large increase over former years. Stock for funeral work took a jump in price, and an abundance of this sort of work cleaned up all the available white flowers for the last week. Roses are still a little scarce, as well as the light-colored carnations. The sale of bulb stock has surpassed all records this season, perhaps due to the fact that roses and carnations have been scarce. Lilies and valley have been scarce for the last three weeks.

There was a little brush for Washington's birthday, but it has just been steady since. Saturday sales make things brisk, but as a rule these are only one form of advertising and cannot be counted much for the pocket-book. The temperature makes rapid and decided changes, and when it does warm up it is quite pleasant. Saturday was an ideal day and violets were cleaned up early. Bulb stock came next, as it was offered cheap.

Various Notes.

A fire near the Anderson greenhouses, just noticed in time by the fireman and Joe Streit, averted a big loss to Mr. Anderson and the building adjoining. An alarm was sent in and promptly answered, and for the quick work which Mr. Streit and the other man did, the owner gave them each a $10 gold piece.

The Lenox Flower Shop had a fine decoration at Ithaca last week and the force was gone three days, preparing the work. Large plants and an abundance of cut stock were used.

The snowfall of last week was so heavy at Akron, N. Y., that its weight broke down the roofs of the houses at the establishment of Mrs. Newman. Considerable damage was done, as it was impossible to secure protection before the cold had penetrated to the stock. The loss was not estimated.

John Preisach, of Corfu, N. Y., is planning new greenhouses, to replace the ones he now occupies. Figures were submitted by the J. C. Moninger Co., of Chicago. The work will be begun as soon as the weather moderates. Mr. Preisach is rather a new-comer in Corfu and was employed by the William Scott Co. before starting on his own account. He has been quite successful, as is shown by his plans for rebuilding.

The Buffalo bowlers will visit Rochester March 8. It is the intention to have as many as possible go down and go early in the day, so as to have a look around before the games begin. It will be gratifying to the committee to have a good showing there, so kindly plan ahead and come along.

The Buffalo Florists' Club will hold its annual carnation meeting March 7. The raisers of new varieties have been invited to send along the good things.

Bowling.

The Rochester bowlers arrived without a hitch and were escorted to the Hofbrau, where a fine spread was arranged for their pleasure. After the dinner all visitors and members were taken to the bowling alleys and a lively and pleasant time followed. The games were more even than the scores indicate, and the bowlers and spectators enjoyed every minute of it. The five-man match resulted as follows:

Buffalo.	1st	2d	3d	Ave.
Neubeck	165	191	150	168
Streit	115	159	160	144
Kasting	175	156	153	161
Cloudsley	131	130	160	140
Sandiford	169	188	155	170
Total	783
Rochester.	1st	2d	3d	Ave.
Jenny	159	171	174	168
Phillips	166	159	138	154
C. Vick	127
F. Keller	137	148	137
P. Ham	105
M. Keller	143	130	126
A. Vick	134	134	143	137
Total	722

As the scores will show, Buffalo won all three games by a pretty good margin. The boys then played a two-man match against two Rochester men, Phillips and Jenny versus McClure and Wallace. This match the Buffalo boys also won. Then everyone enjoyed some more fried chicken and green peas. It was a pleasant meeting and one to be remembered. Eleven came from Rochester and about thirty turned out for Buffalo.

DAYTON, OHIO.

The Market.

The long looked for sunshine has at last graced us with its pleasant smiles, which are doing wonders everywhere. Crops are daily becoming more abundant, while trade keeps up at a lively gait, so that the demand is sufficient to consume the output. Stock of no kind has to go begging. While the supply of bulbous stock is quite heavy, none of it gets a glimpse of the ash barrel. Trade has kept up remarkably well in the last ten weeks, so that in many cases there has not been enough stock to go the rounds. As a general thing there is always a great deal of bulbous stock that does not find a customer, but such has not been the case this year.

It is surprising to note what a large quantity of funeral work has been continually coming in from all directions. Not in a long time has there been so great a demand so long continued. With the few days of sunshine great changes are noticed in the rose houses. The seemingly shy rosebuds are coming along in such condition that it is gratifying to the grower to make his rounds to cut in the morning. The same is true of the carnations. There are comparatively few callas grown; just enough to supply the demand. Longiflorum lilies seem to have come to the front and made callas take a back seat; the supply of these is always quite heavy, and the demand equal to the output.

Taking the weather conditions into consideration, business throughout the entire month of February could not have been better. Everybody appears to be more than satisfied with results. Valentine's day brought quite a demand for all kinds of stock, especially violets, valley, red carnations and roses, while the demand for flowers on Washington's birthday did its share to help along.

Various Notes.

Bernard Haschke and M. Anderson have been victims of the grip.

Mrs. Warren G. Matthews has been in the hospital for the last ten days, where she will have to undergo an operation.

Harry Garland and wife, of Des Plaines, Ill., included Dayton in their honeymoon trip and were guests at the home of George Bartholomew February 24. While there several of the employees of the Miami Floral Co. gave them a musical serenade on tin pans, etc. Mr. Garland showed himself equal to the occasion and bought the cigars for the crowd.

Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Jones, of Oriskany Falls, N. Y., who have been the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Bartholomew for the last fortnight, left February 27 for Buffalo, where they will spend a few days, thence to Rochester, and from there home.

D. Rusconi, of Cincinnati, and Mr. Schwake, representing the Chas. F. Meyer Co., New York, were in town last week.

Arno Hendrichs left last week for New Orleans to attend the Mardi Gras. While in that city he will be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. M. Cook.

M. D. Schmidt & Son had some large funeral orders last week.

Mrs. Elizabeth Young reports an exceedingly busy week. R. A. B.

OBITUARY.

John H. Taylor.

John Henry Taylor, one of the best known florists in the New York district, who returned from Europe in the best of health February 22, died suddenly of bronchitis and tonsillitis at the Hotel Martinique Saturday night, February 25.

Mr. Taylor was born in 1858, in New York city. When he was 3 years old his father moved to Bayside, L. I., and the family spent seven years there on an immense estate. Mr. Taylor went to Europe with his family in 1867 and spent ten years studying in Switzerland, Italy and Berlin, entering Harvard on his return. He was graduated in 1881 with the degree of bachelor of agricultural science, spent some time in Europe studying floriculture and became associated with his father when he returned, the two engaging in the nursery and florists' business. The elder Mr. Taylor died soon afterward, and John H. Taylor bought out the interests of the other heirs in the Oakland Tree Nursery at Bayside, of which his father had been the owner. Later he became one of the largest and most successful growers of roses and other flowers for the New York market. In 1883 Mr. Taylor married Miss Julia Armstrong. She died ten years ago, and five years later he married Miss Mary Stow, of New York. Mr. Taylor maintained the Oakland Nursery until about six years ago, when he sold it, the appreciation of the real estate values in the vicinity having given him a competence.

As the organizer and first president of the Oakland Golf Club, Mr. Taylor gave a part of his estate at Bayside, which was known as the Oaks, to the club to be used as part of the course. He was also one of the organizers of All Saints' Episcopal Church in Flushing. Besides, he was a member of the University, Lawyers', New York Florists', Niantic and New York Athletic clubs, Cornucopia Lodge, F. and A. M., and the New York Horticultural Society.

Mr. Taylor was a nephew of William Taylor, proprietor of the St. Denis Hotel, and a cousin of Charles Leigh Taylor, proprietor of the Hotel Martinique. He is survived by a widow and two children of his first wife, Mrs. Adele A. Manning and Reginald Taylor.

S. J. Galloway.

A report has just been received of the death of S. J. Galloway, well known in the trade as a grower of hardy herbaceous plants and perennials, at Eaton, O. The funeral services were held on Sunday afternoon, February 26.

Robert Rodden.

Robert Rodden, a florist in Newton Center, Mass., and a stallholder in the Boston Coöperative Flower Market, died suddenly from convulsions February 18. Mr. Rodden visited the flower market in Boston only two days before his death. He was, for a number of years before going into commercial floriculture, gardener on the Schlesinger estate in Brookline, Mass.

F. K. Phoenix.

Franklin Kelsey Phoenix, one of the pioneer nurserymen of the United States, died recently at his home in Delavan, Wis., at the age of 86 years. He was born in Perry, Genesee county, N. Y., in March, 1825. Twelve years later, in March, 1837, he removed with his parents to Wisconsin, and in the spring of 1842 he began his long career as a nurseryman at Delavan. In 1852 he founded a branch nursery at Bloomington, Ill. This new business received almost his entire attention for twenty-five years, was developed into a large establishment and was afterward conducted for a time by his son, F. S. Phoenix. In 1877 the elder Mr. Phoenix withdrew from the Bloomington business and, after four years of rest, resumed the management of the Delavan nursery, with which he continued his active connection until a few years before his death.

In 1850 he married Miss M. E. Topping, of Darien, Wis. Of their family of four sons and two daughters, only the second son, F. S., already mentioned, has taken special interest in horticultural pursuits.

Hopkinsville, Ky.—T. L. Metcalfe was painfully, though not seriously injured in a wreck on the Tennessee Central railroad, about one mile from Clarksville, Tenn., February 19. Though the coaches were destroyed by fire within seven minutes after the wreck took place, and though he was cut, bruised and stunned, he succeeded in rescuing three others from the flames before saving himself. Mr. Metcalfe has greenhouses at Madisonville, Ky.; Jackson, Tenn.; Clarksville, Tenn., and Springfield, Tenn., as well as in this city. He is also proprietor of the Hopkinsville Steam Laundry.

.....BUSINESS AND OTHER NOTES.....

Portland, Ore.—S. W. Walter is erecting a greenhouse at 1109 East Twenty-ninth street.

Dows, Ia.—Shaffer & Larson, proprietors of the Dows Greenhouses, are planning to erect another greenhouse in the coming spring.

Bridgeport, Conn.—James E. Beach has purchased property with a frontage of 100 feet on North avenue and adjoining his greenhouse property on Park avenue.

Stockbridge, Mass.—C. S. Mellen is having plans made for a large greenhouse which is to be erected during the coming summer at his country place, Council Grove.

Tarrytown, N. Y.—E. W. Neubrand, secretary of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society, announces that the fall show of the organization will be held October 31 to November 2.

Rochester, N. Y.—George J. Morgan, of 211 Lexington avenue, who formerly made a specialty of growing salvia, aster and petunia plants, has sold the business to David McGregor.

Edinburg, Ind.—Mrs. Thomas Woodward has been extremely busy this winter and she is planning to double the capacity of her place, so as to be able to meet the increasing demands of her trade.

Hillsdale, Mich.—Carl Hirsch, proprietor of Hillsdale Floral Park, recently submitted to a dangerous operation for appendicitis and double rupture. He believes he is now on the road to entire recovery.

Canton, O.—N. M. Bassinger, who several years ago was connected with the trade in Calla, O., has now made arrangements to engage in the bulb and plant business at 1339 Logan avenue, in this city.

Marshalltown, Ia.—I. O. Kemble has purchased four acres of ground known as the Louis Diesing property, near the end of North Third street, and expects to use it eventually for the extension of his business.

Joplin, Mo.—A friend of H. A. Hall, of this city, sends the following report: "January 26 was a sad day for Mr. Hall and his family. The boys were bringing the cow home after school—an everyday duty—and, knowing the cow to be gentle, they tied the rope around the youngest one's waist. The cow became frightened and dashed down the street at full speed, dragging the youngster to death."

Davenport, Ia.—James W. Davis, who has been successfully conducting the establishment formerly known as the Danacher greenhouses, on upper Brady street, finds that he is likely to be crowded out of that locality by the division of the property into city lots. He is therefore planning to erect a range of greenhouses elsewhere, probably at Bettendorf, near this city, though at last report he had not fully decided.

Port Huron, Mich.—Thomas Jowett has nearly completed his new greenhouse.

Smithtown Branch, N. Y.—E. G. Ludder announces the arrival of a "new and only daughter."

Los Angeles, Cal.—A local newspaper states that "a yellow poinsettia blossom, a freak that grew on an ordinary poinsettia plant, was recently presented to the chamber of commerce by E. A. De Camp, of 4504 Russell avenue."

Newport, Ky.—Anton Hummel has purchased the establishment formerly owned by the late H. D. Edwards, on Alexandria pike, near Fort Thomas. The place includes two greenhouses, close to St. Stephen's cemetery.

Danielson, Conn.—A recent fire on the property of W. J. Schoonman, the North street florist, caused a loss amounting to between $300 and $400, chiefly in the barn and its contents. The greenhouses were unharmed.

Albany, N. Y.—W. J. Roberts has resumed the personal management of his establishment at 259 First street, which has been leased to others since May, 1907. Prior to that date, Mr. Roberts had conducted the business for many years.

Gasport, N. Y.—White Bros. say the report that they had sold their greenhouses here is incorrect. The range is still in their possession and will be operated in connection with a new range that they expect to build this summer at Medina, N. Y.

Pittsfield, Mass.—Rudolph Mauersberger, who for the last four years has been gardener and florist at Stoneover, in Lenox, has leased the greenhouses and grounds connected with Miss Hall's school, on the Holmes road, and will engage in business for himself.

Bangor, Me.—Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Loder, who for many years were residents of Pittsfield, Me., have removed to this city, where Mr. Loder purchased the business of Carl Beers some months ago. It is understood, however, that Mr. Loder will continue to operate his range of greenhouses at Pittsfield.

Eldora, Ia.—James M. Pierce, owner of the Iowa Homestead and one of the proprietors of the J. S. Pollard Floral Co., has purchased seventeen acres of ground in the north part of the city and will build a handsome residence. The Pollard Co. recently completed the erection of a large range of greenhouses.

Saddle River, N. J.—John G. Esler, secretary of the Florists' Hail Association, whose injury in a street car collision was reported in a recent issue of The Review, made the trip from New York hospital to his home February 21. He arrived without sustaining any added injury and is able to attend to office work with the aid of a pair of crutches. An auto ride home was an antidote to his hospital experience.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, '01.
 Officers for 1911: President, George Asmus,
 Chicago; vice-president, R. Vincent, Jr., White
 Marsh, Md.; secretary, H. B. Dorner, Urbana,
 Ill.; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.
 Special convention and National Flower Show,
 Boston, Mass., March 25 to April 1, 1911.
 Annual convention, Baltimore, Md., August 15
 to 18, 1911.

Results bring advertising.
 The Review brings results.

We are in Lent, but Lent in recent years has had little effect on the flower business.

SUNSHINE has come again—and cut flowers are no longer at all scarce. The condition is general all over the country.

MANUFACTURERS of greenhouse building material report requests for estimates coming in at a quite unprecedented rate, probably as a result of the low price of glass.

WESTERN growers are receiving a great many inquiries for carnation cuttings from the east, indicating scarcity there, for buyers ordinarily look for stock near home.

NOT a few subscribers save themselves
 the bother of annual renewal by sending
 The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

THE National Flower Show committee, under date of February 22, sent out a call for the payment of eighty per cent of the guarantee fund, twenty per cent having previously been called.

THE complete schedule for the National Flower Show, Boston, March 25 to April 1, has been issued in pamphlet form. Copies may be had by addressing Chester I. Campbell, superintendent, 5 Park Square, Boston, Mass.

THE telegraph companies now send a "day letter" of fifty words at half again as much as the charge for the popular night letter. Transmission is at the company's convenience, full rate messages having precedence.

THE florists in the towns where work has begun on the fall shows are getting the benefit of a great deal of publicity in their local newspapers. Columbus, O., and Rochester, N. Y., are doing specially well on the publicity feature.

REDUCED rates to the National Flower Show have now been granted from as far west as Buffalo. The Central Passenger Association has a meeting March 8 at which it is hoped the special fares will be made effective from the Mississippi river and eastward.

BURNING TOBACCO STEMS.

I wish to give others the benefit of my method of burning tobacco stems in my greenhouse. I had a tinner make me some galvanized pig troughs thirty inches long. I chop the stems into short pieces, so that they will lie close in the troughs. Then I set them in the aisles, filled with stems, and fire them at one end, using a little coal oil. They will burn from six to twelve hours, killing all insects that the fumes will kill, with the least injury to the flowers.

The iron should be cut nine inches wide, bent in the middle and turned down a half inch at the edges to stiffen it, with end pieces riveted on eight or ten inches long to hold the trough in position.

W. N. Tharp.

LICENSE TO SELL PLANTS.

The seed dealers throughout the country have been having quite a little trouble during the last few years with bills which propose to regulate the sale of seeds, but heretofore no legislature has been sufficiently foolhardy to undertake regulating the sale of geraniums, roses and other greenhouse plants, bulbs, etc. However, a bill just introduced by Senator Chapman in the Iowa legislature, if passed, would make it necessary not only for the florist to take out a $5 license, but he would be compelled to take out a duplicate license costing $1 additional for each employee, including the delivery boys.
 He would also have to guarantee each plant, root and bulb sold to be true to name, to be free from insects and disease; to specify whether seedling, grafted or budded, and not misrepresent by picture or other means the stock offered; in other words, every plant sold must be exactly like the picture in the catalogue. A state inspector would have the right to charge him $10 per day for examining his stock, and apparently would have the right to confiscate and destroy without recourse.

Chas. N. Page, of Des Moines, is leading the fight on the bill, which all Iowa florists, nurserymen and seedsmen hope can be killed in committee.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

A few days of bright sunshine have had a pronounced effect on the market.
 The break in prices occurred in the later days of last week and the present week opened with abundant supplies and prices much lower than those which have prevailed since the middle of January.

While the increase in roses is considerable, prices in this department still are holding fairly well. The greater part of the receipts are of the better grade. There now is an abundance of the special lengths of Killarney and other varieties; no orders go unfilled.
 Of the shorter lengths the supply still is less than the demand, though the demand is far from being strong. It has been six weeks since rose supplies have been adequate. During that time orders have been cut and prices charged have seemed high by comparison with the prices that prevailed during the last months of 1910. As a result, a great many buyers have become afraid to order roses. As in previous instances of the kind, it will take them a week or two to find out that rose supplies are once more adequate and start the buyers to ordering freely once more. Beauties are not in heavy supply, though several growers say their crops are nearly ready. The quality of the special grade of Killarney, White Killarney, Maryland and Richmond leaves nothing to be desired; finer roses seldom have been offered.

The change in the price of carnations is called a slump, it is so radical.
 At the first of last week it was impossible to fill orders, but at the first of the present week it was impossible to move all the carnations except by job lot sales at buyer's prices. Not only have receipts increased decidedly, but demand for the small lots has fallen off and the big buyers have not yet awak-

Killarneys

SPLENDID STOCK IN LARGE SUPPLY

To the users of the best grade of Killarneys it will be good news that our crop once more is large—the quality always is the best in this market. While we have a fair supply of short to medium, the greater part of the crop is the Select and Special grade. The color in the pink Killarney is extra good. We never handled finer roses and we invite all retailers who want good stock to order some of these.

OUR LONG BEAUTIES ARE EXTRA GOOD QUALITY.

CARNATIONS

Our spring crop is on, splendid stock in quantity to fill the largest orders, and many of them, at prices that will enable the retailer to use the quantity. Push Carnations—and order of us.

SWEET PEAS

For years we have been headquarters for Sweet Peas, but we never have had at this date such fine stock or such large quantities as now. Extra long stems, carrying large, perfect flowers. All the fancy colors as well as white and pink. We are shipping these Peas, fresh picked, in great quantities and they never fail to give buyers the best of satisfaction.

Easter Lilies

We can supply Easter Lilies every day in the year, fine quality.

Violets

You get the cream of the crops, double or single, when you order of us.

Fancy Valley

Fine Valley is something you need, not only for spring weddings, but every day in the year. We always have it. Order of us.

Also place orders with us for home-grown Gardenias.

CATTLEYAS

Our orchids are home-grown, and you always can get your orders filled if you place them with us.

ened to the fact that they can get stock at prices that will permit of working the special sales. Most of the carnations look good, but there is some complaint that they do not travel well.

Every kind of bulbous stock is plentiful and prices have receded. Callas are much more abundant and the same may be said of Easter lilies. Sweet peas have not yet responded to the influence of more favorable weather, but increased supplies are expected within a few days. There are plenty of cattleyas and miscellaneous orchids. Valley is abundant. Violets are in the dumps; the singles have been coming in heavily and, though of fine quality, have been sold cheaply; the doubles are not in specially large supply, but quality of much of the stock is poor and even the best find only slow sale. The wholesalers who handle violets extensively have heavy accumulations on their hands.

The green goods market is quiet. The price of ferns was generally advanced March 1. Asparagus and smilax are fairly plentiful. Boxwood is moving better than it has.

February Business.

On the whole, February was an excellent month for all the houses in this market. For a good share of the month roses were not sufficiently plentiful to meet the demand, but the prices realized went a long way toward compensating for the lightness of production. At the same time demand was turned to carnations and other flowers, with the result that these, and especially bulbous stock, realized much better average prices than in other years. St. Valentine's turned out to be a little Christmas. With increasing supplies, the last days of the month showed a falling off in the volume of business, but not enough to affect the general result. Practically every wholesale house showed a good increase in the month's sales, compared with the best previous February record.

Chicago to Boston.

The Chicago Florists' Club is preparing to go to the National Flower Show at Boston in sufficient numbers to warrant a special train. The transportation committee has made arrangements for the party to go over the Lake Shore railroad, leaving Chicago on the time of the Lake Shore Limited on the evening of March 23, arriving at Boston at 8:30 p. m., Friday. The big show opens Saturday morning. E. F. Winter-son, 45 Wabash avenue, will book reservations of berths. If enough cars are filled the Lake Shore people will run the florists as a second section of the Limited; otherwise the florists' cars will be carried on the Limited itself.

Consequently it is to everyone's advantage to communicate with Mr. Winterson as soon as he is sure of going.

The Chicago club invites florists west to join the Chicago party. The route is through Toledo, Cleveland, Buffalo, Rochester, Syracuse, Utica and Albany. St. Louis and Cincinnati parties are expected to join the train en route and delegations are expected to be taken on at each stop.

Various Notes.

John Zech and Matt Mann have put in a busy winter and are taking a week's rest at New Orleans, seeing the Mardi Gras.

Warren S. Garland, at Des Plaines, says this has been the most prosperous year he ever has had, and circumstances bear out his statement, for it recently was reported he was buying material for two new greenhouses, and it now develops that he has invested another part of the surplus in one of the extra special grade of automobiles.

With the aid of employees and customers, C. L. Washburn celebrated his fifty-third birthday anniversary February 27. A cake with the appropriate number of candles was cut at the store during the morning.

Charles Hunt, who is the florists' insurance man, recently paid Sam Pearce $125 sick benefit because of his siege with rheumatism.

The A. L. Randall Co. says the February supply business has run far ahead of last year. In spite of the fact that Easter is late, Easter orders are early.

The George Wittbold Co. had a big decoration at the Blackstone hotel February 28 for the McCormick ball.

George Pieser is helping out in Winterson's Seed Store, where they are getting ready for the spring rush. L. H. Winterson says there is already much call for carnation dye, which they are this year shipping in cans, disaster having overtaken some of last year's shipments in glass.

W. F. Schofield has his new delivery car on the street.

Weiland & Risch are not thoroughly satisfied with the appearance of their place at Evanston; it looks to them as though some of the houses should be double the present length. They are figuring, but have settled on no plans.

Robert Northam, of George Reinberg's staff, was called home February 27 by word that his little daughter, 5 years old, had caught her hand in a door jam and been painfully injured.

Sol Garland, at Des Plaines, will bench 1,000 Washington carnations next season.

The retailers will mostly stay in their present locations during the next year. The principal exception is O. J. Friedman, whose main store on Michigan avenue has been leased to parties in another line. Mr. Friedman has not yet located himself.

The E. C. Amling Co. had a shipping order for 20,000 sweet peas February 28, thought to be a record for a single sale of this flower.

Victor Bergman is happy over the arrival of a son February 21. Mrs.

Bergman is one of the Ludwigs, of Pittsburg.

Miss Frances Brundage, who officiates as secretary of the E. H. Hunt corporation, is on duty again after a week's illness.

Word comes from Los Angeles that Leonard Kill, who is operating in real estate there, has put through a deal involving over $160,000.

The Foley Mfg. Co. reports having shipped the material for the second range to be put up this season by Poehlmann Bros. Co., the increase in glass for the year being twenty-six houses 27x 250.

Vaughan & Sherry say boxwood is again in good request.

Kennicott Bros. Co. reports still having nearly two million ferns in cold storage.

When seen at Kyle & Foerster's February 27 Charles Klehm said that he looks for a fine season on peonies, now starting growth in the southern fields.

C. M. Dickinson was on the sick list February 28.

The Lord & Burnham Co. expects to be turning out greenhouse material at its new factory at Des Plaines in about six weeks.

John Kruchten says good weather has helped the sale of gardenias if not violets.

Peter Reinberg is receiving congratulations on his success as chairman of the campaign committee that landed the mayoralty nomination for Carter Harrison at the primaries February 28. One of his opponents was N. J. Wietor, who was a Dunne supporter. Mr. Wietor's candidate fell only 1,556 votes behind on the face of the police returns. Both candidates left the machine candidate, Graham, far in the rear.

A. H. Budlong says they have not yet finished replacing all the glass broken by last spring's hail storm. It was not a heavy storm, and the J. A. Budlong place lost only a little glass cleanly knocked out, but many hundreds of panes were cracked and have kept giving way, one by one.

Among the week's visitors have been E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind., and W. E. Wallace, of Dunstable, England; Max Liebman, of the Smedley Co., Fargo, N. D.; Hans Tobler, Traverse City, Mich.; J. A. Evans, Richmond, Ind.; W. G. Haebich and son, La Crosse, Wis.; Louis Bauscher, Freeport, Ill.

COLUMBUS, O.

The Market.

Funeral work lately has used up an immense lot of stock. While the cuts have been heavy, stock has been used up closely from day to day, and there really has been no surplus of anything in the flower line. The bright weather we have had for a day or two has been welcome, indeed, as we have had a great deal of cloudy weather in the month of February, and it has had a tendency to curtail the quantity of stock in the market. Bulbous stock has been in good supply and demand has been heavy for pans of hyacinths, tulips and all stock of that kind. It reminds one that we are not far from spring.

Various Notes.

The Columbus Florists' Association held a meeting in the convention parlor of the Chittenden hotel, with about sixty members present, to talk over the flower show for this fall. There was a fine lot of new roses sent from A. N. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn., including the following varieties: Rose-pink Killarney, Prince de Bulgarie, Radiance, Lady Cromwell. Mr. Jackson, of the American Rose & Plant Co., was on hand with some samples of Roosevelt fern, which were in splendid condition. The following committees were appointed to look after show matters: Finance committee, G. H. Woodrow, Frank Miller and W. H. Kropp; advertising committee, J. Underwood, Wm. Metzmaier and Geo. Thompson; arrangement committee, F. C. Verrick, Wm. Underwood and A. Gampe; decorations committee, F. Brownwell, R. A. Currie and R. Buehler; amusement committee, I. D. Seibert, C. A. Roth and O. Grice. There was a great deal of enthusiasm shown at this meeting, and the guarantee fund reaches about $1,200 at the present time. It was decided to hold a meeting in Brent hall the last Friday night of each month, and as the meeting will be in the dance hall, the ladies will be invited in the near future. Frank Good, of Springfield, O., was at the meeting and gave us quite a nice talk. Wm. A. Sperling, of Stump & Walter Co., New York, also was on hand and gave us a PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The close of the pre-lenten season has been quiet; there was not the rush that sometimes marks a short season, due partly to the fact that there has been plenty of opportunity for entertaining, with no necessity for crowding many parties into the last few days, and partly owing to the coming of spring.

The sun, for so long almost unknown, has been with us once more; the weather is milder and is bringing forward the crops rapidly. Roses, carnations, violets and sweet peas are in heavier supply. There is not enough business to maintain the prices in the face of the increased receipts. Lower figures are recorded on all grades of carnations, on the shorter grades of roses and on sweet peas. Violets have also receded.

There has been an excellent demand for Beauties, the crops of which are short. Fancy grades of other roses also have sold well. Valley has been rather irregular in supply, the market failing to absorb the unexpectedly heavy shipments receipted on several days. A decided preference is shown for Cattleya Triang, which holds its price, over Cattleya Schroederiana, which has to be shaded in price to sell. Gardenias are in good demand. Callas and Easter lilies have sold well, particularly the former, but the buyers are loudly demanding lower rates for Lent. Daffodils continue to lead the bulbous stock, with tulips a good second. Prices are receding, due partly to conditions and partly, it is whispered, to the first shipments of the southern product.

Greens have been selling exceptionally well, particularly Asparagus plumosus sprays in bunches. Mexican ivy, leucothoe and dagger ferns have been in good demand.

successful grower of carnations who ships to the Leo Niessen Co.

George F. Christie, Clifton, Pa., has been sending some excellently grown sweet peas to William J. Baker. They are considered equal, if not superior, to anything in the market.

Among the recent visitors were W. E. McKissick, Washington, D. C.; W. H. Grever, with W. J. Palmer, Buffalo, N. Y.; Miss L. H. Dundore, Lancaster, Pa.; H. Nusbaum, Clarksburg, W. Va., and H. Warendorff, of the Ansonia, New York city.

Stephen Mortensen, Southampton, Pa., suffered a severe loss from fire on the morning of February 20. Some waste is supposed to have been ignited through a crack in the flue leading to the smoke-stack while the night fireman was packing the flowers. The fire gained such headway before it was discovered that it was impossible to save the boiler-shed, and the ends of the houses opening into it were badly burned. Two-thirds of Mr. Mortensen's fine plants were ruined. There is no insurance. Neighbors helped board up the ends of the houses. The big houses last built were uninjured. The boilers are working. Mr. Mortensen will rebuild.

M. Rice and Mrs. Rice left February 25 for a two months' vacation.

Joseph Beavis & Son, Limekiln pike and Cheltenham avenue, Pittville, Pa., will build two houses, 35x100, to be planted with roses. The order has been placed with the King Construction Co.

Samuel F. Lilley reports an excellent demand for the beautiful Mexican ivy. The Michell lecture on hardy plants February 27 was well attended.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. are unloading heavy shipments from incoming steamers this week.

Stockton & Howe, Princeton, N. J., will plant three houses of their new rose, Princeton, this season. It has been having a great run.

Edward Reid spent two days this week in Norfolk, Va., at the bedside of his friend, L. G. Blick.

Fred Ehret has been having a brisk month with his double-header, as the boys of baseball proclivities style his two stores.

B. Eschner, of M. Rice & Co., reports increased demand for Easter, with a leaning toward hampers, requiring night work half of each week.

Paul Berkowitz, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., is home again, looking sunnier than ever.

Henry M. Weiss & Sons, of Hatboro, Pa., will plant their two new houses in the Ward carnations, pink and white, Mrs. C. W. Ward and Alma Ward.

Grip is prevalent. Benedict Gibbs and William A. Leonard are down with it—two good men—for but a brief time, it is hoped.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Spring weather, increasing shipments and the beginning of Lent have all proved adverse influences. Prices are receding and before the end of the week there probably will be enough and to spare of everything. If there is a shortage of anything it is in the highest grade of American Beauties. Carnations are abundant and 3 cents was top for all but the specialties February 27. Orchids hold at 50 cents, but there is no shortage. Lilies and valley hold at last week's quotations and gardenias lose none of their popularity, the selected stock holding steadily at $5 per dozen. There is no lack of sweet peas, with a wide range in quality and length of stem. For violets 50 cents per hundred is the top price, and likely to be during the forty days of Lent. Bulbous stock is never scarce and prices have been unsatisfactory to the growers. Soon the southern daffodils will be here, and already the robins and the budding trees are harbingers of an early spring. A visit to any of the seedsmen's headquarters emphasizes this most practically, for already every one of them is busy with fast accumulating orders.

Lenox, Mass., Feb. 24, 1911.

Aphine Manufacturing Company, Madison, N. J.

Dear Sirs:—Replying to your letter of the 21st, in which you request me to advise you as to the results of my trials with your Fungine, I have not had an opportunity of testing its merits on mildew, but I can, however, unqualifiedly recommend it as being a very effective remedy for carnation rust. I brought in some new carnations some time ago that were in a bad state with rust; on their arrival their leaves were completely covered, and after two applications, at proportions of one part Fungine to forty parts water, I found it had the desired effect. For this reason I gladly endorse it.

Yours very truly, THOMAS PROCTOR.

IT DESTROYS MILDEW

Farmington, Conn., Feb. 23, 1911.

Aphine Manufacturing Company, Madison, N. J.

Dear Sirs:—In reply to yours of the 21st inst., I would say that my experience with Fungine for mildew has been very satisfactory. I think it is much better and easier than the old way of dusting the plants and painting steam pipes.

The first time I used it I was rather disappointed, as it turned the woodwork in the houses, wherever the spray hit it, a dirty yellow, but this all disappeared in a few days.

I have not tried it for rust, but cannot see why Fungine is not going to be to the florists and gardeners what the lime and sulphur wash is to the pomologists.

For black, green and white fly, mealy bug and thrips, I have not used anything this season but Aphine. The greenhouses have not been fumigated and plants are in a fine healthy condition.

Yours respectfully,

WARREN S. MASON, Grd. to A. A. Pope.

Germantown, Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 23, 1911.

Aphine Manufacturing Company, Madison, N. J.

Gentlemen:—Concerning the Fungine: we may say that we have not had much occasion to use it; however, we had one delightful experience with it. We had quite a few thousand chrysanthemum cuttings inserted in old sand which had been left in one of our cold houses. As our propagator is accustomed to do, he saturated the sand and kept the cuttings very wet, which caused rot and fungus. The writer, noticing this apparent loss, went for the Fungine purchased from you. We used it one part to twenty-five parts water and sprayed the entire lot of dampened and partly rotted cuttings, thinking that these cuttings (of which there were several thousand) might as well die one way as another, but to our great surprise these cuttings after the single application, a thorough one at that, turned the cuttings to a light green color and seemed to extract the fungus, which sort of foamed up and separated from the decay (similar to peroxide on a healing wound).

Now these cuttings at this writing have nearly all made good healthy roots, although a few cuttings rotted in the sand but made roots above the decayed part, which seems remarkable to us. It is not necessary to say that for this experience alone we are highly pleased with the results obtained with Fungine used as above, which is far more than we had ever expected.

We beg to take the liberty to state that Aphine does all it is recommended to do in a very satisfactory manner.

Yours very truly,

ZIEGER & SONS,

Ernest J. F. Zieger, Sec'y.

Fritz Bahr says in his article on Lilies in the Florists' Exchange of Feb. 18, 1911:

"We have given our lilies a weak dose of Aphine once a week since they have occupied space on top of the bench, and thus far we haven't noticed even a trace of the pests; that ought to prove that green flies are not very fond of the stuff, for if there's anything they do like it is to get into the tops of the lilies, and it takes an awful lot of coaxing to get them out."

right for a big Easter supply. The rose stock in many of the old and new varieties of rambler gives exceptional promise of perfect specimens. There is no lack of quantity or variety here, nor at Dupuy's, Hancock & Schumacher's and Darlington's, whence comes so much of the Long Island supply. The same careful planning is evident at Scott's, Zeller's and Keller's, in Flatbush, and there will be no scarcity of high-grade stock among the expert growers this season.

R. Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, Md., writes that the English party, with J. S. Brunton in charge, will reach New York March 16 or 17, will likely attend the banquet of the Florists' Club March 18, visit Philadelphia March 19, White Marsh March 20, Washington March 21 to 23, Richmond March 24 and 25, Chicago March 26 and 27, Niagara Falls March 28 and 29 and Boston and New York from March 30 to April 5. Mr. Vincent and Mrs. Vincent will come to New York to meet the party on its arrival.

The presence of the English visitors will add greatly to the enjoyment of the new club's banquet March 18. Already nearly 200 seats have been sold for this annual affair, which this year will go far beyond any in attendance and enthusiasm.

The interest is widespread in the effort to secure favorable legislation in behalf of the grant of $50,000 for florists' experimental greenhouses at Cornell, and the effort to enlist the florists of the state in its behalf has met with most gratifying response.

Kessler Bros. have secured the large store and greenhouse now being completed by John D. Nicholas on West Twenty-eighth street for a term of years and the Growers' Cut Flower Co., J. J. Coan manager, will occupy the other half of the store, both firms moving to their new quarters May 1.

There was a large attendance, as usual, at the Astoria alleys Thursday evening, February 23. The cold bottle for high score, given by M. C. Ebel, of Madison, who was a guest that evening, was won by Henry Siebrecht. Mr. Arnold gave some interesting exhibits in mesmerism, with two subjects, and the refreshments were abundant. Thursday, March 2, is ladies' night, with prizes, dinner, etc. The scores were:

SEFTON CORRUGATED SHIPPING CASES

STRONG, LIGHT AND CONVENIENT

WHY use heavy wooden Boxes for Shipments of Flowers and Plants when you can get a box better adapted to your needs, weighing about one-half as much?

Our Boxes are made to fold flat; thus insuring economy in storage space and enables the commission merchant to knock them down and return them in bundles, reducing return charges--they can be used over and over.

Our Patented K. D. Tin Corner is the only satisfactory K.D. corner ever adapted to a Corrugated Shipping Case. It gives you a perfectly flat box. Costs no more than set up corners.

sociation, organized to secure improvements in Columbus avenue between Sixty-sixth and Eighty-sixth streets.

J. Diefenbacher has opened a new store at 905 Fulton street, Brooklyn.

An exhibition of plants and flowers will be held at the American Museum of Natural History, West Assembly hall, Wednesday, March 8, from 1 to 5. A welcome is extended to all who may wish to exhibit, whether members of the society or not. It is desired to make these monthly exhibitions informal, so that plant-lovers may feel at home, both those who exhibit and those who come to see. Schedules of classes and premiums are now ready for distribution and will be sent on application to the secretary, George V. Nash, New York Botanical Garden, Bronx Park.

Concord Junction, Mass.—Leonard Cousins, Jr., has a large batch of fine shamrocks ready for March 17, and says the demand is running ahead of a year ago.

MILWAUKEE.The Market.

Conditions all around last week were a great improvement over those of the preceding week. With plenty of sun throughout the week, the supply was greatly increased and the demand kept pace, thus keeping the entire market in a wholesome condition.

Various Notes.

The bowling tournament which was to have taken place between the Florists' Bowling League and the Odonahas March 1 was postponed indefinitely. Great interest by local florists is developing since the news spread that March 19 a delegation of Chicago florists will come to challenge the Milwaukee florists in a bowling match. Gust. Rusch, captain of the local bowlers, no doubt will leave no stone unturned to make their stay a most enjoyable one.

Richard Leitz is contemplating an addition to his store at Fourteenth and Walnut streets, in the form of a conservatory. E. O.

THE BOSKOOP EXHIBITION.

The preparations for the exhibition of forced shrubs and perennials, to be held in Boskoop, Holland, in April of this year, are well advanced and appear to be even more thorough and comprehensive than at first expected. The press committee, of which C. H. Claassen is president and C. P. Moerlands, secretary, has sent the following report of recent progress:

"The buildings for the exhibition are almost finished. They will be heated free of charge by the Dutch Central Heating Co., of Amsterdam, and will be illuminated in the evening by electric light, installed by the firm of Strous, of Dordrecht. In the exhibition grounds there will be a postoffice and telegraph office, and every hour a passenger boat will run between Boskoop and Gouda, the nearest railway station.

"The honorary committee consists of forty members. The number of exhibits promised amounts to 500, the number of novelties to more than a hundred, and that of little known plants to sixty. All these facts show that the exhibition will in every way surpass expectations."

Six Pages of Retailers' Cards

This department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand. If you are the only florist in your city represented here, you get the orders coming into your territory from other florists. If you are not represented and "the other fellow" is—we can leave it to you what becomes of these desirable orders.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

The Market.

Business during the last week has shown a decided general improvement, which, with warmer, clearer weather, has made the period more seasonable than for some time previously. The supply of all kinds of cut flowers has been much improved, so that there was a slight falling off in prices. Two of the largest funerals that have been held in this city in many months, so far as decorations of an expensive character are concerned, with the usual number of Washington's birthday functions, made the week one of considerable activity. On all sides the growers are busily engaged in preparations for Easter, and it is expected that the supply will exceed that of previous years.

Club Meeting.

"Ugly Corners Made Beautiful, or Vacant Lot Rose Gardens," was the subject of discussion at the monthly meeting of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island, February 20. The discussion was preceded by the reading of the paper on the subject by H. Howard Pepper, of the Melrose Rose Gardens. He told of the success he has had in the raising of hybrid roses in

B. Luther, of this city; William B. King, of Apponaug, and Aldimor Chousnard, of Central Falls, were elected to active membership. A communication was received from the State Grange, asking the society to appoint a committee to confer with the other agricultural and horticultural associations of the state relative to the establishment of a permanent home for the holding of the meetings of these organizations, which was laid on the table for the special order at the next meeting.

The treasurer's report showed that the society is in a flourishing condition.
An effort is to be made to recruit the membership of the association so as to include the names of all the florists and gardeners throughout the state.

On the president's table were exhibited three large bunches of roses from the J. A. Budlong & Son Co., at Auburn, including one vase each of Richmond, My Maryland and Killarney, which elicited favorable comment.

Various Notes.

At the meeting of the Newport Horticultural Society, February 14, Walter Edmund Eglinton, of London, England, read an interesting paper on orchid growing. Mr. Eglinton was for a number of years in the employ of William Bull & Sons, one of the greatest firms of orchid growers in the world, who in three years raised about 30,000 seedlings.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., E. L. Page, Greene, N. Y.; First Vice-pres., L. H. Vaughan, Chicago; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. Twenty-ninth annual meeting, Milwaukee, Wis., June 20 to 22, 1911.

Now for the rush, and the night work—March is here!

THE Lompoc Seed Growers' Association, Lompoc, Cal., will erect a fireproof warehouse 75 x 300.

THE residence of the late E. V. Hallock, Floral Park, N. Y., was practically destroyed by fire February 19. Since the death of the seedsman it had been used as a boarding house.

FEBRUARY always brings bad weather to some, if not all, sections of the country, so the failure of mail orders to assume hoped for volume can not be laid wholly to the storms.

THE Amzi Godden Seed Co., Birmingham, Ala., which was established in 1857, is this season doing the largest business in its history, in a new building with 40,000 square feet of floor space.

THE residence of Mrs. Alice C. Turgeon, secretary of the Missouri Seed Co., Kansas City, was burglarized February 17. Several days later it was discovered that $500 worth of jewelry was missing.

J. W. JUNG SEED CO., Randolph, Wis., recently mailed its 1911 catalogue, typed, printed and bound on the place. Mr. Jung believes this is the only American seed catalogue manufactured complete on the same farm where most of the seeds it lists are grown.

MARCH starts out with the seed trade on about the normal basis. There must be some increase from year to year. Mail orders are coming in at about the usual rate. Counter trade is more affected by local weather conditions; it has hardly made a start at most points.

IN the Iowa legislature a bill has been introduced requiring that a license be obtained to sell nursery stock, greenhouse plants or seeds, and that every employee dealing with the public carry a duplicate of the license. The text of the bill will be found on page 64.

THE Taylor Farmers' Institute, of Taylor, Tex., has decided to circulate a petition for the introduction of a pure seed bill in their state legislature. Such action is necessary, the members of the institute state, because the pure seed laws already existing in many of the northern and eastern states have caused Texas to become a "dumping ground for impure, pest-infested seed."

THE mail order seed trade for February turned out about on a par with that of January—good, but nothing to brag about. The absence of a record-breaking demand has been a keen disappointment to a number of houses, for it is difficult to break records during the rush months; the increases are easiest handled and are most apparent if they come the first two months of the year.

"PERHAPS the most painstaking of seed growers," said J. K. M. L. Farquhar in his recent lecture before the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, "are those of Germany. The growing of seeds on a large basis was first established at BEANS, PEAS, SWEET CORN, ONION, BEET, TURNIP, TOMATO, ETC.

Frank Annan and Ed Culver, Toledo grass seed dealers. They did not object to, but rather encouraged the general idea of legislation to insure purity of seed. They protested principally against the feature that eliminates the farmer and seed grower from operation of the bill, permitting them to sell directly to consumers, though not to dealers, any kind of seed, whether tested or not, and irrespective of any percentage of noxious weed seed which it may contain.

The Huber bill has already passed the house, but members of the senate agricultural committee asserted that it will undoubtedly be amended in important respects, in line with the suggestions of the Toledoans, before it becomes law.

IMPORTS.

The imports of seed through the port of New York for the week ending February 18 were as follows:

Kind.	Pkgs.	Val.	Kind.	Pkgs.	Val.
Annatto...	228	$ 1,911	Cummin ..	250	$ 2,349
Anise	249	2,422	Grass	465	2,271
Caraway ..	650	3,326	Millet ...	1,747	5,581
Castor ...	826	4,016	Mustard...	185	2,852
Celery ...	50	785	Poppy ...	203	1,370
Clover ...	1,014	29,181	Rape	7	28
Coriander..	100	251	Other	22,643

In the same period the imports of bulbs, trees and plants were valued at $25,498.

GARDEN SEEDS ARE "PURE."

The reasons for omitting garden seeds from all pure seed legislation scarcely could have been better put than was done by Kirby B. White, secretary of D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit, when he appeared before Mr. Mann's committee at Washington recently. Mr. White said in part:

"All of the objects to be covered by any seed legislation that anybody ever wanted are comprehended under three heads—to prevent the spread of weeds, to see that the purchaser gets the kind of thing he supposes he buys, and to see that the seeds that he buys are alive and not dead. There is not anything else in the whole field of seed legislation that anybody ever aimed at."

"Now, with regard to the spread of weeds. As the gentleman who preceded me said, weeds do not come in garden seeds, from the nature of the case, because garden seeds are grown under a high state of cultivation. The people who produce garden seeds in France, Germany, Holland, and all over Europe, and in California, grow them in gardens, and it is to their financial interests to see that weeds are kept down. Those seeds are harvested by painstaking labor, by hand, as a rule, and weeds do not have an opportunity to get in. In the main, then, and except in very extraordinary cases, weeds do not appear in garden seeds at all. Hence there is no need for any legislation to keep garden seed clean of weeds."

"The next point is that the purchaser is expected to get what he buys. In our own practice it is very rare indeed that he does not get the variety which he supposes he buys. It is true sometimes that the variety which he buys does not come up to the description given in the catalogue. For instance, when Luther Burbank introduced the wonderberry, and it was sold under glaring advertisements, I do not think anybody charged that when a man bought wonderberry of Mr. Burbank, through his representatives, he people again. Now, does it not appeal to your sense of commerce that it is better for us to sell these people, as we have for three generations, what the goods are represented to be, than to find a new set of suckers every year—if you will excuse that word; I forgot myself. It is a fact that it is to our commercial interest, laying aside all matters of honor, to satisfy these people with what they get. In practice, the only time that I know of in any seedsman's business that the purchaser does not get exactly what is represented as to the variety is when, by some error, a wrong bag gets in; that is, when a packet of some other variety gets into the packet of the variety which is being filled; and we prevent that, as far as possible, and no amount of legislation could make us any more careful than we are.

"This brings me down to the third point, and the thing on which I think you are probably most insistent, and that is, that the seeds which a man buys shall be alive and not dead. It would seem this was a matter which meant the most careful protection to the buyer. As a matter of fact, it is not true that the purchaser of garden seed needs any federal protection, or any state protection, as to the viability of the seeds he buys. As a matter of fact, ninety-eight per cent of all the garden seeds sold are represented by the association which is here represented; ninety-eight per cent of all the garden seeds sold in this country are represented here. In our business we have practically no complaint of the viability of the seeds we sell. As a matter of fact the seeds grow, but the value of seeds does not depend upon the viability; it depends more upon the quality of the product. It is just the same as it is with cows. A thoroughbred cow is no more alive than a runt. But the amount of butter fat that that cow will produce may be three times as great. The value is not in the viability so much as in whether or not it is thoroughbred seed, and frequently thoroughbred seed does not test as much as seed of poorer quality and much higher viability. The highest viability comes in the wild stuff. That is a point in biology that you can not get around.

"I should like to adduce, as evidence that a purchaser needs no protection, not only the fact that we, as seedsmen, have very little complaint of viability, but a circular published by the Department of Agriculture, Bulletin No. 131, part 1, on the germination of vegetable seed. That bulletin was published in March, 1908, so it is comparatively recent. In that bulletin there are tabulated twenty-seven different kinds of seed—the ordinary kinds of seed—and that represents the viability tests of the Department of Agriculture on twenty-seven different packaging houses, representing practically all the seeds that are sold in packets, and I think no one will claim that the viability of seeds sold by the pound or ounce is less than the viability of seeds sold by the packet.

DREER'S
"Peerless Pink"
BRANCHING ASTER

Dreer's Superb Strains of the Best Asters

Our stocks of the following Asters are grown under our own supervision and we are quite sure that nothing finer in quality can be had at any price from any source. Our yearly increasing sales are the best evidence that they give complete satisfaction.

DREER'S "PEERLESS PINK"

A magnificent new variety which may briefly be described as an improved late-branching shell-pink. Flowers of largest size, of rich shell-pink, borne on long, strong stems, making them one of the finest for cutting. 50 cents per trade packet; $4.00 per ounce.

DREER'S SUPERB LATE-BRANCHING

The finest of all September-blooming Asters. Our stock has been re-selected for a number of years and is now as perfect as the most painstaking care can make it. We offer the following eight distinct colors:

Azure Blue or deep lavender	Deep Purple
Pale Lavender	Rose-pink
Deep Crimson	Shell-pink
Deep Rose	Pure White

Any of the above, 25 cents per trade packet; $1.00 per ounce. Finest mixed, all colors, 25 cents per trade packet; 75 cents per ounce.

CREGO'S GIANT COMET

The perfection of Comet Asters, immense fluffy flowers, five inches and over across, borne on long, strong stems, coming into bloom in August, continuing through September. We offer pure white and shell-pink, 40 cents per trade packet; $2.00 per ounce.

The above are but a few of the many Asters which we offer. For a complete list see pages 2 and 3 of our current wholesale price list. If you do not have a copy we will be pleased to send one to any Florist on application. New crop seeds of almost all kinds are now in stock, and early orders from the trade are solicited.

DAYBREAK

A fine mid-season Aster of symmetrical growth, 18 inches high, with good-sized, densely double soft pink flowers. 50 cents per trade packet; $2.50 per ounce.

VIOLET KING

A fine late-branching variety of exceptionally free growth, bearing very large double flowers of a pleasing shade of soft violet. 30 cents per trade packet; $1.50 per ounce.

EARLY WONDER

The earliest of all Asters, blooming at the end of June; flowers of good size on good stems and valuable where early flowers are desired. We offer pure white and pink, 40 cents per trade packet; $2.00 per ounce.

QUEEN OF THE MARKET

An early-flowering, first-class Aster, coming into bloom in July, lasting well through August; flowers of large size on long, strong stems. A good variety for growing under glass. We can supply in the following six desirable colors:

Pink	Bright Rose
Purple	Crimson
White	Lavender

Any of the above, 20 cents per trade packet; 60 cents per ounce. Finest mixed, all colors, 15 cents per trade packet; 50 cents per ounce.

The average of all the viabilities for each kind is reached. For the twenty-seven different kinds—and, as it chances, the twenty-seven different packet houses—the average number of plants of all kinds which a purchaser would get for 5 cents, putting the seed up in the quantity in which most of the seeds are put up, is 923 plants for a nickel. Of that average the lowest is represented by watermelon. The average viability of watermelon sent out by all these houses is sixty-four. There are, of course, in a packet of watermelon only a few seeds, because the seeds are so large that the packet will not hold very many. The average number of plants which would be obtained by the average number of seeds is forty-nine. That is the lowest of all of them. They range from that up through the thousands. The average number of sprouts which the purchaser would get out of a packet of seeds of rutabaga was 2,212; the average number of sprouts of lettuce was 2,250. I submit to you, gentlemen, that there is no practical need for protecting the buyer on the viability of commissioned packets as sold.

Numerous readers of The Review will recognize this as a popular novelty of last year. Many Florists claim they got more flowers, larger blooms and longer stems than they could grow of other early kinds, because it grows as vigorously and yields as abundantly as many of the Late Asters. The flowers are solid, ball shaped and considerably above the average in size. A medium early variety which has been a money maker wherever tried. Two colors: White and Lavender Pink.

"There is not only no need of protecting the buyer of vegetable packets with regard to weed seeds and to see that the purchaser gets what he supposes he buys, or protect him to see that the seeds are alive, but I very much doubt if you constitutional lawyers here would want to legislate on this question anyway, because if you did so you would be holding the seller of seeds responsible for the operation of a natural law which he can not control and of the actions of which he even does not know infallibly. The association of seed analysts here represented will tell you that there are no two experiment stations in the United States which infallibly get the same result at the same time as to the viability of a given lot of seed.

"If legislation were needed, if you were going to legislate, if there were a practical demand for it and it were needed, on the subject of viability, would you want a federal law to protect the purchaser in the quality of the stuff that he bought, or would you leave that, supposing that a law were needed, to the states? I ask you, is there any case of the Congress of the United States passing a law to see that the purchaser receives his money's worth when he buys a commodity which does not affect his health? We all applauded and we all rejoiced over the pure-food law. The difference is right here. When a man buys food that is adulterated he poisons himself; when a man buys seed, supposing there were such a case, which was not as much as it ought to be, his pocket only is affected. Is Congress ready to embark on the field of federal regulation with regard to saying that the purchaser of every 5-cent packet of seeds, or every $2 pair of shoes, or every ice-cream freezer, or anything of that kind, shall get his money's worth?"

Mr. Adamson: "We have already entered upon it, and in less than twenty-five years they will trim the corns and toe nails and name the babies." [Great laughter.]

Mr. White: "Gentlemen, I do not need to say any more."

TESTING FARM SEEDS.

The United States Department of Agriculture has just issued a bulletin of forty-eight pages entitled "Testing Farm Seeds in the Home and in the Rural School." It relates to grass and clover, with a brief paragraph on corn. The author is F. H. Hillman, and of general seed trade conditions he has this to say:

"Most of the undesirable conditions exhibited by seed which make seed testing necessary are the result of trade influences. The responsibility for these conditions doubtless rests fully as much with the mass of consumers who demand low priced seed as with the dealers who cater to this demand. The trade has employed various means to meet the demand for low priced seed. Large importations are made of the same kinds of seed which are produced in and are exported from this country. The imported seed can be sold cheaper than that which is exported. Grades of seed which are practically unsalable in Europe find a ready market here because the better American grown seed is commonly considered too high priced. Various forms of seed adulteration have long been practiced, and seed ill adapted to our climatic conditions has often been sold. The results have been frequent failure of crops, an excessive cost of the actually good seed, and a wider distribution of many kinds of foreign weeds than by any other means. A general understanding of these conditions as they relate to particular kinds of seeds is helpful in making tests."

LILIES FOR MEMORIAL DAY.

I should like to know when to bring Lilium giganteum into heat to have them in bloom for Memorial day.

J. E. S.

Giganteum lilies should be placed in a brisk heat at once for Easter, as the buds should show early in March. For Memorial day the plants should at present be in a temperature of 45 to 50 degrees, and if the shoots push through the pots by the middle of March they will be on time, if given a night temperature of 60 to 65 degrees. You want to see the buds separated thirty-five days before Memorial day. Giganteums like warm treatment right along, when once they are well started.

C. W.

He was so stingy that he used the mole on the back of his neck to save a collar-button. His soul-cry was price, price, price! He held the cent so close to his eye that he couldn't see the dollar behind it. So he bought the cheapest lily bulbs in the market. Now he has the most constipated-looking lot of lilies you ever saw in your life. He blames the bulbs, of course, and he is right, but he has forgotten what he paid.

He can cuss now until he gets ankylosis of the jawbone and it won't help matters a bit. He got just what he paid for, and he's it.

It is better to buy Horse-shoe Brand Giganteum than to wish you had. They are the best marketed that we know of and have averaged the best returns of any brand in the world.

INDOOR BRUSSELS SPROUTS.

Can Brussels sprouts be successfully grown in a greenhouse with a day temperature of 60 to 70 degrees and a night temperature of 40 to 50 degrees? How long should the crop take to mature? My plants are making a vigorous growth, but have shown no signs of sprouts. They are fifteen or eighteen inches high, strong, healthy, and have large leaves. I am located in southern Wisconsin! J. R. M.

I have never had any experience with Brussels sprouts in the greenhouse. I am sure, however, that your temperature is about right, as they belong to the cabbage family and like a lettuce temperature. I think the reason that they have not shown any signs of sprouts is that they are not old enough. Outside they are not an early vegetable, by any means, and you will no doubt get a crop later, but I fear they will not be a paying crop, on account of the southern outdoor-grown article being on the market by that time.

NEW YORK GROWERS ORGANIZE.

The vegetable growers of New York state convened at the College of Agriculture, at Ithaca, February 22, and decided to organize a state association. A committee was appointed on that day to formulate a constitution and by-laws, and report the following day. This program was carried out and the constitution and by-laws were adopted, officers were elected, committees appointed, and the association is now a full-fledged organization of the state, ready to do business. The object of the association is stated as follows:

Article II. The object of this association shall be to organize and federate the interests of those engaged in vegetable growing, to the end that larger crops of constantly improving quality may be grown and marketed with increased profit.

The constitution provides for the following committees:

Article V. The executive committee shall consist of the president, the secretary, and three members elected at large who shall represent as far as possible the different phases of the vegetable industry of the state.

Article VI. The standing committees shall be as follows: Marketing, transportation, legislation, investigation, federation. They shall consist of three members each, appointed by the president. In appointing these committees for the first time, the president shall designate one member of each committee for one year, one member for two years, and one member for three years. Thereafter the incoming president shall appoint one member of each committee to hold office for three years, or until his successor is appointed.

Special committees may be appointed by the president from time to time as occasion may arise.

It is the aim of the association to interest local organizations. To this end Article VIII has been incorporated:

ANNOUNCEMENT

Findlay, O., February 27, 1911.

TO THE TRADE:

I am getting things in shape for one of the biggest stocks of vegetable plants that I have ever grown for the wholesale trade. Last season I was fully 300,000 short, but my greenhouses for this year are under new management, Mr. Arthur Marshall, of Columbus Grove, having full charge of them. Eighty bushels of sweet potatoes will be put down for plants, which will be ready to ship first week in May. My tomato seed was saved from the very choicest stock and I know the plants will give entire satisfaction. We shall grow a large stock of peppers, eggplant, celery, cauliflower, cabbage, tomato plants and asters. A full list will be published in the Florists' Review for the month of April. Don't fail to read it. Mr. Marshall will book your order, large or small, for anything in the plant line and ship when wanted.

Wonderful Fall Bearing STRAWBERRY PLANTS

Fruit in Fall of first year and in Spring and Fall of second year. Better than a Klondike Gold Mine. From 500 plants set in Spring of 1910 we picked, from Aug. 20th to Nov. 12th, nearly 400 quarts, which sold at 40c to 50c a quart, netting us over $200 to the acre. We have the largest stock in the world of "Francis," "Americus," "Productive," and "Superb," the four best varieties; also "Autumn" and "Pan-American." Now is the time to order these plants before everybody begins to grow them. Do not invest in seeds or plants of French or other worthless varieties. We are also headquarters for plants of "Norwood" and "Early Ozark" Strawberries; "Plum Farmer," "Idaho" and "Royal Purple" Raspberries, and all other valuable varieties of Berry Plants, Grapes, Currants, Gooseberries, Asparagus, Roses, "Hastings" Potatoes, etc. 28 years of experience. PACIFIC COAST.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

Business of the last week was varied. Funeral work was the principal item, and of the variety that called for the best grade of stock. With a few days of sunshine wonders have been wrought in bringing out the flowers. Carnations are almost perfection, and the best selling commodity on the market. Home-grown violets are coming in nicely and gradually are displacing California stock. Spring flowers, such as hyacinths, tulips and daffodils, are used principally in table decorations.

With the advance of spring the catalogue departments are unusually busy, which necessitates additional help. St. Johns, a suburb of Portland, designated Washington's birthday as the official rose planting day, with a celebration, music and speech-making.

Various Notes.

Henry Penn, of Boston, who is on an extended western trip, was greatly enthused over the thrift of the cities of the northwest.

Sam Roake is confined at home on account of sickness, but shows a steady improvement.

Clarke Bros. had an unusual day last week, when they were called on for two casket covers, one of violets and the other of carnations and lilies.

Martin & Forbes had a large decoration countermanded, at the last moment, on account of a death in the family, after all stock had been secured, including 1,000 strings of smilax. This is an unpleasantness that the florist is often called upon to bear. E. R. C.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The weather has moderated somewhat in this vicinity and, although the nights are a bit frosty, the days are quite warm. The effect is noticeable in the amount of stock being brought into town, and with a continuance of the sunshine we may look for plenty of blossoms in the near future. The prices, too, are considerably lower than those in vogue a few days ago. Carnations are cheaper by fully twenty per cent, and roses show an inclination along the same lines.

Violets are rather plentiful again, but the quality is commencing to show the lateness of the season, and with the advent of warmer weather they will be more flabby and of poorer color than they are now. Valley is in fair supply, of good color and form, and moves well. Easter lilies, from all appearances, will be in sufficient quantity to fill all requirements. Tulips are not selling as well as some of the growers would like. Daffodils seem to be a shade scarcer. They are in good demand at from $1 to $2.50 per hundred. Fruit blossoms are not yet in their prime, but the public seems not to tire of them and they will be as popular as of old. Maidenhair ferns, both the greenhouse stock and the wild sorts, are not overplentiful, and smilax is quite a scarce article. Other kinds of stock are as usual.

New Red Dahlia Mrs. Minna Burgle

A cross between Joe Thomson and Clown, originated by Mr. J. Burgle of Fruitvale, Cal., and named after his wife, Mrs. Minna Burgle, is the best Red Decorative Dahlia ever produced and will supersede all other red varieties now grown for cut flowers here or abroad. It draws your attention instantly when planted in a collection of Dahlias, for it is one of the most showy flowers ever created. True decorative, bright scarlet, showing a darker shading in center, bold erect flowers, 6 to 8 inches in diameter, with excellent stem, foliage of remarkable substance, height 5 to 6 feet, good keeper and will not burn in hot weather, and is a freer bloomer than either parent. This variety has been tested by me for three years and has shown no weak points.

A vase of 50 blooms shown by me, also a basket of them exhibited by Sievers Floral Co., of San Francisco, both carried first prizes in the Fall Flower Show in San Francisco, and caused more comment among gardeners and visitors than any other exhibit. Cut flowers sold for the first time last year brought 50 per cent more than any other variety of dahlias, including Joe Thomson.

CROWEANUMS IN CALIFORNIA.

This winter I purchased 350 10-inch Croweanum ferns, which had produced beautifully last summer, but which were kept in a rather cool house until January of this year, when I got them. They are doing absolutely nothing now, owing to the cold they suffered, and I learned from their former owner that they always go down in winter in his cold houses, in which the temperature averages anywhere from 35 to 55 degrees at night, and yet they produce finely in summer. Now, I should be grateful if you would tell me whether the Croweanum fern is a winter producer or not, when kept at a temperature of, say, 60 degrees at night. Ferns with us, in the vicinity of San Francisco, are worthless unless they produce well in winter. Has your experience been such as to lead you to believe that the Croweanum will do anything to repay the cost of heating in winter? And if so, how amply? Can you advise me of whom I can get a catalogue of ferns for cutting and also decorative?

L. M. B.

The fact that the Adiantum Croweanum ferns were in 10-inch pots would lead one to presume that they were three or four years old, at least, and it could hardly be expected that such plants, even under the best of treatment, would bear fronds heavily again in winter without dividing them, for this is the only way they can be propagated. They should never be kept over three seasons in the same soil, and when divided they should be well broken up and planted in pots or in solid benches, preferably the latter when the object is to grow for cutting. It is out of the question to expect to get a crop of fronds in the winter from plants that have borne heavily all summer, as this particular lot is said to have done. A. Croweanum is a good winter fern, provided the plants have not been forced too much in the previous summer. Like almost everything else, they must have a rest. This does not consist, with this variety, in letting the plants dry out too much, but in keeping the house cool and not shading too heavily.

For winter forcing a temperature of 60 degrees at night is imperative, but the heat should not be concentrated under the benches, as, in common with most varieties, better results will be had when the radiation comes from above rather than below the roots. A. Croweanum produces, under proper conditions, quantities of long, heavy fronds all winter, which always find a good market at top prices. To obtain these results the soil must be right. It can be grown in rather stiff loam, provided the drainage is good. Plant about one foot apart each way, and see that they have about six inches of soil to grow in. See that they are not chilled with too frequent waterings over the foliage. Use air-slaked lime freely to keep down slugs and sweeten the soil. Liquid manure can be used occasionally and is of great benefit when extra heavy fronds are desired. There are many firms throughout the NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

Officers for 1910-11: Pres., W. P. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Vice-pres., E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia.; Sec'y, John Hall Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-sixth annual meeting, St. Louis, June, 1911.

THE death of F. K. Phoenix, pioneer nurseryman of Delavan, Wis., is reported in this week's obituary column.

THE return of cold weather to the southeast and southwest last week caused some alarm among nurserymen of those sections.

THE Waco Nursery Co. has been incorporated at Waco, Tex., with a capital stock of $32,500. The incorporators are Sam Sanger, T. A. Goldstein, F. S. Henry and others.

W. C. BARRY, Rochester, delivered an address on "How to Grow Hardy Roses" before the Syracuse Rose Society February 21. In reporting it one of the Rochester papers made it "Hardly" roses.

NURSEYMEN in the west and north-west apparently are confident that the demand for apple trees will continue, as preparations are being made for a supply that would prove burdensome if the boom should burst.

Down in Texas and Oklahoma, where spring is weeks ahead of its arrival in other sections, the nursery interests have been too busy to make any complaint over the conditions, which have not all been in their favor.

INIMICAL BILL IN IOWA.

One of the most objectionable bills recently introduced in any state legislature is now before the Senate Committee on Horticulture in Iowa. It concerns the florists and seedsmen as well as the nurserymen, but it bears specially on the tree dealers, who have agents in every hamlet. The text of the bill is:

A BILL

FOR AN ACT TO REGULATE THE SALE OF NURSERY STOCK, SUCH AS FRUIT TREES, SHRUBS, PLANTS, VINES, SEEDS, ETC., TO PREVENT THE MISREPRESENTATION OF THE SAME, THE SELLING OF DISEASED NURSERY STOCK, AND PROVIDING FOR THE INSPECTION OF SAID NURSERY STOCK, AND PROVIDING A PENALTY FOR THE VIOLATION OF THIS ACT OR ANY SECTION THEREOF.

Be It Enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Iowa:

Section 1. Any person, firm, association, or corporation, wishing to sell, convey, transfer, or solicit orders for any nursery stock, including trees, shrubs, plants, vines, roots, bulbs, or seed, within the state, shall file with the Secretary of the Board of Agriculture his written desire to so engage in the business as stated above, setting forth in his written application the necessary information of what he expects to sell, offer for sale, or solicit orders therefor; said application to be accompanied by a fee of five dollars ($5.00) to cover expense of issuing a certificate, and one dollar ($1.00) additional fee for every duplicate of said certificate issued. Upon the deposit of above fee and application, the Secretary of the Board of Agriculture shall issue to the person, firm, association, or corporation a certificate and duplicates as requested, of permission to sell, offer for sale, or solicit orders within the state of Iowa, for nursery stock con-

Outclasses everything heretofore grown in the dark pink section. Won first honors in the 100 class for best dark pink at the A. C. S. meeting, Pittsburg, January, 1910, and has won many other honors.

It is a pure, bright, dark pink of even shade, size 3½ inches, an early and continuous bloomer, brings fully 25 per cent more flowers to the plant than Lawson at its best; flowers well shaped on long, wiry stems; calyx does not split. It is a good shipper, and the cuttings root easy.

While with most carnations early cuttings are desirable, this is not so much the case with Bright Spot; it is such a strong grower that March cuttings make just as good and very large plants by the end of July.

Nor shall said person, firm, association, or corporation, sell, offer for sale, or solicit orders for, unless duly specified, any nursery stock, trees, shrubs, roots, bulbs, plants, vines, or seeds, deficient in vitality or germinating power by reason of age or for any other reason such as too long exposure or freezing.

Sec. 4. No person, firm, association, or corporation shall sell, offer for sale, or solicit orders for, within the state of Iowa, any nursery stock, trees, shrubs, plants, vines, roots, bulbs, or seeds, which are diseased with any disease peculiar to the species, or shall sell, offer for sale, or solicit orders for any trees, vines, plants, or shrubs, affected with San Jose scale, yellows, rosette, or other destructive insect or fungus enemies.

Any person, firm, association, or corporation, who has reason to believe that his nursery stock is so affected, shall cause the same to be inspected by the Secretary of the Board of Agriculture or his assistant, not earlier than June first, nor later than September first, of each year, and said person, firm, association or corporation shall pay a fee of ten dollars ($10.00) per day and five dollars ($5.00) for every half-day devoted to said inspection; (a day shall be all time of five hours or more, but not more than ten hours; one-half day shall be all time less than five hours). And all said trees, shrubs, plants, vines, roots, bulbs and seeds so affected shall be destroyed; and any shipments within the state shall have an inspector's stamp or tag plainly attached thereto, showing that the same is free from disease, as above stated, and within the full meaning of this act. No person, firm, association, or corporation, shall in any way sell, offer for sale, transfer, solicit orders from, or convey to any person within the state, any trees, shrubs, plants, vines, roots, bulbs, or seeds, which are diseased.

Sec. 5. The Secretary of the Board of Agriculture is hereby empowered to employ an assistant who shall be versed in the subject of Horticulture and Agriculture, and thoroughly capable and competent to carry out the provisions of this act as to the examination and tagging of the trees, shrubs, plants, vines, roots, bulbs, and seeds, and who shall have the same power as the Secretary of the Board of Agriculture to enforce this act.

Sec. 6. In order to enforce and provide for the enforcement of this act, and to provide an assistant to the Secretary of the Board of Agriculture, there is hereby appropriated the sum of $5,000 annually, not otherwise appropriated, to provide for the salary of the Assistant to the Secretary of the Board of Agriculture, and necessary expenses in the performance of their duty. Said assistant to receive a salary not exceeding $1,800 per annum.

Sec. 7. Penalty. Any person, firm, association or corporation violating any of the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be fined not to exceed one hundred dollars ($100.00) or less than twenty-five dollars ($25.00) for each and every offense; and the Secretary of the Board of Agriculture shall thereupon revoke the certificate granted to sell, offer for sale, or solicit orders for nursery stock as by this act contemplated.

THE IMPROVED CANNA "UNCLE SAM" is one of our Improved Cannas that the Florists in every state in the Union ought to know about. It is a magnificent variety for parks—or big beds anywhere. Very stately in appearance with enormous bunches of brilliant Orange Scarlet flowers; height, 6 to 7 feet and magnificent every way.

A bed of "Uncle Sam" Cannas graced the White House grounds at Washington recently and was the admiration of its distinguished guests.

The Royal Horticultural Society of England thought so much of it that they crowned it with an award of merit at their great International Trial of Canna Lilies.

We have a thousand good strong roots of "Uncle Sam" and will accept orders of not more than 100 to any one patron, f. o. b. here, at $1.00 per dozen; $7.00 per 100

It ought to be in every first-class list published.

Please remember that every one of these Cannas we have been talking about were originated by our Vice-President, Mr. Wintzer, on our grounds here at West Grove.

The Market.

Business has been quite satisfactory. The weather continues warm, with numerous cloudy days, but stock, with the exception of roses, is plentiful. Bulbous flowers are more numerous than at any time this season and are meeting with good demand. Violets and sweet peas are selling well. Easter lilies are scarce, as are roses, the latter holding top-notch prices.

Various Notes.

The Pahud Floral Co. is figuring on tearing down four houses and putting up modern houses in their place this year.

Both Bertermann Bros. and A. Wiegand & Sons had a busy week on account of the auto show. Every available palm and bay tree was used in the decorations of the various automobile display rooms.

A. W. Marshall, formerly with the Pahud Floral Co., has taken a position with A. Wiegand & Sons. Carl Groener, formerly with the latter firm, has departed for Portland, Ore.

The Smith & Young Co. has been cutting some fine sweet peas, but the orchid crop is off at present.

B. F. Hensley, of Knightstown, has been shipping in quantities of carnations.

Peter Weiland, of New Castle, was a visitor last week. Mr. Weiland was inspecting the cement benches and gutters at the Smith & Young place. He is erecting a range of ten houses at New Castle and expects to open a commission house here this fall. Other visitors were H. Knickman, of McHutchinson & Co., New York city; H. S. Garland, of the Geo. M. Garland Co., Des Plaines, Ill. H. L. W.

FINDLAY, O.

S. J. McMichael has placed the management of his greenhouse establishment in the hands of Arthur Marshall, formerly of Columbus Grove. Mr. McMichael has had so many irons in the fire that he has been unable to look after all of them the way he would like, and he also feels that lightening his labors will be of advantage to his health. His specialty is vegetable plants and preparations are being made for growing an immense quantity for the approaching season. Last year he was fully 300,000 short in filling his orders. Eighty bushels of sweet potatoes will be put down for plants, the shipping season for which starts May 1. Tomato plants will be grown by the hundreds of thousands from seed saved on the place. Peppers, eggplants, celery, cauliflower, cabbage and aster plants also are specialties.

Mr. McMichael also is known as the horseradish king, for he has been growing the roots and bottling the product for many years. He says growing horseradish roots for market is a profitable side line for anyone with the necessary ground. One acre of land would yield $250 worth of salable roots in one year if set six inches apart in the rows, with the rows two and one-half or three feet apart. He says the soil should be sandy and the cultivation the same as for potatoes. Horseradish roots now are selling at 6 cents to 9 cents per pound, wholesale.

Ottawa, Kan.—B. Romstedt, of the Romstedt Greenhouses, has completed two new houses, each 18x110, and is planting them to lettuce.

Racine, Wis.—John Bourgaize, proprietor of the North Side Greenhouses, has announced his candidacy for alderman of the Seventh ward on the Republican ticket.

Jamestown, N. D.—Manager A. K. Wheeler, of the Wheeler Floral Co., has purchased the interests of his partner, E. A. Williams, and will continue the business alone. In spite of a fire and other misfortunes, Mr. Wheeler has built up a prosperous trade.

Pink Boston Market

A seedling of Boston Market and Harlowarden that has been under test for the past five years and which has shown up so well under all conditions that I now feel confident it is one of the best commercial varieties and have pleasure in offering it for the first time for spring delivery 1911.

The color is a shade lighter pink than Lawson; form high built, much like Boston Market; stem long and graceful; healthy grower; blooms freely from November all through the season.

This new variety I am confident will prove a money-maker—a pink Boston Market—only much larger and better and destined to be one of the most popular commercial varieties.

Come and see it growing. I guarantee same to be in perfect health. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

When in Philadelphia Be Sure to Look Us Up

Sometimes when you get out and look around and see what other folks in your line of trade are doing, you get some good ideas for running your own business—which prompts us to suggest that you might be decidedly interested in our establishment at Wyncote, and in the work we are doing here.

So this is a cordial invitation to you to come out to Wyncote to look us over whenever you have a couple of hours to spare in Philadelphia—you can do it, comfortably, in that time, though when you get out here you may possibly be interested enough to conclude to prolong the visit!

We're easily reached—only 25 minutes from Reading Terminal, 12th and Market Streets, Philadelphia. We have fine train service—fifty trains each way on week days—so you can suit your convenience both going and coming.

Our ranges aggregate 130,000 feet of glass; here we grow the Palms, Carnations, Orchids and Roses about which we've told you so often in our advertisements.

Call on us; we're always ready for visitors, and will make you welcome.

J. T. Butterworth.

J. T. Butterworth keeps adding to the numbers of his orchids, not alone by importations, but by skillful propagation at home. There are few growers who can increase their stock of choice cattleyas as Mr. Butterworth does. Cattleya Trianae is the variety most largely grown here and large quantities were open, varying from pure white to deep pink, some beautiful forms being noted. If we mistake not, one or two specimens from here will open visitors' eyes at the coming S. A. F. show. All other cattleyas were looking well. Lælia anceps, both white and pink, carried a fine crop. Quantities of Dendrobium nobile and Wardianum had the buds separated and some ready to open. Miltonias are well done. They are not the easiest orchids to grow, but are quite at home here, as are the fractious odontoglossums.

The crop of Cypripedium insigne was nearly over for the season. A nice crop of phalaenopsis spikes were ready to open and some good cymbidiums, including Tracynum and insigne, were carrying strong spikes. Of the yellow forms of Cypripedium insigne quite a big batch is being worked up. In the carnation houses Pink Delight looked as fine as had ever been seen. Beacon, Enchantress, Winsor and White Perfection all looked well. Lily of the valley was excellent, the flowering pips carrying fine dark foliage. Tulips and narcissi are each grown in quantity, the yellow Prince tulips being of extra quality.

EDWARDSVILLE, ILL.

Referring to the item in The Review of February 23 regarding the business change contemplated by J. F. Ammann, it is stated that Mr. Ammann is arranging to turn his greenhouse plant over to three of his old employees, J. H. Buchsenschutz, Edward Buchsenschutz and Le Roy Smith, who expect in the near future to incorporate what will be known as the J. F. Ammann Co. The first named has been in the employ of Mr. Ammann for sixteen years, the last ten of which he has had entire charge of the greenhouses, as foreman. Le Roy Smith has had charge of the rose section and has also been with Mr. Ammann for over ten years. Edw. Buchsenschutz has spent eight years on the place and during the latter part has had charge of the carnations. The company will be incorporated for $6,000, stock fully paid up, and will take over all the stock and equipment about July 1, and in time purchase the entire plant, including greenhouses and five acres of land, on which it will hold an option for the present. Mr. Ammann expects to hold a few shares of stock in the new company for a while, in order to get the boys well started and also to be somewhat in touch with the business he has spent the greater part of his life in. The active management will be in charge of J. H. Buchsenschutz.

Mr. Ammann has been connected with the florists' business for over twenty-five years, and the present plant was established twenty years ago with 3,000 feet of small sash houses. This has been rebuilt three times, until now it consists of 40,000 feet of modern glass. Mr. Ammann will continue to make Edwardsville his home and devote most of his time to his retail stores at Alton and East St. Louis, purchasing stock for these from the home plant. The young men will make wholesale growing a specialty.

Lowell, Mass.—H. J. F. De Thestrup, formerly foreman for A. M. Davenport, at Watertown, Mass., is now grower and manager for Frank P. Putnam, the carnation specialist of this city.

New Marguerite Mrs. F. Sander

NEW MARGUERITE, MRS. F. SANDER.

The most valuable flowering pot plant which has been offered to the trade since the introduction of the Lorraine Begonia.

In this we have unquestionably the most important flowering plant introduced in recent years, which, like its predecessors, the French Marguerite and the later introductions, white and blush Queen Alexandra, will be grown extensively for cut flowers during the winter, while its pure white color will make it more valuable than any as a pot plant for Easter decorations.

Unlike all other Marguerites, its color is of the purest glistening white throughout; in size it frequently measures 5 inches across; the center of the flower is a mass of closely arranged fringed florets; these are surrounded or edged by the broad, shining white ray petals, forming a flower which reminds one forcibly of a glorified double Pyrethrum. These are produced on long stems with a freedom not known in other varieties of the Marguerite.

The entire stock of this grand novelty has been placed in our hands for American distribution and we are now booking orders for delivery the latter part of April or early in May:

Good 2 1/4-in. pots, $2.00 per doz.; $15.00 per 100.

The above prices are intended for the trade only.

The Market.

We are unable to report any decided improvement in the market. On one or two days better clearances have been effected, but at a sacrifice in values. More flowers are arriving than the buying public wants and, with the near approach of Lent and a cessation of social activity, the chances for a stronger market for some weeks are far from bright.

Carnations have so far this season constituted the body of the market, and nearly every grower expects an exceptionally fine crop from now on. Violets are to be had at almost any price and seem to be moving fairly well. A great influx of tulips and jonquils came just at a time when the people were ready for a change, and were all the more welcome when the bulbous stock began to go cheap, as this made a clean-up possible. Cyclamens, primroses and pans of tulips and hyacinths are here in quantity and sell well.

There is an exceptionally good demand for azaleas, which are of especially good quality; light colors are in more demand than the darker ones. Roses are coming in greater numbers, but it will be some time before there is a glut of any size. Sweet peas are among the best sellers at present, and the demand for them is increasing every year; the best bring about 75 cents per hundred.

The temperature has been about 38 to 40 degrees at night.

Various Notes.

Edward Kress, of 2506 East North avenue, gave the members of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club an oyster roast at his establishment March 1, which was the fiftieth anniversary of the business, which was started by his father at the present location, adjoining one of the large cemeteries.

Chas. L. Seybold, one of the crack bowlers of the Florists' Club, was confined to his home with a sprained ankle for over ten days; it occurred just as the bowling team was finishing a match with another local team. Q.

FINE FERNS

Ready For Immediate Retail Sale

We have an exceptionally fine and large stock of Ferns in the following varieties—first-class plants of exceedingly good value—plants that will please the most critical buyers, both in regard to quality and value.

Nephrolepis Elegantissima (improved). The finest of this type—never showing a Boston frond; has not reverted in the last four years. Fine plants, 4-in. pots, $2.50 per doz.; 6-in., $6.00 per doz.; 8-in., $12.00 per doz.; large specimens in 12-in. pans, $3.00 to $5.00 each.

Nephrolepis Elegantissima Compacta. This bears the same relation to Elegantissima that Scottii does to Bostoniensis. It is a dwarf, compact plant, especially fine in the small sizes. Fine plants, 4-in. pots, $3.00 per doz.; 6-in., $6.00 per doz.

Nephrolepis Scholzei. Fine plants, 3½-in. pots, $2.50 per doz.; 6-in. pans, $6.00 per doz.; 8-in. pans, $12.00 per doz.

Nephrolepis Bostoniensis. Extra strong plants, 8-in. pans, $12.00 per doz.

Nephrolepis Scottii. 8-in. pans, $12.00 per doz.

Small Ferns for Fern Pans. Best and hardiest varieties, assorted: Pteris Mayii, Wimsettii, Adiantoides, Aspidium Tsusimensense, Cyrtomium Falcatum, etc. Strong plants, 2½-in. pots, $3.50 per 100.

CROTONS. Nice assortment, well colored, 5-in., $9.00 per dozen.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Business last week was satisfactory to all concerned. Roses were not any too plentiful, while carnations were in heavy supply. Toward the end of the week the demand was not equal to the occasion. Bulbous stock is moving nicely, as are also peas, violets and valley. Considerable southern smilax was used for decorating last week.

Various Notes.

Herman Knope, foreman for Breitmeyer's, is suffering from a nervous breakdown, having been ill practically all winter.

B. Schroeter has commenced getting his temporary quarters at 90 Broadway into shape, so that he can move on a few days' notice.

Philip Breitmeyer and wife returned home February 26. Mrs. Breitmeyer had been in the east, while the ex-mayor spent a few weeks in Cuba and the south. He will address the members of the Detroit Florists' Club Monday evening, March 6, giving a talk on the trip. H. S.

BAR HARBOR, ME.

John H. Stalford, who last fall purchased the property known as the Malvern Greenhouses, with an adjoining tract of land, has completed the work of renovating and rebuilding, and his place is now a model of completeness and convenience. The grounds themselves are particularly attractive, being almost entirely surrounded by tall trees.

The old greenhouses and other buildings were removed and a new range, containing 11,000 square feet of glass, was built. Two houses will be used for melons in summer and for carnations the rest of the season. Besides these there is a grapery, a house for palms and ferns, two plant houses and a storage house. All the work of construction, including the installation of the heating system, was in charge of the Lord & Burnham Co. The heating outfit includes one Burnham boiler, two Hitchings boilers and a Castle circulator. Adjoining the greenhouses is a roomy and handily arranged service building, containing an office with a fireproof vault, a potting room with seed cases, a tool shed, a packing room, a bulb room, a sleeping apartment provided with modern conveniences, and a basement for storage.

The old reliable firm, GODFREY ASCHMANN, is not connected with any other firm and is more active than ever

PREPARE FOR EASTER

FROM WHOM WILL WE PURCHASE OUR EASTER SUPPLY?

From our old friend, Godfrey Aschmann, of Philadelphia, of course. He was our man of the past and he shall be our man this Easter, and, as long as he ships us good plants, he shall be our man in the future. He always treated us right before, and we can rely upon him. What he advertises is true and is no bluff.

What Florists Say About Our Lilies

Daily visitors to our establishment, among them two well known growers, one from Cincinnati, Ohio, the other from South Orange, N. J., say: "You have the best lilies we ever have seen on our visits to many florists' establishments. We congratulate you. You certainly can be proud."

An immense stock of choice Easter plants, blooming Easter week, or earlier, if desired, are now ready for immediate shipment. Come yourself or mail your order direct to headquarters.

Our reputation in growing Easter plants for the wholesale market, to which we ship all over the entire country, Canada and Mexico, from the Atlantic to the Pacific oceans, for many years past, is sufficient guarantee to prove our ability.

Go to Headquarters for Azaleas

Azalea Indica is a specialty with us, grown for us under contract by an Azalea specialist in Belgium for the last twenty years. Have four houses full of the choicest. Only best well-known American varieties are imported, and are now in excellent condition, covered with buds, just right for Easter. We ship only good stock, full of buds and flowers.

What is the name of the best double pink azalea? Mme. Van der Cruyssen is the name, originated by the well-known azalea specialist Mr. Van der Cruyssen of Belgium. Millions are raised every year and shipped to every point of the globe from Belgium. We have a big stock on hand of this so well-known and favorite variety in tip top condition. Every plant is as round as an apple, covered with buds, just right for Easter trade. 6 to 7-in. pots, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each.

Deutsche Perle. This is the best pure double white, 6-in. pots, 75c, $1.00 to $1.50. Outside the Deutsche Perle we have no white to offer in small sizes, because the other varieties, Niobe and Bernard Andrea alba, of which we had a large stock, during transportation across the sea and during winter lost all their buds and have to be carried over for another year. This first variety the year imported does not do well, but makes fine plants the next year.

Bernard Andrea alba (white). We have mostly big plants, $1.50, $2.00 to $3.00 each; a few smaller sizes, 75c, $1.00 to $1.25; Niobe, also white, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each. Vervaeana, De Schryveriana (double variegated), 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00.

Professeur Wolters, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. Pres. Oswald de Kerchove, $1.00, $1.25 to $2.00. Empress of India, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. Apollo (red), 50c, 60c, 75c to $1.00. Other good varieties, such as Helene Thelemann, etc., 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00. When we are out of one color, we send the next similar color; also, if we are out of the size ordered, we send the next size either above or below the price mentioned.

Hydrangea Otaksa never was as good as this year, green as grass, full of buds, every branch stocked up. 5½, 6 to 7-in. pots, 25c, 35c, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50.

Easter Lilies, Lillum multiflorum, the genuine Japanese Easter Lily, directly imported by us. We have a friend in Japan who looks after our interests there. He picks out for us only the good, healthy ones, and marks them while they are growing, the 10-in. bulbs, and therefore he ships to us the cream of the plants of Japan. We have lilies this year to burn; can supply, if nothing happens, every customer and others who want lilies. If you see them growing in our greenhouses you must all admit they are "crack-erjacks." We sell them cheap, too. Where other florists get 15c per bud, we only charge you 10c per bud, for plants in 6-in. pots, having 5, 8, 10 and more buds to the plant. Plants under 5 buds, 12c per bud, 6-in. pots.

Tourneol Tulips, best double tulips, variegated, three bulbs in a pot, $1.80 per dozen pots; $14.00 per 100.

Begonia, new, improved Erfordii, 5-in. pots, $2.50 per dozen. Flambeau, 5-in., $2.00 per dozen; 6-in., $3.00 per dozen.

Primula obconica. 5-in., $2.00 to $2.50 per dozen.

Yellow and White Daisies, 5-in. pots, $2.00 dozen.

Cineraria Hybrida Grandiflora. Henry F. Michell Co.'s new improved strain. Our plants and flowers of this strain are twice the size of those of other years, with perfect green foliage, almost as big as a bushel basket, 6-in. pots, 25c, 35c, 50c, 75c to $1.00 each.

Spiraea Gladstone. This variety, owing to the dry summer in Holland last year, will be very scarce this Easter, but we, fortunately, secured enough to fill two houses full, and they are now in fine condition, full of buds, 6-in. to 7-in. pots, 50c, 75c to $1.00 each.

Ipomoea Noctiflora, purest white moonflower, for which we have a world-wide reputation, now ready, 2½-in. pots, $5.00 per 100.

Hyacinths, four best colors, King of the Blues (dark blue), Grand Maitre (light blue), Gertrude (best pink), La Grandesse (best white), right for Easter, in cold frame, 4-in. pots, 10c to 12c.

Crimson Rambler, nicely staked up, 30, 36, 40, 50 inches high, 50c, 75c to $1.00.

Daffodil Von Sion, double-nosed bulbs. This is the best double yellow narcissus in existence. 5½ to 6-in. pots, 3 bulbs in one pot, $2.50 to $3.00 per dozen pots.

Araucaria Robusta Compacta, Glauca and Excelsa. Our reputation of being one of the largest importers and shippers of this beautiful evergreen decorative plant is so well known, dating far back into the 19th century, that our name, as well as the Araucaria itself, shall never die out, and is still fresh in people's minds same as when we first started. Why the Araucaria is so popular is because it is an ancient plant, kept by Greeks and Romans as a special favorite in their household, as a good omen.

Araucaria Robusta Compacta, specimen plants, 7 to 8-in. pots, 4 to 5 years old, 3, 4 and 5 tiers, 20, 25 and 30 inches high, same in width, $1.50, $1.75, $2.00, $2.50 to $3.00 each.

Araucaria Excelsa Glauca. This is a beautiful blue variety, very graceful and beautiful. Specimen plants, 6-in., 7-in., 8-in. pots, 4 and 5 years old, 4, 5 and 6 tiers, 20, 25, 30 and 32 in. high, same in width, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75 to $2.00 each.

Araucaria Excelsa, 3, 4 and 5 years old, 4, 5, 6 and 7 tiers, 6-in. pots, 25, 30, 35 and 40 in. high, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each. Can meet all applications.

Two houses of ferns. Scholzei and Whitmani ferns, 6-in., 7-in. and 8-in. pots, 75c, $1.00 to $1.50; 7-in. pots, very large, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50.

Boston Ferns, 5½-in. to 6-in., 7-in. and 8-in. pots, 40c, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50.

Scottii Ferns, 5½-in. to 6-in., 7-in. and 8-in. pots, 40c, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50.

Asparagus Plumosus, 4-in. pots, 10c.

Kentia Forsteriana, in fine shape, 5½ to 6-in. pots, 4, 5 and 6-year-old, 30, 35, 40 and 45 inches high, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $2.00 to $2.50.

Kentia Belmoreana, 5, 6 to 7-year-old, 5½, 6 to 7-in. pots, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each; 4-in., 20 to 25 inches high, 20c to 25c.

Kentia Belmoreana, combination plants, 3 plants in 6 and 7-in. pots, 25, 30 to 35 inches high, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50 each. This is a special bargain, seldom offered.

All goods must travel at purchaser's risk. Cash with order, please. Please state if you want stock shipped in or out of pots. All bulbs are now under cover in cold frame and will bloom in two weeks from time of bringing them in the greenhouse.

CYCLAMEN.

GIANT CYCLAMEN. For the last 15 years we always select ¼ of our seed-bearing cyclamen stock before Xmas, to assure early blooming plants, and claim the finest commercial strain in this country, no fizzle of many so called English varieties. Our aim is strong growers, that don't have to be petted to be grown into a choice salable plant, a well built five petalled flower, many of them at one time, with well marked foliage; every plant an ideal, a prize winner. Received first and second prizes at the Toledo Florists' Club meeting early in November when blooming cyclamen were scarce. We back our claims with stock worth seeing and invite everybody for inspection. Here is one of the many letters we receive from satisfied customers, W. H. Gordon, Richmond, Va., says: "We were so much pleased with the 500 cyclamen seedlings shipped us last week that we have decided to order 500 more." Transplanted seedlings, ready for 2½ or 3-in., $3.00 per 100, $25.00 per 1000. Cash. Cultural directions with every order.
C. Winterich, Cyclamen Specialist, Defiance, O.

NOVELTIES.

REAL NOVELTIES AND NOVEL REALITIES
IN HARDY PLANTS.

The biggest collection offered anywhere, is found in our NOVELTY CATALOGUE, just out. Of great interest to the amateur and commercial grower alike.

It describes and illustrates uncommon plants of singular beauty, desirability, and simplicity of growth; inexpensive to acquire.

Besides our low prices, plants are big, making them valuable, in small or large quantities.

Mailed along with our illustrated wholesale catalogue of Hardy Perennials, etc., on receipt of three 2c stamps, which pays postage only, and which amount is credited on first order.

The book will be welcomed for the lucid, comprehensive, as well as the practical character of its contents. Handsomely illustrated. 168 pages, 5x7 inches. 50 cents

Water Gardening.

By PETER BISSET. This work supersedes all other books that have previously been written on the subject of aquatics and their surroundings, and gives in full detail all the practical information necessary to the selection, grouping and successful cultivation of aquatic and other plants required in the making of a water garden and its environments, and covering all conditions from that of the amateur with a few plants in tubs, to the large estate or park. $2.50

The Nursery Book.

By L. H. BAILEY. A complete guide to the multiplication of plants. The book comprises full practical directions for sowing, the making of all kinds of layers, stools, cuttings, propagation by bulbs and tubers, and very complete accounts of all the leading kinds of budding, grafting and inarching. An alphabetical catalogue of about 1500 plants—of fruit, kitchen-garden, ornamental and greenhouse species—with directions for their multiplication. Cloth. $1.45

The Pruning Book.

By L. H. BAILEY. This is the first American work exclusively devoted to pruning. It differs from most other treatises on this subject in that the author takes particular pains to explain the principles of each operation in every detail. Specific advice is given on the pruning of the various kinds of fruits and ornamental trees, shrubs and hedges. Considerable space is devoted to the pruning and training of grape vines, both American and foreign. 530 pages. Illustrated. $1.50

Greenhouse Heating.GOOD OIL BURNER WANTED.

I am a young florist, with one year in my own greenhouses. I have been burning soft coal, but find it to be much trouble and dirty. I would like to burn crude oil next year, but I do not know of any good burner. I have 7,350 square feet of glass. Do you know of any good burner? If not, will you please ask the readers of The Review if any florist is using the crude oil in his boilers, also what kind of a burner he is using?
K. L. K.

If any reader can recommend a burner The Review will be pleased to publish the name and address of the maker.

BOILER IS TOO LARGE.

This summer I put in a new boiler. Everyone advised me to put in one large enough for present needs, with a good margin, saying it would not take much more fuel than a smaller one. I did as advised, but think it takes more fuel than one which would do the work for fifty per cent or more of the time. I do not regret putting in the big boiler, but should like to know whether I could save enough on fuel to justify me in installing also a smaller boiler. During fifty per cent or more of the winter 1,000 linear feet of 1-inch pipe, with ten pounds of steam, give me the required temperature. Only three or four times during the winter do I need the maximum of about 3,500 feet of 1-inch pipe.

My boiler is a return flue boiler, 44 inches x 12 feet, and contains forty-six 3-inch flues. The grate is 45x48 inches. The stack is twenty-four inches wide and thirty feet high. I think the combustion is practically perfect. Would a smaller boiler be a paying investment, and what percentage could I save?
L. C. B.

The boiler is evidently of about forty horse-power and should be large enough for 6,000 or 8,000 linear feet of 1-inch pipe in the coils. If 3,500 linear feet is all that is required in the most severe weather, it would save at least twenty-five per cent of the fuel if a twenty horse-power boiler could be installed, and perhaps fifty per cent at times when only 1,000 linear feet is needed. These figures are mainly approximations, as nothing is stated regarding the size and construction of the house.

It is, of course, always well to have the boiler of ample size to furnish the required heat without being forced, but the above estimate of the capacity of the boiler in terms of radiation allows for an excess of at least twenty-five per cent.

A SUCCESSION OF TROUBLES.

We are having trouble in the heating of our greenhouse, which is 15x20, with a shed on the north end, eight feet wide. When we purchased our boiler, a Wilks hot water heater, 36x24, we installed it with an outlet connecting to a pipe on each side, which formed a continuous circuit, with bends at the ends, until they connected at the south end with the inlet pipe. We placed four pipes under each bench, and these, with the inlet, made five under the middle bench, each having a circuit of more than 100 feet. The outlet pipe went up from the rear of the heater about three feet and then at right angles to the south end, with the expansion pipe attached to the inflow just twelve inches from the heater, then up eight feet, then to the right four feet and then up eight inches to the tank. First the circulation was too slow and the frequent back action caused the heater will force the hot water throughout the system and do it without putting on a pressure that is liable to cause leakage. It does it by mechanically setting the water in motion and keeping it moving until the desired heat is just where you want it.

The Castle Circulator has entirely cured the faults of hot-water systems which could not be satisfactorily operated before it was put in. We would like to show you the results of tests.

Our new booklet tells how the circulator works.

to leak, but the worst of all was the overflowing of the tank, siphoning the water out.

Then we were advised that the system was all wrong and were supplied with a pencil sketch showing how the work ought to be done. We enclose the sketch. In changing, we left out the longest pipes, thus having only three pipes under some of the benches, instead of four. Our expansion pipe still bothers us nearly as badly as before, but, with experience, we have more control of it by lessening the fire. Of course we heat it so the water would boil if it had space. During our coldest spells, 8 degrees above zero, we could hardly keep the temperature above 40 degrees in the far corners. We may have much colder weather, of course, and we do not know how we can keep from freezing. Our being two and one-half feet below the ground level helps us. It is a tight house and well protected on all sides, except the south-east.

If the expansion is the safety valve of the hot water, should it not be moved a short distance farther away, which would place it at practically the farthest point on the system? Of course we can put it where back action can not touch it, if that is all that is necessary to remedy the trouble. The capacity of the heater is for a much larger house and we ought to be able to keep this baby plant hot if we wished, instead of holding it at 50 to 60 degrees, which we cannot do now.

We have one air valve at the highest part of the outflow, and though all pipes are carefully tested with a level we often find air in it. The heater now leaks badly and we fill the tank twice a day, eight to fourteen gallons at a time.

J. F. T.

The sketch shows one 2-inch overhead flow pipe and nine 1½-inch returns, distributed in three coils under the benches. This should make it possible to maintain a temperature of 45 degrees in zero weather, provided the piping is properly arranged. One important point, the relative height of the heater and return pipes, is not clear. The heater is evidently several times as large as is necessary, and, with the piping arranged as described, it is not strange that the boiler is leaking or that it boils over.

Kroeschell Versus Cast Iron

The No. 7 Boiler I bought from you is heating 14,000 square feet of glass; I think it can take care of 16,000 feet. I do not have any trouble to keep up temperature of 50 degrees in the coldest weather. I fire only once after 12 o'clock midnight. The boiler has given perfect satisfaction. I have four cast iron boilers—like the "Kroeschell" the best of all. If any one wishes to inquire about your boiler, let them write me, for I think your boilers are good ones.

the farther end of the house. The proper way is to carry the flow pipe as quickly as possible to a point about two feet below the ridge and then run it, with a drop of two inches, to the farther end of the house. Connect the expansion tank with the highest point of the flow pipe. There will then be no need of air valves and no chance for air to collect in the flow pipe. No change is necessary in the returns, except that they should be raised as high as possible. Really the best way, unless they are now above the top of the heater, is to place them on the side walls, just below the plates. If more than 45 degrees is desired, the number of return pipes should be increased, two pipes being added for each five degrees of additional heat desired, with 2½-inch main flow and return. Care should be taken that the expansion tank does not freeze, as an explosion might result.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The business of last week was really good among the store men out in the west end. They say they had a great deal of social work of all kinds and society was crowding in as many functions as possible before Lent.

The wholesalers have had a good demand, but are not cleaning up daily now, as stock of all kinds is plentiful at all the wholesale houses and prices are not nearly so high. The violet growers at Kirkwood say the cold weather of last week saved the violet crop, the previous week being too hot for them to continue blooming. So this week the market had a good supply of them, as usual. Roses are becoming more plentiful and some good Killarneys, White Killarneys and Richmonds were seen at greatly reduced prices. Of carnations there were more than the demand could use in any one day last week, and good fancies could be had for $2 per hundred in all varieties.

Bulb stock was heavy in quantity and of good quality all of last week. All the wholesalers were stocked up with it and prices on this, too, have been cut. Sweet peas are much too plentiful for the demand and, unless low prices prevail, are left over. Calla lilies have been plentiful, with prices at $10 per hundred. In green goods, too, there is enough of everything.

Various Notes.

Fred Ammann has advised his friends in St. Louis that he has not retired altogether from business, but is just going to "let up" some and will retain

CLAY CENTER, KAN.

There are three railroads running through this town and C. Humfeld has worked up an excellent shipping business in funeral designs, covering the surrounding towns. He has been exceptionally busy of late. Carnations are in excellent condition, the Enchantress varieties being grown most extensively. Winsor and Queen Louise also do well here and O. P. Bassett is grown for red. Roses are good, but have been off crop for some time. The business in rooted cuttings is heavier than ever this season. Three houses are devoted to lettuce and radishes for the home trade. Rhubarb grown under the benches is a profitable crop. Preparations are now being made for planting a large quantity of early vegetables. As many as twenty-two acres of sweet potatoes are grown.

S. D. Brandt also finds business in rooted cuttings heavy this season. Pelargoniums are one of his specialties. The propagating benches are full of young stock. He has four houses of roses and three houses of carnations and has found the demand this season exceeding his supply. Mrs. Brandt has been ill for more than two months.

W. H. Humfeld, of Kansas City, recently visited his brother here.

LENOX, MASS.

About 250 florists and others were present at the annual assembly and ball of the Lenox Horticultural Society, held in the town hall, and though this attendance was not as large as that of some former years, yet the affair was in some respects a greater success than any of its predecessors. Indeed, it was stated that there were just enough participants to make the dancing enjoyable. The music was furnished by Carl Esher's orchestra.

James O. Clifford was chairman of the committee of arrangements and he and his aids arranged well for the affair. The others on the committee were George W. Ferguson, Frank H. Butler, Robert Grindrod and L. H. Peters.

On the reception committee were: George Foulsham, chairman; Alex MacConnachie, A. H. Wingett, George H. Thompson, William Henry, E. J. Norman, S. Carlquist, E. Jenkins and Walter Jack.

The floor committee consisted of S. Whitney, Frank Howard, William G. Clifford, H. P. Wookey, Fred Heermans and A. J. Loveless.

The grand march was led by President George Foulsham and Mrs. Foulsham.

NIKOTEEN

The most effective and economical material there is for spraying plants and blooms.

Nikoteen is skillfully extracted from leaf tobacco and carefully refined, it is clean and easy to apply. Nikoteen does the work when vaporized either in pans, on pipes or over a flame.

Nature's Best Fertilizer is Sheep Manure

Sheep's Head Brand furnishes the valuable organic matter and humus necessary to grow crops. It improves the mechanical conditions of the soil.

Makes compact clay more open and porous, makes light, sandy soils more retentive of moisture, keeps soluble plant foods within reach of rootlets of growing vegetation.

Farmers, orchardists, florists, truck and market gardeners should send for our book "Fertile Facts" to learn how properly and most effectively to fertilize the soil.

The Engine Cylinder of The Standard Pumping Engine.

Standard Durability

Durability is one of the chief points of advantage in Standard Pumping Engines, just as it is a feature of all high priced automobile engines, and the high grade stationary engines for electric light and power purposes. The Standard engine design is similar to that of the best automobiles in having a vertical, water cooled engine. The vertical engine is far preferable to the horizontal for its superior wearing qualities, as long experience has demonstrated. The inlet and exhaust valves are of the vertical poppet type, are mechanically operated by means of steel cams, and have extremely long guide bushings, which hold them in line and absolutely air-tight. The side strain on horizontal valves gradually wears them out, but the vertical valve, mechanically operated, is the acme of durability.

The Market.

Trade has been fairly good during the last week. Funeral work has been quite plentiful. Flowers are not quite so scarce. Carnations still retail at 75 cents per dozen, roses at $2 per dozen; single tulips at 60 cents, double tulips at 75 cents per dozen; daffodils at 50 cents and 60 cents per dozen; Paper Whites at 50 cents per dozen, retail; violets at $1 per hundred blooms, sweet peas at $1 per hundred blooms, snapdragons at $1 per dozen, callas at $2 per dozen, Easter lilies at $3 per dozen. Freesia still helps out, as also does alyssum.

The plant trade continues good. Some nice flowering plants are to be seen in the store windows.

During the last week we have had more days of sunshine than we have had for months. The weather is mild, with occasional cold nights.

Various Notes.

E. H. Chamberlain had a nice window display of flowering plants Saturday, February 25, consisting of azaleas, tulips, cyclamens, daffodils, lily of the valley and cinerarias.

William P. Peirce was busy last week with funeral work. He reports a good call for plants.

Peter Murray is sending in some nice obconica primroses. His place is in fine shape.

R. E. Nofftz is cutting some excellent bulb stock. He had a handsome window display last week.

R. H. Woodhouse had a good wedding order recently, requiring a large quantity of palms, ferns and flowering plants. W. L.

Greenfield, Mass.—E. A. Richards, of the Sunny Dell Greenhouses, makes a specialty of growing carnations for the retail trade, and he modestly states that he hopes some of his stock may be good enough for exhibition at the Boston show in March. He says he has a light pink sport of White Perfection that he is watching closely, believing that it will prove to be valuable. He thinks highly of May Day and expects to plant it more extensively next season.

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet. An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

PITTSBURG.The Market.

Pittsburg has been having some of the most delightful weather; the first robin has made its appearance and the buds of a fine magnolia are bursting and showing the new green, and flowers are becoming a little more plentiful.

Roses are fine in color, but are still on the scarce side, although carnations are coming in quantities that satisfy all demands. Bulbous stock is quite plentiful, and the tulips are fine. Violets are coming about right to clean up every day. Smilax is not plentiful, and adiantum is decidedly scarce.

There has been nothing large doing, but the regular trade has been quite satisfactory, and February was quite a good month.

Various Notes.

Geo. Schomer, of Connellsville, Pa., lost one of his greenhouses by fire, caused by the burning of a neighbor's stable; the loss was considerable, as the house was filled with plants.

Paul Randolph, who is quite a chicken fancier, captured a few prizes at the poultry show with his fancy bantams and pigeons.

Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Rowe, of Titusville, Pa., were visitors last week.

Hoo-Hoo.

LONDON, ONT.

The range of J. Gammage & Sons now contains fifteen houses, each from 200 to 400 feet long, with service building 50x68 feet in the center. About 60,000 feet is used for growing cut flowers and the remaining ten houses are given to growing plants, principally for Christmas and Easter trade. In cut flowers, roses, carnations, chrysanthemums, sweet peas and violets are grown. These are for the retail trade, and with the addition of the bloom from 150,000 to 200,000 bulbs are sold in the retail store. The plants are largely sold at wholesale, the shipping points covering practically the whole of the Dominion. The plant is heated from a battery of five seventy horsepower boilers, so arranged that one or more may be used, as the conditions of the weather demand. In addition to the range of glass, several acres of shrubs, herbaceous plants and perennials are grown. Peonies have been an excellent cut flower crop for spring.

GLAZING POINTS are Positively the Best. Last Forever. Over 50,000 pounds now in use. A sure preventive of glass slipping. Effective on large or small glass. Easy to drive. Easy to extract. Two sizes, $\frac{3}{8}$ and $\frac{1}{2}$ in., 40c per lb.; by mail, 16c extra; 7 lbs. for \$2.50; 15 lbs. for \$5.00, by express. For sale by the trade. Randolph & McClements, Successors to Chas. T. Siebert, Baum and Beatty Sts., Pittsburg, Pa.

CINCINNATI.

The Gateway to the South.

With the advent of bulbous stock in quantity and a heavy supply of carnations, the market became easy in nearly all lines. A heavy shipping business has taken up many blooms. Local retail business is creating no exceptional stir. Many consignments, the quality of which is extremely good for dumped stock, have been arriving from smaller growing centers.

All roses except red are now apparently sufficient in quantity, and the quality, too, is getting back to mid-winter form. Richmond and Rhea Reid are off crop and, judging from what does come into the market, it will be a fortnight before they are strong in numbers. The market on Beauties is easy.

In the early part of the week the wholesalers were long on carnations. The call is strong for white, which alone cleans up properly. Enchantress, too, enjoys a good call, but is arriving in such large quantities that the demand does not absorb it as fast as the white. The prices of all have dropped a notch.

Bulbous stock is now having its inning. The good hyacinths, tulips, jonquils, daffodils and freesias find a ready sale, but the poorer stock cleans up only at low prices. Plenty callas may be easily obtained, while Easter lilies are again here in quantity. Lily of the valley is a glut. Violets, both single and double, are more than sufficient in quantity to meet requests. Sweet peas clean up every day.

The market is long on everything in the line of greens, especially good Sprengeri and plumosus.

Various Notes.

Miss Edith Kyrk reports that Gus Adrian is cutting extra fine Narcissus Victoria, Dutch hyacinths and tulips.

Ed Fries has a fine crop of Formosa lilies coming on. The stems are long, stiff and erect and nearly every plant has five or more buds. He also has a large quantity of Spiraea Gladstone that look fine.

Among the auto enthusiasts that came to this city for the show were Mr. and Mrs. Dudley, of Parkersburg, W. Va.; Mrs. Buck, of Washington C. H., O., and O. C. Heberling, of Georgetown, Ky.

Charles Bosworth, of J. M. McCullough's Sons Co., is wearing a smile that won't come off. It's a boy.

Peter Herb, of Mt. Healthy, O., is cutting excellent hyacinths for Otto Walke.

Local florists regret to hear of the death of S. J. Galloway, of Eaton, O. The funeral services were held Sunday afternoon, February 26.

The following were among the recent callers: C. S. Ford, of Philadelphia, representing A. Herrmann, of New York; Rupert E. Hall, representing Reed & Keller, New York, and William Eisner, of the Newark Paraffine & Parchment Co., Newark, N. J.

Don't forget the bowling on Monday, March 6, at Finke & Craig's, 120 East Sixth street. C. H. H.

Osborne, Kan.—John McFarland is preparing plans for the erection of an iron-frame greenhouse here this spring, for commercial use.

COST

Should not be the only consideration in Greenhouse Building

KING

Greenhouses, however, are really economical because the additional, put into extra strength and rigidity, is a very small part of the total cost, and adds many times its value to the life of the house, and the satisfaction it gives.

There Is No Use Talking When You Are Up Against Facts

The facts are these: In all our quarter of a century of greenhouse building not one, no not one grower has ever gone back to a wooden house after having bought one of our Half Iron Frame Houses. Neither have they ever bought a Half Iron Frame after buying one of our Full Iron Frame.

Don't you go backward when the other fellows are doing their darnedest to go forward. Get in line—and keep there. Write us.

THE RETAIL

FLORIST.....

AUTOMOBILE DELIVERY CARS.

The New vs. the Old.

Men in all lines of business are pondering over the question of adopting the automobile for delivery purposes. Many have done so to a limited extent, while some already have abolished the horse. It is only in the last few years that automobile concerns have gone extensively into the manufacture of commercial vehicles. The pioneer companies are all getting into that end of the business and in this city (Detroit), at least, new companies, manufacturing commercial automobiles exclusively, are springing up like mushrooms.

It is the use of the motor car for business purposes that will put it on a substantial basis. The number of people who have used horses only for pleasure or convenience is small compared with the thousands who have employed horses as a means of business transportation—for doctors, salesmen, rural mail carriers, delivery purposes, etc. Here lies the life of the motor car.

Florists' Cars—A Difficult Problem.

The practical business automobile is still in the process of development, although the progress has been remarkably fast; the years to come will see many changes, and naturally many improvements. Nevertheless, there are already many good commercial cars on the market that are adapted to our business. I am speaking from the standpoint of the retail florist, who is up against a problem such as perhaps no other merchant has to contend with.

A florist is expected to have a neat, stylish wagon. Our goods will not stand much vibration or jarring, or exposure to frost or extreme heat. Flowers can not be delivered "any old time;" often a half hour's delay is fatal. Except during the holiday rushes, as at Easter and Christmas, the average flower store does not have enough deliveries to make in one day to warrant keeping a number of wagons, one for each section of the city; consequently one wagon, perhaps, must deliver to the two extreme points in a city on the same day.

Comparative Cost.

In the business with which the writer is identified we are using an automobile for delivering and hardly a week passes but some one says, "Do you find it cheaper than the horse?" People might just as well compare electric lights and kerosene lamps.

We all know that the actual cost in dollars and cents for lighting our stores with electricity is more than it was when we used kerosene. Why, then, do we use electricity? Because it is clean, safe, convenient, odorless, flexible, gives a better light, and modern times demand it. Taking all these reasons into consideration, the extra cost of electric light seldom is considered. So it is, or will eventually be, with the automobile.

One-half to three-fourths of an hour spent every morning in oiling up and cleaning the mechanism of an auto will keep it in fine condition. A horse requires about that much time for grooming each day, to say nothing of the time for feeding at morning, noon and evening. And if a horse comes into the stall warm at night, he can not be fed at once. The stable also needs attention every day.

Speed and Convenience.

You can drive an auto all day long, seven days a week, at a speed of twelve to fifteen miles per hour. It never gets tired, but what of the horse?

If you have a long run to make, to some suburban town, say twenty-five miles, round trip, it can be done in one and one-half to two hours with the auto. In fact, as soon as you have the facilities for quicker and more prompt delivering, so many uses for it will spring up that ere long you will be wondering how it was ever possible to do the work with horses.

Tire Trouble.

Many florists dread the thought of tire trouble. This can be entirely eliminated by equipping the car with solid or cushion tires, although for a light delay caused by an occasional puncture or blow-out does not compare with the annoyance of the horse with dull shoes when the roads are icy, and the delays at the horseshoer's.

When an auto is standing idle, the cost can only be measured by the money invested, and this is not as much as horse-feed, unless the first cost of your car ran into the thousands, which is unnecessary.

Many say an auto is a fine advertisement. This is true, although a fine delivery wagon, drawn by a span of well groomed and well harnessed horses, also speaks well for the firm.

The Driver.

One feature about the horse which appeals to many is that a boy at $6 or $8 per week can drive it, while in such hands an auto would be a big expense and short-lived. Here, in my estimation, lies the whole secret of making the commercial auto pay. Put a good, practical, trustworthy man on it, pay him well and you will have no trouble.

If you are located in a small city or only do a little retail business, calling for but few deliveries, drive the car yourself. An hour or two a day will do all your delivering, give you a little change from the regular routine and enable you to dispense with the driver altogether.

There can be no doubt that we all agree as to the advantages of the auto, and in my next article I will endeavor to give an estimate of the relative cost of operation, from actual experience.

commercial wagon, which is to travel rapidly, my advice, based on experience, would be to use pneumatic tires. The solid tires will jar the machinery, causing a continual need for adjustment, and flowers will not carry so well, because of the greater vibration. The scribes a situation we all are up against at times. People insist on ordering the most unusual articles reproduced in flowers, and we either have to follow out their wishes or see the business go to some competitor, who is content to supply what is asked for and pocket the dollars. The Chatham Floral Co., Chatham, N. Y., had such a piece to make last summer, in the shape of an automobile in flowers. The outcome is shown in the snapshot sent herewith. The design was correctly proportioned and six feet long, the body and tires being made of asters, the hood or radiator, etc., of American Beauties, lilies, valley and other flowers. The lamps were of yellow flowers, with white flowers for the glass. The steering wheel, levers and wheel spokes were wound with chenille. Every detail was carried out, even to the number on the back of the machine. The design was made on a specially built wire frame, with six rods affording contact with the ground and holding the design so that the weight would not come upon the wheels. The design stood several days in a cemetery and attracted great crowds. Of course, there is nothing artistic to commend in such a design; but mechanical excellence probably counts for as much with the purchasers, and certainly such a design as this automobile attracts vastly more attention than would any number of the most skillfully arranged sprays.

THE ROSERY.

The illustrations on this page show the attractive little flower shop known as The Rosery, at Lancaster, Pa., which was opened for business November 17, 1910, by Miss Lou Helen Dundore, who has been connected with the florists' business for some years and is thoroughly qualified to make her venture a success. The color scheme of the shop is white and green, the woodwork being finished in white enamel, with green for walls and fixtures. The window is tiled in white and green, and the furniture is of the mission style, the refrigerator, of McCray manufacture, also being in the forest green finish. The Rosery is up-to-date in all its equipment and work, and Miss Dundore has enjoyed an excellent patronage ever since her opening day.

TO GROW WITH CARNATIONS.

We grow carnations and should like to grow some other plants for cut flowers in the same temperature. Will sweet peas and candytuft grow in that temperature? L. F. C.

Sweet peas will do well in a carnation house. They enjoy a temperature of 48 to 50 degrees at night. Candytuft, while it can be grown with carnations, will succeed better if grown 5 degrees cooler. Gladioli, both the small and large bulb varieties, lupines, larkspurs, antirrhinums, Spanish irises, ten weeks' stocks, myosotis, sweet alyssums, marguerites and all kinds of Dutch bulbous flowers, including hyacinths, tulips and narcissi, will succeed well in a carnation house. C. W.

CYCLAMEN CULTURE.

Sowing the Seed.

My years of experience in the growing of the cyclamen may perhaps be of use to some of my brother florists in the cultivation of this beautiful winter blooming plant.

The time to sow cyclamen seed varies according to when you want them in bloom. The latter part of July or the first part of August is a good time to sow in order to make good plants in fifteen to sixteen months, or by the second Christmas after the sowing. Other sowings can be made until January. Seed sown as late as January would, perhaps, with good culture and everything favorable, make strong 4-inch and 5-inch pot plants, but do not expect them to bloom as early as those from seed sown in August. Your success in growing cyclamens depends greatly upon the strain of seed used. Always get the best seed grown and of the highest standard, and your disappointments will be less.

We are sowing our cyclamens in flats 12x20x3 inches, inside measure, in rows one and one-half inches apart, and we drop 500 seeds about one-fourth of an inch apart in the rows. Of course, we usually make a sowing of from 30,000 to 60,000 at a time. For a florist that grows only from 100 to several thousands, I would advise that he sow the single seeds about one inch apart each way, grow them on until the plants have a nice ball of roots established and then shift them into flats, about two to two and one-half inches apart, or into 2½-inch pots. I recommend the latter method, as they are thus handled better and make stockier plants.

A good soil to sow in would be a loose mixture of about two-thirds leaf-mold, with some loam and sand added. This soil may do also for the first shift. For each successive shift add more loam and old hotbed soil. For the last two shifts we use some horn shavings or meal, mixed with the soil in the proportion of a 4-inch potful to a bushel of soil.

Care of the Seedlings.

Set the seed flats, thinly covered with sphagnum moss, on a mild hotbed, with not too much ventilation, or in a greenhouse where you can keep the air moderately moist until the seeds germinate, which takes about four to five weeks. Keep the flats shaded and moist until the seedlings make the first leaf; then remove the sphagnum moss and increase the light and ventilation gradually. Loosen the soil around the plants with a label and keep the green moss which forms on the soil removed. Do this every two or three weeks, as this is essential to the growing of strong and healthy plants.

We transplant the first batch into other flats about eight to ten weeks after the sowing of the seed, planting them about one and one-half inches apart. Set them on shelves near the glass and give them an average night temperature of about 52 to 55 degrees, with 10 degrees more heat in the daytime. Give them plenty of fresh air; never let the air become close, or they will weaken, and such plants are hard to get through the hot summer months. Do not shade cyclamens from the middle of October until about March 1. Give all the light possible until you see the plants are in danger of wilting; then, with two or three fine sprinklings, you might have to shade them only during the hottest part of the day. A sprinkling two or three times on a hot day will help to make large bulblets and, of course, the plant will greatly benefit by it. I use a spray that produces a fine mist, as a coarse spray would keep the plants wet and soggy.

Set the plants so that the bulblets are just covered after the first good watering. I warn you not to plant too deep, as that would make spindly plants and weak bulbs. If planted too high, the bulbs grow hard and will never make a thriving plant.

Removal to the Hotbed.

We manage to have our plants from the first sowing in 3-inch pots by the end of March, when they go on a mild hotbed. In the beginning keep the bed rather close, until you notice their root action. Shade them only in bright sunshine and sprinkle them at least once or twice a day, according to the weather. Keep the bottom heat at about 70 to 80 degrees. Gradually give more ventilation and maintain a temperature of about 55 to 65 degrees above the plants; a much warmer atmosphere will make spindly plants and a much cooler one will give them a setback. Shift whenever the pot ball is fairly well rooted. Do not let them get potbound and do not give them too large a shift. Put in about one-fifth drainage, for which washed coal ashes or coarse sand is the best material. Cyclamens, more than any other plant, enjoy clean pots. They also enjoy a mild hotbed, though this is not absolutely necessary.

When shifting into larger pots, set the plants now so that the bulb is about covered with soil. The first watering will then settle the soil to about three-fourths or one-half the bulb. If planted too high, the bulb will get hard too soon and may burst and set the buds on too early. On the other hand, when planted too deep, the plants get spindly and the flower stems rot easily.

The Watering and Shading.

Most of the mistakes are made in watering, by keeping the plants too wet and soggy. Let them dry out fairly well before you give another watering. This will keep the soil sweet, which is of the utmost importance for growing choice cyclamen plants.

The shade should not be too dense. I use thin burlap or sashes made out of plaster strips, also mats of bamboo sticks, but I believe burlap is the easiest to handle and the cheapest in the long run.

The last shift we usually make in August or September. It is now advisable to set the plants so the bulb comes to stand about one-half in the soil. This is important to the setting of the buds. The plants bloom with more flowers at one time; also, the buds are not so liable to rot off and the plants are more easily kept clean.

During the warm nights of August and September the sashes should be removed from the plants. The dew freshens up the plants, keeps them short and is quite helpful in setting the buds.

With the beginning of hot weather we set the sashes on a railing, so that the space between the lower part of the sash and the hotbed frame is about six to eight inches; the upper part of

With the beginning of hot weather we set the sashes on a railing, so that the space between the lower part of the sash and the hotbed frame is about six to eight inches; the upper part of the sashes is raised or lowered according to the amount of ventilation you want on the plants. On windy days let the ventilation down in the direction of the wind.

The Return to the House.

In the latter part of October we commence to house the plants. Up to this time we have the beds covered with mats during cold nights. Do not make the mistake of setting your plants too close together, as now is the time when plants should have all the room you can spare them, to make shapely specimens. No shade is now required. Should the sun make it unpleasant for the plants, give them a fine sprinkling to keep them from wilting, and they should have been gradually accustomed to the bright weather while they were out in the beds.

A free circulation of fresh air all the time is beneficial. Water carefully; never drop the water right on the head of the plant, as it might rot the buds and leaves close to the bulb. The plants should be set over almost every two weeks. They will need more room every time you clean them out. Pull the flower and leaf stems right out; do not cut them off, as they might rot down to the bulb.

Do not try to force a cyclamen by raising the temperature, for if this is done the plants will get spindly and the flowers will be small and imperfect. The only way to help a cyclamen along in bringing it to bloom early is to give it a good, bright house, with a night temperature not above 55 degrees and a good circulation of fresh air around the plants. Some growers set the plants on inverted pots to get the desired result. Should it be desired to hold them back until late in the spring or for thrips are the only ones that can injure cyclamens. The green fly is easily kept in check by using the nicotine solution regularly once a week. It is advisable not to make the solution too strong, as it may burn some of the tender leaves. The thrips are bothersome if they get a hold, but can be kept in check by using the solution of Paris green and sugar. This, however, should be handled carefully. Spray late in the afternoon with this solution, and early the next morning spray over with fresh water to prevent burning of the foliage.

To grow good cyclamens, they must never be neglected in any way. Good common sense should be used in growing them, and if a good strain of seed is procured they should be among the most profitable of plants, as well as favorites of both the grower and his customers. Christ. Winterich.

COTTAGE AND DARWIN TULIPS.

What is the difference between May-flowering tulips and Darwin tulips and how should they be cultivated here, in the eastern part of New York state?

E. M.

May-flowering tulips, perhaps better and more correctly known as Cottage tulips, comprise the many beautiful varieties, practically all late flowering, found growing in old cottage gardens in England, Scotland, Ireland and France. They comprise a wonderful variety of forms and colors and have none of the stiffness of other tulips. They are hardy and many of them live from year to year and improve, rather than deteriorate.

Darwin tulips are late flowering and are much taller growing than the early bedding varieties. This late flowering in your latitude. They make excellent beds, especially if one variety only is used, or can be planted in clumps in flower borders. In the latter case there is no need of taking them up each fall, as they improve with age, if given a good mulch of rotten manure each fall. C. W.

FUCHSIAS FOR WINDOW BOX.

The fuchsia is not a window-box plant, but W. C. Egan, at Highland Park, Ill., uses it as such, in shady situations. In reply to an inquiry as to the variety, he writes: "I obtained cuttings some years ago under the name Arabella. My gardener thinks it identical with what he knew in England as Mrs. Marshall. Lincoln park, Chicago, had it as Arabella; probably has it now. I have never seen it catalogued."

SOUTHERN BULB FIELDS.

The southern bulbous stock is beginning to move to northern markets and the next few weeks will see immense quantities of the outdoor daffodils in all the wholesale markets. Just to give an idea of the way the bulbous stock flourishes in the section south and east of Richmond, here is an illustration showing a part of a 5-acre field of daffodils at C. W. Beman's place, at North Emporia, Va. He calls his place the Rose Gardens, though the reason it is known as far west as Chicago is because of its immense output of daffodil blooms each spring.

THREE CROPS A YEAR.

Will you kindly give me the names of stock from which three crops can be taken in a year? I have heard from time to time that to make a success of greenhouses three crops should be taken. I have planned several, but would like to hear what others say about the matter. J. C.

So much depends upon the market you would have for your products that it is a little difficult to answer your question briefly in such a way that it will have practical value. The statement that a greenhouse must be made to produce three crops annually to be profitable is far from correct. Carnations, occupying benches for ten or eleven months in the year, are probably as profitable as any crop grown by the average florist. The same holds good with roses. Coming, however, to shorter season or catch crops, as some may be termed, a good many present themselves. Where two crops are grown, chrysanthemums, including the early and midseason sorts, which can be cleared early in November, followed by sweet peas, make a good double crop. If early mums only are grown, antirrhinums in 3-inch or 4-inch pots could be planted to follow them and cleared by the beginning of April, when Spiraea Japonica planted directly in the beds could be got in for Memorial day, which would give nice time to clear out and refill the beds and plant the mums from the middle to the end of June.

Single violets are another crop which need not be planted until early chrysanthemums are gone. The violets are gone before the end of March. Large-flowered gladioli planted among them about the last of February would give a good crop of spikes at Memorial day and until the next crop of chrysanthemums is Five Acres of Daffodils at the Rose Gardens.

Easter, it can be done by giving them as low a temperature as 42 degrees.

In the Blooming Pots.

After the plants are well rooted in their blooming pots, it is beneficial to water them with cow manure and soot water, to give them the finishing touches of a glossy foliage and larger flowers, with a good color.

As to insects, the green fly and class of self-colored tulips are improved breeders and have come wonderfully to the front in America during the last few years. For cutting they are splendid and in some sections they flower for Memorial day.

The cultivation of both these classes of late blooming tulips differs in no way from that of the ordinary bedding sorts. From October 15 to November 15 is a suitable time to plant the bulbs to be planted, or if preferred, sweet peas sown in rows five feet apart, of the best outdoor varieties, especially the Spencer sorts, will yield a profitable late spring and early summer crop. Of course, where sweet peas are grown there must be ample head room. Another combination would be chrysanthemums, single violets and lilies or spiraea for Memorial day trade. Still another, chrysanthemums, single violets and ten weeks' stocks for Memorial day.

I do not know whether the growing of pot plants is to be considered or not. I included Easter lilies, which are grown largely as a succession crop. There is a considerable variety of stock which could be brought in to follow chrysanthemums. One would be Paper White narcissi and Roman hyacinths; later, tulips and narcissi in variety, and about the middle or end of March follow these with hydrangeas for Memorial day or June trade. A good many violet specialists now grow tomatoes to fill in the summer months. Some prefer cucumbers. The tomatoes come in bearing early in June and prices for indoor fruit are always much higher than for the outdoor article. I do not know what crops would pay you best in your market. It is often necessary to change crops year by year. The up-to-date florist always needs to have something up his sleeve in the way of a crop his competitors have not thought of.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

National Show Admissions.

It has been ordered that each member in good standing of the S. A. F. and allied societies holding meetings and exhibitions in conjunction with the National Flower Show in Boston, March 25 to April 1, shall be entitled to one members' season ticket admitting the owner to the exhibition hall. Only one ticket, however, will be issued to any one person even though he belong to several societies. These tickets will be nontransferable. Orders for members' tickets are being sent to all members of the S. A. F. in good standing; that is, to all those who have paid their 1911 dues or are life or pioneer members. These orders must be presented to the proper officials at the exhibition hall and be exchanged for regular members' tickets. These orders must be presented by the owners in person, as all orders presented by others than the owners will be taken up and canceled.

Railroad Rates to Boston.

A rate of one and three-fifths on the certificate plan has been granted by the New England and Trunk Line Passenger associations. The Southeastern and Western associations have refused to grant rates, owing to small numbers and 2-cent rate now in existence. The Central association and Eastern Canadian association will report early in March and their decisions will be presented in The Review.

Additional Appointments.

The following gentlemen have been appointed as state vice-presidents:

Massachusetts, East—W. A. Hastings, Boston.

Massachusetts, West—G. H. Sinclair, Holyoke.

Pennsylvania, West—W. J. Smith, Pittsburg.

At Hill City Greenhouses, Forest City, Iowa.

Department of Registration.

Public notice is hereby given that A. N. Pierson, Inc., of Cromwell, Conn., offers for registration the roses described below. Any person objecting to the registration, or to the use of the proposed names, is requested to communicate with the secretary at once. Failing to receive objection to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date.

Double White Killarney—A sport of White Killarney originating with the J. A. Budlong & Son Co., Auburn, R. I., in January, 1910. It is stronger in growth than the parent, with the same general characteristics of foliage and growth. The flower is pure white in color, with an average of from forty to forty-five petals. It is a wonderful improvement over the parent, having size and substance in summer, when White Killarney is comparatively single. The variety will be disseminated by A. N. Pierson, Inc., in 1912.

Killarney Queen—A deep pink sport of Killarney, originating with the J. A. Budlong & Son Co., Auburn, R. I., in 1909, that has the high color of Dark Pink Killarney with an increased vigor in growth. It compares among Killarneys as American Beauty does with other varieties, the stem and foliage being much heavier, and the petals nearly twice the size of the petals of Killarney. The variety will be disseminated by A. N. Pierson, Inc., in 1912.

As no objections have been filed, public notice is hereby given that the registration of the geraniums, Dr. E. M. Moore and A. B. Lamberton, by Robert Dukelou, Rochester, N. Y., becomes complete.

H. B. Dorner, Sec'y.

WATER LILIES.

I have a steel tank 3 x 12 feet and wish to grow some water lilies in it. Would it be necessary to sink it in the ground, or would the bulbs keep cool enough above ground? How many good bulbs should be planted in it? Could I grow blooming sized bulbs from seed if planted now? R. F.

The tank will be better adapted for the culture of the lilies if plunged in the ground and the plants themselves will look better. You cannot grow more than four bulbs in your tank. It is better not to have over a foot of water above the bulbs and half that quantity will suffice for the more moderate growing varieties. If you use dormant bulbs, only cover with two or three inches of water at first. Use a good bed of cow manure and loam for the lilies to grow in. It will be much better for you to buy dormant bulbs rather than to try to raise seedlings. A few suitable varieties of moderate growth for tank culture are: Nymphaea Aurora, rosy yellow changing to deep red; Marliacea carnea, flesh pink; Marliacea albida, white; Marliacea chromatella, bright yellow; odorata, white; tuberosa rosea, pink. You could, if you wished, use a plant or two of other aquatics with your lilies, such as Sagittaria Montevicensis, Eichhornia crassipes major, Jussiaea longifolia, Limnanthemum indicum and Scirpus Tabernamontanus zebrina. All these aquatics, of course, want full sunshine.

A FOREST CITY PLACE.

The state of Iowa is full of flourishing florists. The accompanying illustration gives a view in one of the houses of the Hill City Greenhouses, at Forest City. Willard Secor is the proprietor. He is one of the men who did not wait until he learned it all before he started in the florists' business—it looked good to him, so he made the venture. He has been successful from the start, watching the business end himself and placing the technical work in the hands of a competent manager.

HARDY DOUBLE PYRETHRUMS.

Of what species is the hardy double pyrethrum blooming in May? Can it be grown from seed, and how? E. M.

All are forms of Pyrethrum roseum. While you can secure some doubles from seed, the best are only to be had by division of the roots. If you start pyrethrum seeds in flats now, plant outdoors in nursery rows and cultivate well all summer, you will have strong plants in the fall, which will flower well the following May and June.

SEASONABLE

SUGGESTIONS

Jerusalem Cherries.

If your Jerusalem cherries are not already sown, start a batch of them now. Select a few good berries from your own plants. They will be just as good as any you could buy. Pot off singly when of sufficient size. Gradually harden off in coldframes after the middle of April and plant outdoors about the middle of May. You can grow them in pots, but the plants lifted from the open ground will be finer and more heavily fruited. You can also propagate from cuttings and get an earlier crop of ripe fruit. The plants grown from cuttings are, however, too low and prostrate and far inferior to seedlings.

Genistas.

Bring genistas wanted for Easter into a cool house now. They are better grown cool all the time and nothing in the nature of forcing is necessary with Easter coming so late as it does. The closely cropped plants so much in evidence are not so pretty nor so salable as those which are allowed to grow more naturally. The sheared plants are too formal and topiary-like and the bulk of customers seeing the two types would select those less closely sheared. Cuttings which are rooted should be potted off singly into 2-inch pots and grown along in a cool house; 45 degrees at night will suffice. Pinch off any flowers they throw, to send more strength into the growths.

Fancy Caladiums.

Fancy-leaved caladiums need a brisk heat to start them; unless a night temperature of 60 to 65 degrees is at command it will be better to leave the tubers dormant a few weeks longer, but if you have a warm house shake out the tubers carefully and stand them in flats of sand and sphagnum. Only partially cover the tubers and water sparingly at first, or the tubers are liable to rot. These fancy caladiums are useful in the summer months, when flowering plants in pots are scarce and drop quickly when placed in living rooms, while the caladiums with their rich colors last a long time.

Dahlias.

It is much too soon yet to think about starting dahlias for planting in the field, or even for retail trade, but there may be one or two special varieties of which you may be desirous of increasing the stock by means of soft-wood cuttings. Lay these on a bench where they will get some bottom heat. Scatter some sphagnum moss about them and give light sprayings until the growths appear, when a more generous supply will be appreciated. Look over the stock of tubers and remove any decaying portions. Mold spreads fast and affected portions should be cut off as soon as they are seen.

Flowering Shrubs for Easter.

Such varieties as deutzias, lilacs, pyrus, prunus and Philadelphus Lemoinei, if wanted for Easter, should be placed in heat if they are not already there. The flowering apples, cherries and plums will open in a month and are better not forced too hard. Lilacs will still flower if started in a brisk heat and moved into cooler quarters as the flowers open. Deutzias require a longer season to get them into flower and can be forced hard, like lilacs, in the earlier stages of growth. Of course all these flowering shrubs are better when opened in a temperature not exceeding 50 degrees at night and come on quite fast in even this heat during March and April. All should be freely syringed until the buds are ready to expand.

Rambler Roses.

Rambler roses should now have the flower trusses peeping, which being the case they are all right. Carefully avoid cold drafts, which will surely start mildew. Also use care in syringing, so that the plants will be dry before nightfall. When syringing—and this is necessary when the plants are being hard forced, in order to prevent attacks of spider—select bright mornings for the work, and if it chances to cloud up before noon, shake the plants individually so as to remove as much water as possible from them. An abundant water supply is now necessary and, the pots being filled with active roots, supplement this with liquid manure twice a week. Do not allow the plants to stand too closely. Elevate good specimens on pots, in which case it is a good plan to place a saucer below them.

Dutch Bulbous Stock.

As Easter comes quite late this year, it will only take a matter of a fortnight to flower any of the narcissi, tulips and hyacinths after housing. In the meantime they cannot be kept too cool. A cold cellar will hold them back later than a frame. If in the latter, keep board shutters over them to exclude sun heat. See that the pots, pans or flats are sufficiently moist. As the bulbs have a mass of roots, they become somewhat stunted if not copiously watered. Keep the water, however, off the flower stalks of the hyacinths. Spanish iris and Gladiolus nanus in variety will need to be growing on now in a temperature of 50 degrees, or will be too late.

Spiræas.

Spiræas will now be making rapid growth and will require frequent spreading apart. As the pots speedily become a perfect mat of roots, the water supply can hardly be too liberal. Use diluted liquid cow or sheep manure three times a week. Raise up the larger plants on stands or pots, using saucers under them. A temperature of 60 to 65 degrees at night can be maintained until the flowers show color, then gradually lower it. In fumigating always remember that spiræas are susceptible to injury and give light doses. That beautiful peach pink variety, Queen Alexandra, in order to retain its color, should not be exposed to sunshine. It fades out badly in the full sun.

OUTDOOR SWEET PEAS.

Just as soon as the ground can be worked is the right time to make the first outdoor sowing of sweet peas. It is an old and utterly erroneous idea that we must wait for the ground to become well dried and warmed before sowing sweet peas. It is quite true that if one batch is sown, say, at the end of March and a second one a month later, the seedlings of the later sowing may appear only three or four days behind the first sowing, but compare the strength of haulm and flower stems and it will soon become apparent that the March seedlings have a big superiority. Sweet peas revel in cool, moist ground, such as exists when winter is passing. They get a strong root hold before the tops appear, whereas the later sowings have few roots when the tops appear and suffer much sooner from drought.

If the land was heavily manured and plowed in late fall, all the better. If not, do it now, and be sure to plow deeply. If you want fancy flowers which will beat those of your neighbors, take out trenches two feet deep and the same width; half fill these with rotted cow manure. Cover with three inches of loam, then sow the seeds; cover these two and one-half to three inches deep, firming the soil well with the back of a rake. Never mind if the rows have a hollowed appearance. This will be something of an advantage when rain comes. Avoid sowing the seeds thickly. If you do, have courage to thin severely. The more space allotted the individual seedling, the more robust will be the growth and finer the flower stalks.

NEW ROSES WORTH GROWING.

[Extracts from a paper by S. W. Crowell, of Roseacres, Miss., read at the convention of the Tennessee Nurserymen's Association in Nashville, Tenn., January 28, 1911.]

The subject of this paper is, in my judgment, one of paramount importance to the nurseryman who sells roses in any quantity. His endeavor should be to supply his customers with the best roses extant that are suitable for the purpose required. This end can only be attained by planting and testing the more promising varieties in his own grounds, as they appear from year to year. The time has passed when, with only an assortment of cheap, indifferent varieties, he may present his wares to an overindulgent buying public and hope to reap the full benefits therefrom and still retain the confidence of the buyer.

We live in an age when to stand still means retrogression, and retrogression inevitably means elimination. Expansion from small things into great, and from great into still greater things, is the rule of progress all the world over. What satisfies the wants of today will prove totally insufficient for tomorrow, and the marvel which excited our wonderment yesterday is today calmly accepted as a matter of course. The prosperity of an industry must depend upon its healthy, constant growth, and the country in which it is located will increase or diminish in prosperity in accordance with the success or incompetent management of that industry. It is well for the craft that the buyer is now demanding the best that grows—skill, proper selection of varieties, scientific fertilization, careful cultivation, storing and shipping—in other words, the best obtainable product. This is the day of good roses. The wise dealer will take notice and profit thereby.

An Awakening.

By way of illustration, I have in mind a customer who must have felt that a rose was just a rose, regardless of name. His shop-worn lithographed book, which delineated in pronounced colors the beauties of such sorts as Prairie Queen, George the Fourth, Seven Sisters and others of like nature, covered the list of roses with which he hoped to embellish the gardens of his customers and help, in some measure, to mend nature. He asked that we supply a few hundred plants of Mme. Plantier for a certain planting, and before booking the order we suggested that he use Frau Karl Druschki. He promptly told us that he knew his business. When the order went forward, we included ten plants each of Druschki, Capt. Hayward and a few other desirable varieties, and requested that these be planted in his own grounds and watched for results. The following summer and fall there was a revelation for this man. A new condition was about him. A new field was open for greater and earnest exploitation. He saw the writing on the wall. He is now doing a profitable business, besides giving every customer a rose that will beautify any nook or corner in which it is planted, "a thing of beauty and a joy forever."

The Need of Trial Grounds.

If the rose grower would do his work well, it is absolutely necessary that he establish a trial ground upon his own premises. This may be accomplished without much extravagance and it is not only necessary with roses, but should be done with every type of fruit or flower. It is only now and then that we find a Cochet, Killarney or Druschki, but it is the only method by which actual comparison can be made with the older commercial varieties and where all conditions are actually the same.

To make these tests with fruits is often quite expensive, but the love of the work should appeal to the laborer. If the task seems too arduous to him, he should leave the craft and let those who are willing to labor for the greater good take his place. However, with roses and various ornamentals the expense is only nominal, and no rose grower or dealer should ever offer a rose for dissemination until it has proved worthy. This is quite necessary, for the reason that the buyer is often wary and does not care to make investments when there is a possibility that a new rose will fail to make good. This should appeal to the vendor. The old path that father walked, the old rut, the old variety, the old woodcuts that did service years ago should be laid aside for the new order of things that are sane and of mutual interest to all.

We Must Pay for Experience.

A new rose is always an object of consideration. After it is planted and proves to be distinct, the interest in it is twofold. A new pleasure is found and an added avenue toward material advantage is given. The one makes us better morally; the other fills in a space that usually needs replenishing with many of the craft, for the needs are many. But, after all, we must pay for experience, and should only one good rose be found in a list of fifty or even 100 varieties, the investment would still be profitable, not even considering the knowledge obtained by the experiment. And, on the other hand, should our trials and experiments prove futile as to dollars and cents, we owe something to the creators and disseminators of new roses. We should step

SHADING.

The sun now has considerable power and it is necessary to give shade to palms, as even under ground glass it strikes in brightly and will soon cause the foliage to become pale. A light coat of naphtha or kerosene and white lead, applied through a garden pump or syringe or by means of an ordinary whitewash brush on a long handle, will spread the shading satisfactorily. Such ferns as adiantums, especially the Farleyenses, must have shade. On the other hand, the tougher fronded nephrolepis will stand and are indeed benefited by a fair amount of sunlight.

Houses where flowering plants are kept until sold should have the glass shaded, as this keeps the temperature down.

Temporary shadings only, in the way of cheesecloth or paper, should be used for seedlings or cuttings. Shading the glass makes them drawn and weak, especially when we get a succession of sunless days, as is not infrequent in late winter.

ASTERS.

The earliest sowing of asters will have been transplanted before now and be well established in flats. These will prove useful for planting on any spare bench or benches, and they will give a GROWING VIOLETS IN TEXAS.

I have received so much valuable information from the replies to other people's questions in The Review, that I have now decided to ask a question of my own through its columns. Can any florist near my locality, south-central Texas, tell me when to plant violets for winter blooms and what varieties to plant? I planted California and Princess of Wales and maintained a night temperature of 45 to 50 degrees. I succeeded in growing beautiful, long, green, healthy leaves, but hardly any blooms. The plants pretended to bloom, but "faked it" with only a few poor flowers. I want information in regard to planting for next season. H. L. N.

There are few violets grown under glass in or near this city, Austin, which is in the same general locality as that violets are always those which are grown the coolest. For this reason flowers produced in coldframes in a low temperature and without any artificial heat are always of a deeper blue than those grown in greenhouses. C. W.

DREER'S NEW ESTABLISHMENT.

Riverview, the new plant of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., has been fully described in The Review during the course of its construction, but the house warming at Riverview, March 8, when some 200 guests from Philadelphia, New York, Baltimore, Washington and other cities inspected the range, presents a favorable opportunity for picturing the new establishment. The Dreer corporation never does anything by halves, and has built at Riverview the first section of a thoroughly up-to-date plant-growing establishment. One of the illustrations presents an exterior view of the range. Another shows a typical interior, this house being occupied by the variegated pineapple. The third view shows one end of the service building, which is one of the most important features of the establishment.

THE STOCK THAT PAYS.How Many Know Which It Is?

There is a large number of greenhouse establishments in this country that come under the head of small or valuable lot of flowers when carnations are getting poor and ahead of the outdoor aster crop. This is a suitable time to make an additional sowing of such a variety as Queen of the Market for outdoor planting. There is plenty of time yet to sow such standard sorts as Vick's Branching, Victoria, Ostrich Plume, Comet and Semple's.

The ground on which asters are to be planted is always better broken up the previous fall, especially if it is in grass, and left rough over winter. If this has not been done, do the necessary plowing or spading as soon as frost is out of the ground. A liberal dressing of well decayed barnyard manure makes the best fertilizer, but where this is difficult to secure, harrow in 1,000 pounds per acre of a good complete chemical fertilizer a week or two before planting. While asters will grow in almost any soil, they succeed best in a moderately strong loam of good depth. If the soil is of good thickness, no matter how long and severe the summer drought may be, the plants will show few ill effects if the surface is kept persistently cultivated.

referred to by H. L. N. The best results may be obtained by having strong plants in 2½-inch pots to plant out in September, in coldframes, where the plants can be protected during cold snaps. If the beds are below the outside ground level, and well drained, so much the better. Do not give any artificial heat, but plenty of air at all times. When grown in greenhouses, the hot, sunny days promote leaf growth, but produce few blooms.

A. J. Seiders.

TO GIVE VIOLETS MORE COLOR.

What is there to give my violets more color? F. H. R.

You do not state whether you are growing single or double violets. If doubles, the variety Lady Hume Campbell is naturally light and cannot by any course of treatment be made to produce blooms of the deep color of Marie Louise. In the case of single violets, grow them cool and airy, and after the early part of March a little shade on the glass will help to prevent the flowers fading out. The best colored medium sized plants. Most of them are making money; that is, the owner is getting his living and paying something on the mortgage, or building more houses, or buying other property, as the case may be. But a great many are not paying the amount of profit that they should, considering the capital invested. These businesses must of necessity consist of diversified production. It is not often that a man may specialize in one thing, or even as few as half a dozen things. Also, the methods of handling the business and the accounts have not been reduced to a system. Because the production is so diversified and because the system for handling it is so inadequate, there are great chances for losses on unprofitable items which nearly eat up good sized profits on the successful items.

"How," it is asked, "can we tell just how much profit or loss each item is making? Our labor and other expenses are divided over so many things that we cannot tell what amount goes to each, whereas the big fellow who has so much space, so many men, so much fuel, etc., for this product and so much for that product knows just how he stands on each."

Did it ever occur to you that perhaps one reason why the big fellow has become a big fellow is because he has kept posted and played only the winning games?

I will admit that the man who grows miscellaneous stock is handicapped in keeping records, but are you doing the best you can? You cannot tell how much it costs to grow Killarney and how much it produces, when you have a bench and a half in a mixed house; while the man who grows a section finds it possible to figure profit or loss almost to the penny. Are you keeping track of the number of blooms? This will mean something to you, even though you cannot tell what they sell for. Are you growing three shades of pink carnations that are nearly the same and yet will not go with each other, when the same number of plants in either of the three would enable you to fill larger orders? I have noticed that the larger a place becomes, the fewer varieties there are grown.

Things That Never Pay.

There are many things that show themselves to be unprofitable without figures if a person just goes over the list and gives them a little thought. There are palms that have been kept from one year to another until they have become too large for the customers' needs. When this happens, they are a dead loss, taking up space and producing nothing. They should be disposed of to firms that use the larger sizes, and the space filled with stock that can be turned. A lady once called up a florist and informed him that her palm had died the day before. Most of us cannot be so definite on such a subject; neither can we tell the exact date when a plant ceases to be profitable, but we should try to come as near it as possible, because poor guessing or indifference means steady losses.

Often there are pets in the shape of vines or plants that have grown up a post or in the end of a house, that year by year get larger, shade the other stock and sap the strength from it. They often produce flowers that are handy for funeral work, and for this reason are allowed to keep on growing.

It is well to stop once in a while and decide whether or not such a vine is producing more than it is damaging.

Then there is stock kept year after year that produces nothing, yet the owner does not throw it away. I know of a batch of orchids that do not have and can not have proper attention. They produce practically nothing. The owner says he can not afford to throw them away, and he is ashamed to offer them for sale until he gets them into better shape. They never get into better shape, and they owe three years' board bill already.

The Thing to Do.

Stop for a moment and figure. A total loss on one bench eats up all of a twenty-five per cent profit on four other benches. You would be just as well off with none of the five. If the loss is half of total it eats up the profits of two others producing twenty-five per cent profit. You would be just as well off with none of the three. This shows how important it is to have every square foot producing.

To keep posted means to take some time once in a while from the general rush of business, collect what figures are available, and guess as intelligently as possible on the rest. Then you are in a position to decide what is paying and what is not. Of course, the next step is to drop the unprofitable, or, if it is something that has to be kept, devise means to make it profitable.

SMILAX FROM SEED.

Please tell us how to grow smilax. How long does it take for the seed to germinate? J. W. R. & C.

The seed of smilax will germinate in from two to three weeks in a warm, moist house. Sow in flats of light, sandy compost. Pot off singly into 2-inch pots before the seedlings get crowded. Later shift into 3-inch or 3½-inch pots, and from those plant out in a greenhouse where a night temperature of 55 to 60 degrees can be maintained. Solid beds are much preferable to raised benches, and a generous compost containing plenty of well rotted cow manure should be used. Plant out in June or July, eight inches between the plants, a foot between the rows. Strings, which should be of green twine, must be run up for the shoots to cling to before they can become entangled. Keep a moist atmosphere and syringe freely to keep down spider. After the strings are cut keep the roots dry for a time. Then give a liberal top-dressing and resting and start up for another crop. You should have no trouble in getting three crops in a year. The old roots may be carried over for several years, but the general and better plan is to plant young stock annually. C. W.

Hoffmans, N. Y.—J. C. Hatcher is sending out his new asparagus in thrifty stock. One requirement for the successful growing of it is plenty of drainage—the more the better. This variety, Hatcherii, is said to be a freer grower than plumosus, producing a much heavier string, bushier and a longer keeper. It is said that strings cut three weeks ago and placed in the basement cooler, recently built, look as fresh as when first gathered.

SOME NEW THINGS.

[A paper by E. G. Hill, read before the Illinois State Florists' Association at Urbana, February 9, continued from The Review of February 18.]

Carnations.

Following the rose comes the carnation, but after the recent symposiums in the trade papers little is left to say, for they were sifted as the fine dust of the balance. Among recent novelties Pink Delight and Mrs. Ward seem absolutely sure of permanent place; also Scarlet Glow wherever it can be grown with a strong stem, and Dorothy Gordon as a substitute for Rose-pink Enchantress. It is not only a duty but a privilege to test the few offerings of the present year, as they give promise of outranking in their several colors, and we shall probably soon need substitutes to take the place of the four standards which are now so hard worked in every carnation establishment.

Wodenethe is one of these aspirants for place; it will be sent out next year. It is probably the most perfect white carnation in existence, and those who saw it in 1910 at Philadelphia and at magnificent Mrs. David Syme, R. F. Felton, Well's Late Pink and Glacier. Strongly entrenched already in favor with the trade as money-making commercials are Chadwick Improved, lovely in its purity of color; Chas. Razer, a grand white of perfect, approved form for shipping; Cranford Pink, the pretty early English variety; Elise Papworth, a fine all-round white for every purpose; Heston White and Winter Cheer, clean-cut and close-clipped, perfect in color tone. To these will be added Golden Gem, round as a ball and compact, and the lovely new singles. What interest would be lost to the yearly procession should the mum family drop out!

Miscellaneous Plants.

Among miscellaneous plants Julius Peterson is to be warmly congratulated on his Lorraine begonia, Cincinnati. While surpassing the parent in beauty of habit and of color, its splendid keeping qualities make it a house plant of wonderful effectiveness and durability, while the parent variety always gave concern for fear it might speedily "go fragrance are desired. Compact and clean, this variety will give the heliotrope a new place as a garden plant.

Some cut flower grower will soon take up and grow successfully the lovely double gypsophila, one of the prettiest things that I saw abroad. I am sure that its dainty beauty would make a place for it. It adds grace and elegance to any bunch of flowers where it is used.

Wintzer's Cannas.

To Antoine Wintzer belongs the credit of producing the finest cannas in existence, excepting only King Humbert. His Venus was a revelation to everyone who planted it, and now he has made a further record with Mrs. Alfred Conard, a lovely peach pink, with petals as long as they are broad. The canna is no longer a foliage plant only, but is now a blooming bedder, producing the most stunning color effects procurable.

Nothing can excite more enthusiasm among plantsmen than the excellent new hydrangeas raised by Mouillere and Lemoine. These varieties of the Hortensia type are certainly of interest to all who use this useful plant for pot culture. They are crosses between Hortensia, Otsaka, rosea and others of the class. There has been a long lapse of time between the old Hortensia and the present improvements. Bouquet Rose, Henri David, Mme. Mouillere, Radiant, Mont Rose—these are a few of the ten or a dozen distinct improvements in this noted family of plants.

A striking and beautiful novelty seen at Bruges, Belgium, was the new marguerite, Mrs. F. Sander. It looked much like a chaste and beautiful anemone-flowered chrysanthemum. It is a glistening, pure white flower, produced on long stems. I can imagine no more useful plant either for the production of white flowers or as a pot plant. If it does as well in America as it did at Bruges, it will certainly prove a most valuable commercial plant.

This is far from a complete list of novelty offerings for the year, but enough to engage the time and attention of the progressive florist for the present.

CHARLES J. MALOY.

Thirty years is a long time to work on one job, but Charles J. Maloy has spent his entire business life in the firm of Ellwanger & Barry, Rochester, N. Y. There are few nurserymen more widely known than Mr. Maloy. Going with Ellwanger & Barry as soon as he had finished his course in the public schools of Rochester, where he was born, he quickly made his way into responsible positions and is now assistant secretary of both the Ellwanger & Barry Nursery Co. and the Ellwanger & Barry Realty Co. Mr. Maloy also is secretary and treasurer of the Ornamental Growers' Association, an organization of nurserymen whose interests lie chiefly in the production of ornamental stock. Mr. Maloy is a member of practically all the trade societies the interests of which concern the growing of plants in the open ground, and wherever a willing worker is needed he is to be found.

Kissimmee, Fla.—Miss Jean Caldwell, an experienced florist, is preparing to build a greenhouse here and supply the local demand for flowers.

Charles J. Maloy.

the National Rose Show will be ready to greet it with open arms when disseminated.

Chrysanthemums.

In mums we can hardly wait for autumn to roll around to see the Wells-Pockett and other accepted novelties display their splendors. It is one of the keenest pleasures of the floral year, and the long wait only whets the appetite.

Among last year's novelties which we are impatient to see again are the down'' on removal from the greenhouse. Cincinnati probably ranks as premier of the entire list of pot plants.

Wilhelm Pfizer, of Stuttgart, has given us a new white gladiolus, Europa, which in all probability will rank with America in necessary qualifications for the American trade. This is bound to meet a hearty reception.

Then there is the comparatively new heliotrope, Centefleur. It is worth all the other varieties put together where a mass of glorious color and waves of

A CORN DECORATION.

At Columbus, O., the Livingston Seed Co. conducts an up-to-date seed store and also does a large business in cut flowers. The decoration of the store always receives attention, and many seasonable or timely displays are made. The accompanying illustration shows the decoration arranged by Fred M. Brownwell during the recent national corn exposition at Columbus. The pergola was decorated with southern wild smilax and ears of corn.

GROWING ASPARAGUS FOR SEED.

For the benefit of myself and other growers of Asparagus plumosus nanus, will you please publish the best method of growing asparagus for seed? I have a small bed, 4 years old, which gave me a large quantity of seed this year for the first time, and I should like to know whether I can grow another crop on the old vines or should cut down the old vines and mulch for new sprouts. They are planted in a solid bed.

F. N. B.

The best method to follow in this case would be to cut down the old growth, give a good mulching of well rotted manure and start a fresh growth. Do not water too heavily until the new growth gets a start, but after the young shoots get away nicely the bed will take an abundance of water. With plenty of food, such a bed should continue to produce satisfactorily for several years.

GAS LIME.

What is gas lime? Where can I get it and how should it be used? E. M.

Gas lime is a by-product of gas works and is to be obtained there only. As a general rule, the companies are willing to give it away. It is useful to apply to land which is badly infested with cutworms, wireworms and similar pests. A light dose, 300 to 400 pounds per acre, in late fall or early spring will go a long way toward ridding the ground of these pests.

C. W.

CINCINNATI.

The Gateway to the South.

Business is good, but the supply in some lines is so large that it is not possible to clean up regularly. The wholesalers could have told in a moment, without any outside information, that Lent was here. For a few days after the beginning of this season consignments from the smaller towns seemed as though the flowers had all suddenly come into crop. The purchases of others in this market fell off slightly. This week the latter came back strong and business is going its old merry way.

Carnations are one bright feature locally. The warmer, clearer weather continues to bring them in stronger; in fact, so much stronger that the market can scarcely absorb all. The stems and color are both in good shape. The Enchantress varieties, White Perfection, Beacon and C. C. Murphy's new seedling, are the best. There is such a strong request for white that they are snapped up quickly every day.

Roses have taken second place, temporarily so, perhaps. More good teas might have been used, especially in pink. The supply of pink and red is short, while white is apparently equal to the demand. Still, at times it seemed that more of these, especially of short and medium grades, might have been used. The call for Beauties is good, while the supply is not what it should be.

The larger quantities of lilies offered bespeaks the approach of Easter. The first part of this week the quantity of this flower was more than the market could readily use. Callas continue in large supply. The other bulbous stock is of good quality as a whole, and a large part of it finds a market. The prices realized, however, are none too high.

Single violets are forcing the doubles so hard that they have practically made them a back number. The latter are now generally used only in work. Sweet peas and valley are in oversupply. Mignonette, marguerites and forget-me-nots are offered. The supply of orchids is easily sufficient for the demand. The green goods market is well supplied.

Various Notes.

The regular meeting of the Florists' Society will be held Monday, March 13, at P. J. Olinger's, 128 East Third street. Mr. Olinger will provide refreshments.

Those of the Queen City who expect to attend the National Flower Show are Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Critchell, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Peterson and R. Witterstaetter. The last named will be one of the judges at the show.

Wm. Murphy is now settled in his new quarters at 309 Main street and is pleased with the change. He will use the first floor for cut flowers, the second for offices and supplies, the third for moss; the top floor for wire-work, and the basement for fertilizers and bulbs. The rapid increase of Mr. Murphy's business is the reason for this change to the more commodious quarters.

The Miami Floral Co., of Dayton, O., is a heavy consignor of Easter lilies to C. E. Critchell and, according to advice from George Bartholomew, the manager, expects to have 10,000 or more for this market for Easter.

February 25 the marriage of Geo. Durban, Jr., of the Northside Flower Store, and Miss Amelia Stible was solemnized at a large church wedding. After the ceremony all adjourned to a feast at the bride's home.

Eddie Bossmeyer, of C. E. Critchell's, is on the sick list.

Geo. Klotter, of West Price Hill, has been sending fine forget-me-nots to L. H. Kyrk.

The Anglo-Importation Co., under the management of Mrs. Thaden, will open in the Sinton hotel March 17. Flowers, fruits and wines will be handled.

Clarence J. Ohmer, of West Palm Beach, Fla., is shipping Asparagus plumosus to E. G. Gillett.

Miss Margaret Anstead, of E. G. Gillett's, and Geo. Tromey have returned from the Mardi Gras. Miss Anstead says that she had one glorious time.

Bowling.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, '01.
 Officers for 1911: President, George Asmus,
 Chicago; vice-president, R. Vincent, Jr., White
 Marsh, Md.; secretary, H. B. Dorner, Urbana,
 Ill.; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.
 Special convention and National Flower Show,
 Boston, Mass., March 25 to April 1, 1911.
 Annual convention, Baltimore, Md., August 15
 to 18, 1911.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
 We both have them.

TIME to be making your preparations for Easter.

THE twenty-second assessment of the Florists' Hail Association will be levied
 April 1, 1911.

THE price of linseed oil still is climbing, and with it the cost of glazing materials is going up.

IF there is one part of the country in which the florists' business is expanding faster than in other parts of the country, that fastest growing part is the Pacific northwest.

THE year 1911 will see an increase in greenhouse area considerably greater than the building record of any previous season. The new glass will run into millions of feet.

NOT a few subscribers save themselves
 the bother of annual renewal by sending
 The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-
 two visits of the paper.

ALTHOUGH Lent has cut little figure in the cut flower business the last year or two, this season the week following Ash Wednesday has been dull in almost every big city market, which is the strongest of evidence of quiet times in the country at large.

GOOD MEASURE.

It is a pleasure to feel that one is giving full measure and that the fact is appreciated:

Please discontinue our ad of Vinca variegata, as we are sold out. The classified department of The Review is a great seller; it always tries to sell more than a fellow has for sale.—Ragan Bros., Springfield, O., March 6, 1911.

You have done your share of the work so well it will not be necessary for me to use any more display ads this spring. I am about cleaned up on dahlias; gladoll sold out.—W. K. Fletcher, Des Moines, Ia., March 6, 1911.

OBITUARY.

Patrick Fogarty.

There passed away at Toronto, Ont., Sunday, March 5, one of the oldest florists in that district, Patrick Fogarty. Mr. Fogarty was 70 years of age and had been in the florists' business since he was 13 years old. He was born at what is now known as the corner of Scott and Wellington streets, in Toronto, in what is now the busiest section of the city. He soon moved to the east end and lived there continuously up to the time of his death. For many years he found a ready market for his plants in the old St. Lawrence market, before there were any flower stores on Yonge street. Mr. Fogarty had been ailing for the last four years, but up till then had been actively engaged in the business. During the course of his career he had built up an enviable reputation as a pansy grower, his stock being known all over the province. He is survived by three sons, all of whom are engaged in the florists' business.

NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW.

The National Flower Show committee announces the following additional prizes to the schedule:

KING CONSTRUCTION CO. SPECIAL PRIZES:

No. 446. Vase of 30 blooms of any rose introduced since January 1, 1900, silver cup.

No. 447. Display of cut lilac blooms, first prize, $15; second prize, $10.

No. 448. Display of cut blooms of lily of the valley, first prize, $15; second prize, $10.

No. 449. Display of cut blooms of amaryllis, first prize, $15; second prize, $10.

No. 450. Display of blooms of marguerites,
 first prize, $10; second prize, $5.

All to be staged Saturday, March 25; judging at 3 p. m.

No. 451. Ladies' Auxiliary Society prize, for the best table decoration, a silver cup. To be staged Friday, March 31; judging at 3 p. m.

No. 452. Boston Flower Exchange special prize; for the best floral design, originality to count twenty-five points, first prize, $50; second prize, $30; third prize, $20.

The National Society of Gardeners will also offer about thirty silver cups and numerous medals for prizes to be competed for at the National Flower Show, schedule of which will be issued in a few days.

John K. M. L. Farquhar, Sec'y.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Lent has made practically no difference in the flower business in Chicago in the last year or two, but it will take a great deal of argument to convince the wholesalers that it is not affecting the trade this season. Ash Wednesday and the following day business was exceedingly dull. Friday a number of large shipping orders for special sales purposes cleaned up the market in fair shape, though, of course, at low prices, and Saturday, March 4, local demand by the special sales contingent was fair. The present week opened with light demand and no prospect of a clean-up in the market until the latter part of the week, when prices doubtless will be made cheap enough to move the accumulation, whatever it is.

Receipts at the beginning of this week were not heavy, which is the only salvation for the market, as prices steadily are weakening. Roses hold their own much better than other flowers, and better than was expected.
 Beauties are in light supply and should there be active demand trouble would be met with in filling orders. Of other roses there are enough to meet all requirements. It is again possible to procure short roses at moderate prices. The bulk of the stock continues to be of the better grades and it is on these that the sale is slowest. There are calls for thousands of the medium lengths where the orders require hundreds of the extra long stems. The quality of the roses leaves nothing to be desired.

Carnations continue to come in heavily, but erratically; some days all the growers seem to take a vacation, and it is necessary to call in supplies if orders are to be filled. Wholesalers comment on the fact that the call is for the medium grade of roses, but that nothing but the best of carnations will do.
 Consequently there is a wide range between the values of the best stock and the medium and lower grades. The accumulation of last week was jobbed off March 3 and 4 at the lowest prices thus far quoted this season.

Not all the wholesale houses handle violets in large quantity, but those who do the bulk of this business had trouble last week, and it still is with them. Locally grown Princess of Wales

CARNATIONS!

Splendid Stock in Large Supply

The season has arrived for featuring the Carnation in all the steadily increasing number of retail flower stores that look to us for their supply. We have never had a finer lot of stock, nor do we recall a season when prices have been more reasonable. Write for quotations on thousand lots—push for business and you will find this one of the most profitable seasons of the year.

SWEET PEAS

For years we have been headquarters for Sweet Peas, but we never have had at this date such fine stock or such large quantities as now. Extra long stems, carrying large, perfect flowers. All the fancy colors as well as white and pink. We are shipping these Peas, fresh picked, in great quantities and they never fail to give buyers the best of satisfaction.

Killarneys

To the users of the best grade of Killarneys it will be good news that our crop once more is large—the quality always is the best in this market. While we have a fair supply of short to medium, the greater part of the crop is the Select and Special grades. The color in the pink Killarney is extra good. We never handled finer roses, and we invite all retailers who want good stock to order some of these.

Our Long BEAUTIES Are Extra Good Quality

Valley

Fine Valley is something you need every day in the year. We always have it. Order of us and get the best.

Easter Lilies

We can supply Easter Lilies every day in the year, fine quality.

Violets

You get the cream of the crops, double or single, when you order of us. Thousand lots our specialty.

Bulb Stock

Tulips, all colors; Daffs, Jonquils, Paper Whites in large supply.

CATTLEYAS

Our orchids are home-grown, and you always can get your orders filled if you place them with us.

Also place orders with us for home-grown Gardenias.

continue to come in heavily and of good quality, selling fairly well. The Hudson River stock last week came in considerably heavier than heretofore and the quality in many instances is finer than usual at this date, but sales have been extremely slow. Even for the Saturday bargain day it was not possible to make a clearance, though many sales were made as low as $1.50 per thousand for the stock that had been standing around for the better part of the week. Of course the best of each day's arrivals are selling at fair prices, but the demand is so much less than the supply that only a small fraction of the receipts realize regular prices. Sweet peas are somewhat more abundant. The quality is exceptionally good and sales are fairly satisfactory. There are, of course, many short-stemmed peas that realize little. Some of the growers have not yet awakened to the fact that peas, to be profitable, must be good. Bulbous stock is coming in more abundantly, in spite of the fact that during Lent many seek to reduce their shipments. Some extremely good tulips are to be had of such varieties as Murillo and Couronne d'Or, but other tulips are well sold if they realize 2 cents. Romans are not often seen and Paper Whites are less abundant, as is freesia. Daffodils and jonquils are plentiful. There is an abundance of Easter lilies and callas and valley is slow sale, weddings for the moment not being numerous.

The green goods situation remains quiet. Ferns are now generally held at $3. Boxwood is selling fairly well. Asparagus bunches are scarce, but there is a good supply of strings. Smilax is less plentiful. Adiantum is in slightly better request.

a second floor space in the Bryant & Stratton building on Randolph street, opposite the Public Library. The room is 45x80, with freight elevator, light and in every way well adapted to the wholesale cut flower business. Occupying the room with Budlong will be Sinner Bros., M. C. Gunterberg and probably others now in the Flower Growers' market, though Mr. Sinner states that he acted for his firm and not for the Flower Growers' Co., of which he is manager, in the negotiations just concluded. The room will be fitted up in first-class style. Removal is to be about April 1.

One of the interesting features of the deal is that it marks the market's further progress eastward on Randolph street, toward Michigan avenue, to which thoroughfare many observers think the cut flower business will gravitate. The location is two doors east of Randall and Amling.

Club Meeting.

Vice-president A. C. Kohlbrand occupied the chair at the meeting of the Florists' Club, March 2. President Philpott postponed his monthly trip from Winnipeg so as to be here for the trip to Boston. The transportation committee reported that arrangements had been made to go via the Lake Shore, leaving at 5.30 p. m. March 23, arriving at Boston the evening before the National Flower Show opens. All who will go were asked to notify E. F. Winterson, of the committee, 45 Wabash avenue, who will reserve berths. If a sufficient number make reservations a special train will be run; otherwise special cars will be carried on the Lake Shore Limited, one of the finest trains in the world. Of those present A. T. Pyfer, August Jurgens and C. W. Johnson signified their intention of going.

The bowling committee reported that two teams will go to Milwaukee on the 11:30 train, March 19, for a match with the Milwaukee Florists' Club bowlers. They invited all the rooters to go along.

Harry F. Gray, Wm. Wolf, R. E. Newcomb, Edward Goldstein and C. A. Beatty were elected to membership, and applications were received from G. L. Klimmeck, Wm. Harbitz, F. J. Kral, Jr., and E. A. Ollinger.

The exhibits of the evening consisted of vases of White Wonder and Gloriosa carnations from F. Dorner & Sons Co., Lafayette, Ind. A committee consisting of C. W. Johnson, P. Olsem and H. N. Yepsen scored Gloriosa eighty-six points, entitling it to the club's certificate. White Wonder had suffered so that it did not show its true form, so was not scored.

J. G. Schuman, of Bassett & Washburn's, Hinsdale, brought two blooms of Killarney that each had nearly thirty petals, and stated that he had a plant in charge that had produced blooms with thirty-six petals.

Joseph Kohout reported on the trip of the club members to the meeting of the Illinois State Florists' Association. The session closed with a discussion of matters concerning express shipments, in which the representatives of the express companies paid good natured compliments to each other. The shippers present agreed that the practice of the companies that solicit routing orders from the out of town buyers should be discouraged.

February Weather.

The month was exceptionally warm for February, the mean temperature being 32.4 degrees. It equaled the average of February, 1890 and 1909, and has not been exceeded since 1882. The percentage of possible sunshine was forty-four, as compared with the normal of fifty, and the total precipitation, rain and melted snow, 2.27 inches, was close to the average.

Various Notes.

Peterson Nursery has just put up a propagating house 22x50.

Allie Zech was on the sick list March 7.

The Kenwood Co., of which George Wagner is one of the stockholders, in its articles of incorporation declares the florists' business to be one of the lines in which it will engage.

O. W. Frese, of Poehlmann Bros. Co., says that White Perfection takes the St. Patrick's dye better than any other carnation.

W. W. Randall is again at St. Louis on business for the A. L. Randall Co. A. L. Randall himself is at West Baden.

C. W. McKellar, basing his judgment on the call for dye, says there will be a big demand for white carnations for St. Patrick's day.

St. Patrick's Day

Will fall on the 17th of March this year, and in all probability for several years to come, but several other things have fallen in the last few days, which will probably interest you more, as it includes nearly everything in the Cut Flower line, notably in Roses and Carnations; in fact, everything is lower in price and better in quality. Increased supplies in nearly everything now coming in; only shortage, long stem Beauties, and there is a fair supply of these. Bulbous stock plentiful, also Easter Lilies, Callas and Valley. Violets are coming in heavy. Ferns have advanced to $3.00 per 1000; other Greens remain at the old price.

St. Patrick's Green

This fluid will absolutely color white carnations, or other white flowers, a vivid Irish green. One quart is sufficient to color three to four hundred carnations. One pint, 50c; one quart, $1.00; six pints, $2.75; six quarts, $5.00.

Fred Stielow has placed with Kroeschell Bros. Co. the contract for heating the Garland houses he is building at Niles Center for his son. Kroeschell's are this season making two new sizes of hot water heater, No. 17 being designed to heat 70,000 feet of glass to a rose temperature, and No. 18 to heat 100,000 feet to a carnation temperature. Mr. Stielow is using the No. 17 with threaded boiler tube piping and forced circulation by means of a pump driven by a gasoline engine.

Winterson's Seed Store reports counter trade beginning. Mail orders were prompt in response to the mailing of the catalogue.

Wietor Bros. say their carnations are doing considerably better, as the result of the effort they have been making to avoid overpropagation.

At E. H. Hunt's W. E. Lynch says he finds business better than it was a year ago during the first week in Lent.

B. Eldredge, Belvidere, is sending sprays cut from his famous orange tree to the Chicago Carnation Co.

H. Roth, Lafayette, Ind., was a visitor last week, buying greenhouse material. A. C. Rott, of Joliet, was in town March 6.

H. C. Blewitt still is confined to his home at Des Plaines by rheumatism. He has been laid up since about January 1.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The market became almost demoralized at the close of last week, and at the opening of the present week showed no sign of recovery. There were more violets left over March 6 than this market ever was called on to distribute in a day. Some of the wholesalers had as high as 100 boxes on hand. The whole market feels, as it has not for years, the advent of Lent, and to this may be added the increasing daily shipments. Roses, especially, have fallen and few commanded a higher price than 8 cents, and from this down rapidly to $1 per hundred. Carnations also struck a lower level and 1 cent to 2 cents was the prevailing quotation; only the selected novelties were higher. The best American Beauties seem to be the only stock that held at anywhere near its real value. Most of the Beauty stock is mediocre and slow of sale. Even the street was offering the short-stemmed ones Saturday. For cattleyas 50 cents was top, though a few Mossie touched 60 cents the first of the season. Gardenias are lower and lilies of all kinds have fallen. Bulbous stock of all kinds is overabundant. Yellow tulips were selling at 10 cents a bunch March 6.

The retailers' windows are gay with blooming plants of all kinds. The signs of an early spring are abundant. The general expectation is that the present week will see the end of winter. The nurserymen already are busy with their early shipments, the seedsmen are working night and day, and the plantsmen are already almost sold out of Easter blooming stock. Everyone seems to be anticipating a remarkably good holiday season.

Various Notes.

The plant auctions, including roses, bulbs, hardy shrubs and evergreens, begin Tuesday, March 14, at Elliott's and MacNiff's, on Vesey street, the center of this branch of the business.

The New York Florists' Club's monthly meeting will be held next Monday evening, March 13, at its rooms in the Grand Opera House building. There will be bowling at the club's alleys, 115 West

ANNOUNCEMENT

We are now occupying our new quarters at 309 Main Street, one door south of our old stand. FIRST FLOOR will be devoted to the handling of CUT FLOWERS; SECOND, to FLORISTS' SUPPLIES and OFFICES; THIRD FLOOR, SPHAGNUM and GREEN MOSS; FOURTH FLOOR, WIRE WORK for FLORISTS' USE; BASEMENT, for FERTILIZERS and BULBS. We are now receiving a heavy cut of all kinds of cut flowers, especially white carnations, which will be in heavy crop for St. Patrick's Day; plenty of colors for openings or special occasions. Let me quote prices.

Now is the time to order your hanging baskets and green moss for same. Our list of green goods is complete. We are agents for Evergreen Fertilizer for florists' and lawn uses. I would be pleased to make you quotations on any of the above stock. Thanking the trade for past favors, I trust a continuance of same.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The first week of Lent has been dull in the cut flower market. Business has fallen away decidedly. Prices are lower; the average prices much lower, job lots and leftovers playing havoc with the total of sales. Yet there is no special increase in the supply. The weather is decidedly Marchy—cold, snow, clouds, just enough sunshine to encourage growth after the long, dark winter.

Beauties are the only staple flowers that hold their price of a week ago. This is due more to the extremely light cut than to any special demand. The better grades of Richmond, Bride and Killarney are firmer than the shorts, except in white, where values hold fairly. Carnations are in an unhappy state, needing Mothers', Fathers', Daughters' and Sons' days to cheer them up into fresh life. Prices move downward. They take pushing of the hardest kind. The lower grades of white are more sought than the lower grades of colored. Valley is in only fair demand. The market is overstocked at times, with occasional periods of improvement. Sweet peas are falling off a little in quality. The prices have in consequence attracted the cheap buyers, who are using them in quantity. Violets are the weakest feature of the market; because the violets have increased in numbers with the arrival of Lent, low prices rule. Atlantic City is the bright spot in the violet cloud. Many flower lovers spend Sunday at the city by the sea and the violet sales there are excellent. Gardenias are rather scarce, with values fairly well maintained. Cattleya Schroederae is not up to the market standard of orchid merit when there is a chance of securing Trianae. Callas are abundant. The withdrawal of the support of the large decorations has left them without a sufficient outlet. Easter lilies are in better shape. All bulbous stock is down. This time the southern daffs cannot be blamed. The cold weather has retarded the army to follow last month's scouts. Southern arbutus has come.

House Warming at Riverview.

About 200 guests of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., left Market street wharf at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, March 8, to visit the new 2-acre greenhouse plant at Riverview. Nearly one-fourth of this number were from New York, Baltimore and Washington, while over one-half were members of the Philadelphia Florists' Club, the remaining fourth being made up of persons interested. There were no formalities—just a hearty welcome from each and all of the hosts, an inspection of the magnificent new plant, with the well appointed power house, and a generous collation in the well named service house. The party left the Riverview station of the Pennsylvania railroad at 5:15, reaching the city a half hour later. The affair was a great success.

Robert Crawford, Jr., took his employees to the theater to see "The Man from Home" March 1, closing a pleasant evening with a banquet at the Rathskeller. The affair was a great success. Everyone invited accepted, except one chap newly married, and everyone had a good time.

H. Bayersdorfer celebrated his fiftieth birthday March 1, or, properly speaking, it was celebrated for him. Mr. Bayersdorfer was called on in his office, was presented with gifts and carried off in state by his many friends, while in the evening Mrs. Bayersdorfer gave a party in his honor. It was all surprising and nice.

Robert Craig returned from the Isle of Pines March 1, decidedly better for the trip.

Alexander B. Scott returned from Hot Springs, Va., March 7.

L. B. Eastburn, of Kennett, Pa., lost his barn and contents by fire March 4. Fortunately house and greenhouses were uninjured.

Eugene Bernheimer has plenty of nice Golden Gates from the Floral Ex-

Leo Niessen believes the crop of cut Easter lilies will be large and of fine quality. The vanguard is arriving.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

Roses continue on the short side so far as Cleveland is concerned, although there is an abundance of all the spring flowers. Business has continued excellent, so that all stock is cleaning up in good shape, though much heavier production in all departments is momentarily expected because of the better growing weather.

Organize to Advertise.

Friday evening, March 3, the florists of Cleveland held another meeting around the supper table at the Hofbrau, the attendance numbering twenty-nine. As a result of the meeting the Flower Club was organized, with the following officers:

President—H. P. Knoble.
Vice-president—C. M. Wagner.
Second vice-president—F. W. Griffin.
Secretary—Harry D. Jones.
Treasurer—F. R. Williams.

The action was the result of a meeting held February 24, at which there was discussion of the subject of general publicity for the flower interests of Cleveland. It was the general opinion that Cleveland does not consume half the flowers that should be used in a city of this size, the reason being that the flower business is not exploited as it should be. Mr. Knoble was the prime mover and suggested the plan of inviting each florist to contribute, pro rata to his volume of business, to a publicity fund to be spent in running advertisements in the leading daily and Sunday paper, the advertisements to have no name signed and to be published in the interest of the whole trade in the city. At both the first and second meetings there was general discussion of the details of the proposition. After the election of officers committees of five members each were appointed on publicity, finance and entertainment. It was arranged to meet once a month for the present and it is hoped to accomplish much in a broad sense for the flower business of Cleveland. Everyone will be asked to aid in the work, grower, wholesaler and retailer.

Various Notes.

C. D. Fell, of Knoble Bros., has been on the sick list for a couple of weeks, but is now able to be about again.

The Cleveland Florists' Club anticipates taking a big delegation to Boston for the National Flower Show. Arrangements have been made for a special car and Frank A. Friedley, secretary of the club and state vice-president of the S. A. F., is working with the intention of filling all the berths.

The Market.

Clear skies, heavy supplies, moderate demand and a considerable slump in prices have been features of the opening week in Lent. Of late years there has been less of a cessation in social festivities, but the clear skies following a comparatively dark month caused a congestion, not at all uncommon at this season. Roses are much more plentiful and, while they clean out tolerably well, it is only at a sacrifice in values. The quality remains of the best. Carnations, while abundant, clean up tolerably well, but values have been slaughtered. The warmer weather has taken considerable color out of flowers of pink shades which were not picked fairly close. Violets are overabundant and they need to be gilt-edged stock to bring 50 cents per hundred. Many are sold at half this price and some even lower. Another fortnight of clear weather will see a large part of the singles in houses picked, but doubles usually carry us along until May. Sweet peas are arriving in tremendous quantities. While some make 50 cents to 75 cents per hundred, there are others selling as low as $1.50 per thousand. Some of the best stock now has stems fifteen inches long.

Bulbous stock, which sold well during February's cloudy weather, is now something of a glut. Double Von Sions are in heavy supply and it is surprising that so many of these coarse looking flowers are grown, when the singles are so much more beautiful and usually less expensive. Victoria, Sir Watkin, Emperor, Golden Spur and poeticus ornatus are the narcissi seen in greatest abundance. Hyacinths are abundant and good, but do not sell well. Antirrhinums are fine but away down in value. Lilies and callas are each heavily oversupplied and lily of the valley is hard to move. Marguerites are more plentiful, but sell well. There are still a fair number of Cattleya Trianae and an abundance of dendrobiums and cœlogynes. Gardenias are arriving more freely. Adiantum is coming of better quality and sales of asparagus and smilax continue quite good.

Various Notes.

Everything is progressing swimmingly for the S. A. F. National Show. The clearer skies which have been vouchsafed to us of late were just what many growers were praying for, and those who had some doubts about their rambler roses and other plants being in season are now feeling happy. In every city and town in Massachusetts which one visits the chief topic now is the National Show, and the tremendous demand for space shows that even the big Mechanics' building will be taxed to accommodate all the exhibits.

The many friends of H. S. Chandler, of Tewksbury, were pleased to see him back in the market again last week. Mr. Chandler broke a bone in one of his ankles a month ago.

John McFarland, of North Easton, showed a beautiful seedling cattleya, C. Dowiana x C. Lawrenceana, at Horticultural hall March 4. The sepals, petals and exterior of the lip were of a rich rosy color. The yellow coloring inside the lip clearly showed the influence of C. Dowiana. This plant was a seedling raised by W. W. Lunt, and Mr. McFarland has been nursing it along for over six years.

Extra fine antirrhinums are now arriving at the flower markets from, among others, B. P. Winch, Framingham; J. G. Holmes, Saugus, and W. J. Dana, Wellesley.

At present callas are unusually abundant in the markets and of extra fine quality. A few who grow these in quantity are William Patterson, of Wollaston; J. T. Butterworth, of South Framingham; William Capstick, of Auburndale; Paine Bros., of Randolph, and Willow Hill Greenhouses, of West Roxbury.

Trade in shamrocks is now becoming quite active in the markets. Leonard Cousins, of Concord Junction, has many thousands, as also has William Nicholson, of Framingham. The latter has an extra fine lot of marguerites at present and his Godfrey callas are popular.

John Barr's new variegated carnation, Mrs. B. P. Cheney, continues to keep up the excellent reputation it has made. For so large a flower, it is an unusually prolific bloomer and it is featured in several of the most up-to-date retail stores.

At the greenhouses of E. B. Dane, in Chestnut Hill, where Donald McKenzie has charge, is to be found what is probably the finest private collection of orchids in America. A house of phalænopsis is a grand sight at present. There are also scores of rare and choice cypripediums and other varieties in flower.

At the big Waltham establishment of Peirce Bros. many thousands of giganteum lilies are in just the right condition for Easter. The firm is cutting some thousands of flowers weekly, of the earlier batches. They have also an excellent lot of azaleas, with fine houses of Asparagus Sprengeri and adiantum. Pink Delight is a favorite among carnations. Gardenias and cattleyas are each looking well.

J. H. Hale's lecture at Horticultural hall will come March 25 and no doubt many S. A. F. visitors will be glad to hear it. Mr. Hale, by the way, has just been appointed one of the railroad commissioners for Connecticut.

Henry S. Dawson, of the Eastern Nurseries, Hollister, states that advance orders for nursery stock are this season heavier than ever and he is impatiently waiting for the passing of snow and frost to start digging. At the Bay State Nurseries of W. H. Wyman I found great activity prevailing and many shipments were being prepared for southern parts. Orders here point to a record-breaking spring trade.

Carnation Dorothy Gordon is now arriving of fine quality at the markets. Those from S. J. Goddard, handled by Thomas Pegler, are extra fine.

The Halifax Garden Co. has just finished cutting a 300-foot house of sweet peas, which have been cropping since late September. They have two other large houses just coming into crop and their pick averages 6,000 daily, which are handled by H. T. Capers.

John McFarland, of North Easton, has some thousands of giganteum lilies in just the right condition for Easter flowering. He is cutting 2,000 valley a day at present, also nice lots of gardenias and calendulas.

The Market.

The first few days of Lent did not seem to affect trade much, as most of the leading retailers report business good all of last week. There were a number of downtown openings and considerable funeral work was put up by the downtown florists. They have also had a big run of transient business of late and are disposing of thousands of bunches of violets and carnations.

The weather has been fine all the week and stock of all kinds and in all grades has become so plentiful that the wholesalers have been unable to dispose of it all. Prices, too, have come down considerably during the week. A lot of roses of extra good quality are coming in, especially Killarney, White Killarney, Richmond, Maryland and Ivory.

Carnations are in good demand and are selling at about $15 per thousand, and $2 in hundred lots. Common sorts and splits are down to $1 per hundred. A heavy crop is expected in these this week. In California violets, too, the supply is greater than the demand; good Californias sell at about 25 cents per hundred. Callas and Harrisii lilies are plentiful, with the demand good. Cattleyas have sold well at $5 per dozen. Bulb stock is becoming more and more abundant each day. Dutch hyacinths, tulips, jonquils, Von Sions, valley, freesias, Romans and Paper Whites can be had in any quantities from any of the wholesalers. The market now is in better shape than at any time since the first of the year. Fancy ferns, smilax and asparagus also are in big supply.

Various Notes.

A. Werner & Bro., rose growers at Clayton, are again in crop with roses and are sending to this market an excellent quality of Killarney, White Killarney and Richmond. The W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. handles all their stock.

Jule Koenig, of the city forester's office, is out for the appointment as city forester when the mayor hands in his slate of new appointments next month. We hope Mr. Koenig's name will be among the lot.

C. C. Sanders, head of the Sanders Nurseries, reports that he will soon start building a 2-story store at his Clara avenue place. The lower floor will be used for his retail store, with a large show house in the rear. The store will be under the management of his son, Oliver K. Sanders.

Miss Matilda Meinhardt, who is well known in the trade and a year ago was president of the Ladies' S. A. F., will be missed this year at the August meeting, as she is to travel through Europe this summer.

The opening of the big Hill Grocery Co., March 4, made a good call for designs sent by friends of the firm. One of the most attractive designs was a full sized eagle of flowers, sent by the Eagle Trading Stamp Co.

The H. J. Weber & Sons Nursery Co. says there is an abundance of orders ahead to keep all the force busy until late in the spring. This firm is now cutting some fine roses and carnations. These have been off crop for some time.

supply, much to the gratification of the growers.

Club Banquet.

A great success in every respect was the third annual banquet of the Dayton Florists' Club, which was held on the evening of March 1 at the Hotel Phillips. Nearly all the members were present, accompanied by their wives and sweethearts. The tables were beautifully decorated in seasonable style, which displayed the artistic tastes of the Dayton florists. The menu proved to be a most interesting part of the entertainment, and all present did justice to it. A splendid program was furnished by the orchestra.

Horace M. Frank acted as toastmaster, while H. H. Ritter, Arthur

Illinois Self-Watering Window and Porch Boxes, Hanging Baskets, Pots, etc.

Pat. January 29, 1907; June 22, 1909.

Mr. Florist, you can easily double your sales of plants by offering them in these self-watering devices, for the very simple reason that the plants will live and thrive in them, in the homes of your customers, in spite of careless watering, and the better success your customers have, the better your reputation will be for selling good healthy plants.

We are selling these boxes all over the United States to florists and consumers. We much prefer to sell them through the florist only, and give him the benefit of our publicity advertising and a handsome profit besides.

If you doubt their efficiency, send us a trial order and return the goods to us if they prove different from our claims.

We are now making a complete line of Brass and Copper Fern Dishes, Boxes, etc., all equipped with the self-watering device. Write at once for our catalogue and get in line for Easter.

BETTER BOXES

would be hard to find than the ones shown here. They were made for Chicago's first florists, E. Wienhoeber, Samuelson, and others. If you handle the best trade in your city, you will be interested in our boxes, made to your special order—any size, shape or design, lined or unlined. Let us know your wants—we'll let you know the price. They may cost a little more, but they are fully worth it. Write today, before the Easter rush.

Schmidt, J. W. McNary and Mrs. J. F. Young responded. A little surprise was sprung by the ladies, who all gave short and appropriate toasts to the gentlemen. Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Frank favored the guests with several vocal selections, which were immensely enjoyed, and at the close the entire company sang "Should Auld Acquaintance Be Forgotten?"

A rising vote of thanks was tendered the banquet committee for the pleasing way in which everything had been arranged. The committee consisted of Horace M. Frank, George Bartholomew and E. E. Schaefer.

Various Notes.

Unfortunately, Warren G. Matthews was prevented from attending the annual banquet on account of sickness in his family. He was on the program for a paper on "The Sterilizing of Soil and the Hybridizing and Chemicalizing of the Chrysanthemum for Future Profit." We are glad to report that Mrs. Warren G. Matthews is able to be up again.

A. Miller, representing the Skidelsky & Irwin Co., Philadelphia, took a little side trip to Dayton, March 5, where he celebrated his birthday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Bartholomew. Mr. Miller is on his way home to Texas to visit his relatives, whom he has not seen for ten years. He expects to remain there about two weeks.

The Miami Floral Co. has a splendid crop of lilies coming on for Easter and the roses and carnations are also in a flourishing condition. The firm reports business to be most gratifying.

The Dayton Floral Co. has just received a large shipment of box trees, all sizes, from Holland. They emphatically state that the lenten season "cuts no figure" with their business, as they are kept busy filling orders.

Word comes from Arno Hendrichs, who is now in Jacksonville, Fla., that he is having the finest kind of a time, thoroughly enjoying the southern climate.

Among the visitors during the last few days were Fred Lempke, of the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago; Mr. Sperling, representing the Stumpp & Walter Co., New York city, and Henry Ehrhardt, of Sidney, O.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Weber and daughter, Gladys, of Cincinnati, O., were the guests of the Bartholomew family last week.

The Heiss Co. reports that, while trade last week was not quite as brisk as in the preceding week, yet results were quite satisfactory.

There does not seem to be much enthusiasm among the Dayton florists regarding the National Flower Show at Boston. All seem to be so busy preparing for Easter that they will be unable to get away.

Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Ritter spent several days in Indianapolis, Ind., last week. R. A. B.

Detroit, Mich.—The Florists' Club listened to an exceptionally interesting travelogue March 6, Philip Breitmeyer describing his trip to Cuba, describing especially the floricultural features of that country. A. Colyn, of Voorhout, Holland, described the bulb district.

SEFTON CORRUGATED SHIPPING CASES

STRONG, LIGHT AND CONVENIENT

WHY use heavy wooden Boxes for Shipments of Flowers and Plants when you can get a box better adapted to your needs, weighing about one-half as much?

Our Boxes are made to fold flat; thus insuring economy in storage space and enables the commission merchant to knock them down and return them in bundles, reducing return charges--they can be used over and over.

Our Patented K. D. Tin Corner is the only satisfactory K. D. corner ever adapted to a Corrugated Shipping Case. It gives you a perfectly flat box. Costs no more than set up corners.

MERIDEN, CONN.

R. W. Barrow has had exceptionally fine window displays of late. Last week he made some handsome showings of cinerarias and pans of bulb stock, such as daffodils, tulips and hyacinths. Mr. Barrow reports a good season and is looking forward to a record-breaking Easter.

Out at Joseph Greenbacker's place everything is spick and span, as usual. Carnations are one of the heaviest crops grown here and Mr. Greenbacker certainly knows how to grow them. Bulb stock also is grown quite extensively.

Herman Labo, the 4-year-old son of Joseph Labo, disappeared March 6 and had not been found March 8. It is supposed he was abducted. Mr. Labo is well known in the trade in the northern part of Illinois. He and Mrs. Labo were in the Chicago market on the day of the supposed abduction, leaving the child in the care of a housekeeper at the Labo establishment east of town.

Later.—Bloodhounds traced the trail to a covered well, in which the boy's body was found.

BEDDING PLANTS.

What time should I sow the following seeds to have nice plants by May 20 in plant boxes: Petunias, alyssums, mignonettes, nicotianas, lobelias, salvias, salpiglossis and nasturtiums?

F. H. R.

Petunias and lobelias should be sown now. Salpiglossis, salvias, nicotianas and nasturtiums need not be sown before March 20 or the end of the month. The three last named all make rapid growth. Mignonettes and alyssums would also be in time if sown towards the end of the present month. It would be well not to try transplanting the mignonettes into flats, but keep them in pots, as they are not easy annuals to transplant. In fact, all the plants you name would give more satisfactory results if grown in pots singly than when pricked out in shallow boxes.

C. W.

TULIPS FOR FORCING.

Which are the best forcing tulips coming to the cut flower market now in red, white and yellow?

E. M.

The best forcing single tulips at present in season are: La Reine, white; Keizerskroon, red and yellow; Yellow Prince, yellow; Belle Alliance, scarlet; Thomas Moore, terra cotta buff. In doubles, Murillo, delicate rose; Couronne d'Or, yellow, flushed orange; Imperator rubrorum, scarlet; Salvator rosa, rose-pink, are the best sellers.

Six Pages of Retailers' Cards

This department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand. If you are the only florist in your city represented here, you get the orders coming into your territory from other florists. If you are not represented and "the other fellow" is—we can leave it to you what becomes of these desirable orders.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

WESTERLY, R. I.

Among those who have come rapidly to the front in the florists' business here is Conrad S. Schultz. Three years ago he purchased the old H. G. York greenhouses, on Beach street, and remodeled the store and greenhouses. In addition to this store and range, he purchased one year ago the Smith greenhouses, on Quarry Hill, and was fortunate enough to secure Charles Meyer, formerly of Reuter & Son, to take charge of this range.

Business with Mr. Schultz has grown rapidly, for, in addition to doing a large retail trade in Westerly and Stonington, he also does a considerable wholesale business. Thomas Young, of New York city, handles all of Mr. Schultz's surplus stock. He expects to put up two more large greenhouses this season, and these, with the two ranges he now has, will make him one of the largest wholesalers and retailers in this vicinity. This has been a case where perseverance, together with a thorough knowledge of the business, has won for him gratifying success. B.

clearing weather last week sent all kinds of blooms forward so that the supply has been fully equal to the demand. There was a slight falling off in prices. Everywhere preparations for Easter are in evidence and the report from the growers seems to indicate that there will be a plentiful supply of everything. On Saturday, March 4, nearly all of the downtown florists held a cut price sale on violets in opposition to the drug and department stores. Several hundred thousand blooms were thus disposed of at 15 cents per bunch of twenty-five, as against 19 cents for similar bunches by the other stores.

Various Notes.

H. Howard Pepper, of the Melrose Rose Gardens, has been promoted to the position of trust officer at the Industrial Trust Co., of this city.

Ed Brooks, of T. J. Johnston & Co., went to a strange barber a few days ago, with the result that his best friends hardly recognize him.

James Hackins, of Central Falls, is entering upon his thirty-third year as superintendent of the Moshasuck cemetery in that city. He reports that his florist business this season has exceeded anything in his experience.

James Tefft, of Peacedale, recently buried his wife and mother, who died within a few days of each other.

Timothy O'Connor had the decorations for the recent dinner and reception of Lady Decies in this city.

Mr. McCullough, of East Providence, has returned from a several days' visit in New York.

The flower store and greenhouse of Michael Sweeney, at 512 Pine street, was broken into on the night of February 28, the front door being forced, and a lot of lead pencils, cigars and other property valued at only a few dollars was stolen, but several hundred dollars of damage was occasioned by running over beds and benches and breaking down flowers, as well as by the chilling from leaving doors open.

John H. Forester is passing around the cigars because of the birth of a daughter.

James Nisbet, of Pawtucket, has just purchased a Hupmobile runabout.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., E. L. Page, Greene, N. Y.; First Vice-pres., L. H. Vaughan, Chicago; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. Twenty-ninth annual meeting, June 20 to 22, 1911.

THE Kerr pure seed bill was passed by the lower branch of the South Dakota legislature.

J. W. JUNG SEED CO., Randolph, Wis., plans to largely increase its acreage in flower seed crops this season.

THE Western Canners' Association will hold its annual convention at the Sherman House, Chicago, March 16.

JOHN PRENDERGAST, with the Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, and Miss Stella M. Corwin, of Janesville, Wis., were married February 25.

THE Sioux City Seed and Nursery Co., Sioux City, Ia., has disposed of its nursery department to the Whiting Nursery Co., Yankton, S. D.

L. E. HIGGINS, a bean grower at Lompoc, Cal., has acquired a tract of land just outside Port O'Connor, Tex., and will embark in seed growing there.

THE free lectures in the store of the H. F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, are drawing increasingly large audiences as the season advances.

CARLOS JENSEN, representing L. Daehnfeldt, cabbage and cauliflower seed grower, at Odense, Denmark, is preparing to make a trip through the United States in April.

C. E. KENDEL, secretary of the American Seed Trade Association, states that, although it has been decided not to hold the 1911 convention at Milwaukee, because of lack of hotel accommodations, no other city has as yet been selected.

At a meeting in the store of Barteldes Seed Co., Oklahoma City, Okla., February 25, the Oklahoma County Poultry Association was organized. A poultry show was held at the same time and more than 1,000 people visited the store during the day.

JAMES VICK'S SONS have one of the tastiest catalogue covers of the season. The stock is white, with an embossed border and lithographed and embossed pansies, a purple pansy on the front and three bright colored blooms on the back. It is simplicity itself—a Stecher job.

FERRY'S CANADIAN BRANCH.

The proposed reciprocity treaty between Canada and the United States, which names seeds among the articles for the free list, will have no effect on the plans of D. M. Ferry & Co. for the Canadian branch in Windsor. Since the destruction by fire of the old D. M. Ferry building, on the Windsor river front, last spring, the company has been occupying temporary quarters with the intention of erecting a suitable building for the Canadian interests of the firm. A lot 90x100 feet, at the corner of McDougall and Sandwich streets, was purchased last summer. Plans are now being prepared for the building. The structure will be of reinforced concrete, four stories at least in height. Ground will be broken within a few weeks.

SELL YOUR OWN SCRATCH OR POULTRY FOOD. We will make it for you under your own brand for $28.00 per ton. Send today for sample 100-lb. bag, $1.50. Mr. C. E. Jenson, of Atlantic County, N. J., on Oct. 27, 1910, writes as follows: "I want to state that your three grades of poultry food—Chick Starter, Developing Food and 'Square Deal' Scratch or Poultry Food—stand without an equal today. They are perfect mixtures and sound in grain and a pleasure to handle."

manager for the John H. Allan Seed Co., has purchased from the Reynolds Preserving Co. the Buick automobile used by them last season. Mr. Hopkins expects to make good use of the machine, as he has a great deal of traveling to do in looking after and inspecting the immense acreage of seed peas which will be contracted for by his company this year, their operations now extending over a large part of this state.

IMPORTS.

The imports of seed through the port of New York for the week ending February 25 were as follows:

Kind.	Pkgs.	Val.	Kind.	Pkgs.	Val.
Annatto ..	25	$ 170	Millet	178	$ 486
Canary ...	1,526	3,944	Mustard	50	674
Clover ...	401	11,310	Poppy	500	1,980

Fenugreek.	280	1,082	Sugar beet...	2	29
Lycopodium	10	1,000	Other		6,374

In the same period the imports of bulbs, trees and plants were valued at $9,653.

NATIONAL SEED LEGISLATION.

The seed trade always has deplored the method by which seed legislation is considered in Congress. While the dealers in garden seeds never have admitted any need for legislation, the grass seed interests would welcome the enactment of a national law prohibiting the importation of seeds unfit for planting. Seed legislation always has come up during the seedsmen's busy season, and consideration has been by means of a public hearing before a large committee. The conditions have not been favorable for getting a final and right decision of the whole question. In the hope of getting such a decision as will put a satisfactory end to the agitation, at the recent hearing in Washington George S. Green, of the Illinois Seed Co., Chicago, proposed the appointment of a commission to consider the whole question with deliberation—but the congressmen did not take kindly to the idea. Here is the germane part of the dialogue:

Mr. Green. I believe we are here constructively, not obstructively, and in furtherance of this constructive method I have this final suggestion to make. Mr. Mann has said that he thinks there is no probability that action will be taken on this bill, 29163, at this session of Congress. I want to suggest that as soon as practicable after the urgent work that you people in Washington have in hand is attended to, a commission be appointed of three congressmen, preferably from this committee, three expert seed analysts, or representatives of the national or state departments, three experienced grass-seed dealers, and three garden-seed dealers.

FLORISTS' REVIEW

When Writing Advertisers

James Vick's Sons—Largest Growers of High-G

We have grown Asters longer, introduced more varieties, grow larger quantities and sell to more Seedsmen and Florists than any other Aster grower in America.

Vick's Imperial Rose

This illustrates one of the newest of half a dozen varieties from the same family as Day-break and Purity. A deep, rich rose color. One of the best recent introductions.

Vick's Early Upright

Numerous readers of The Review will recognize this as a popular novelty of last year. Many Florists claim they got more flowers, larger blooms and longer stems than they could grow of other early kinds, because it grows as vigorously and yields as abundantly as many of the Late Asters. The flowers are solid, ball shaped and considerably above the average in size. A medium early variety which has been a money maker wherever tried. Two colors: White and Lavender Pink.

Introduced by us several years ago. Catalogued now by all leading seedsmen. Habit is similar to Vick's Late Branching, vigorous in growth, with long, stiff stems. Flowers resemble the quilled varieties, but much larger and broader, the inner petals being fantastically twisted, curled and incurved, completely covering the crown.

Mr. Richardson. Do you not take any of them from the Agricultural Department?

Mr. Green. Yes; three seed analysts from the Agricultural Department; in other words, scientific men versed in the testing of seeds.

Mr. Richardson. You struck this committee at an unfortunate time. We have just had a good deal of experience about getting scientific boards or commissions.

Mr. Green. I am sorry for that. We like the scientific fellows pretty well, sometimes; and sometimes we do not. They are like all people; they are prone to error at times.

Mr. Adamson. I suppose he thought this committee looked like a good group to select hayseeds from. (Laughter.)

Mr. Green. Gentlemen, speaking seriously, some such method as that is likely, in my opinion, to prove far more effective for proper regulation of the seed trade of the country—of the grass seed trade of the country, as these gentlemen [the garden seed dealers present] wish me to correct myself—than any such hearing as this in the brief time at our disposal.

Mr. Townsend. Did I understand that improvements are being made all the while; that this is growing better constantly by the agitation you and these gentlemen are giving to the subject?

Mr. Green. I would not like to put it personally that way. But things are growing better by the general agitation.

Mr. Townsend. The farmers are gradually coming to understand that it pays to plant good seeds rather than weeds?

Mr. Green. Yes; and gradually becoming more and more willing to pay for them.

Mr. Esch. How many states have regulations against seed adulteration?

Mr. Green. I do not know whether there is any gentleman here who could answer that question accurately or not. Mr. Boyles, could you?

Mr. Boyles. I think Mr. Smith, our attorney, could answer it better than I. Probably there are twelve. I think there were five bills introduced this winter.

Mr. Esch. Is there any uniformity in the standards fixed by those states?

Mr. Boyles. A few states have standards fixed, but most of them have not. Most of them have realized the unwise feature of standards.

Mr. Green. I am perfectly in earnest about this commission.

The Chairman. You are just wasting breath on it.

Mr. Richardson. Do not think about a commission.

Mr. Adamson. I do not think you could pass any sort of a commission bill through the House now.

The Chairman. In view of the fact that no one can distinguish between many seeds that pay a duty under the tariff bill from those that come in free, we might refer it to the tariff board.

Mr. Richardson. Take these gentlemen sitting around here; they have plenty of sense and they understand

DREER'S
"Peerless Pink"
BRANCHING ASTER

Dreer's Superb Strains of the Best Asters

Our stocks of the following Asters are grown under our own supervision and we are quite sure that nothing finer in quality can be had at any price from any source. Our yearly increasing sales are the best evidence that they give complete satisfaction.

DREER'S "PEERLESS PINK"

A magnificent new variety which may briefly be described as an improved late-branching shell-pink. Flowers of largest size, of rich shell-pink, borne on long, strong stems, making them one of the finest for cutting. 50 cents per trade packet; $4.00 per ounce.

DREER'S SUPERB LATE-BRANCHING

The finest of all September-blooming Asters. Our stock has been re-selected for a number of years and is now as perfect as the most painstaking care can make it. We offer the following eight distinct colors:

Azure Blue or deep lavender	Deep Purple
Pale Lavender	Rose-pink
Deep Crimson	Shell-pink
Deep Rose	Pure White

Any of the above, 25 cents per trade packet; $1.00 per ounce. Finest mixed, all colors, 25 cents per trade packet; 75 cents per ounce.

CREGO'S GIANT COMET

The perfection of Comet Asters, immense fluffy flowers, five inches and over across, borne on long, strong stems, coming into bloom in August, continuing through September. We offer pure white and shell-pink, 40 cents per trade packet; $2.00 per ounce.

The above are but a few of the many Asters which we offer. For a complete list see pages 2 and 3 of our current wholesale price list. If you do not have a copy we will be pleased to send one to any Florist on application. New crop seeds of almost all kinds are now in stock, and early orders from the trade are solicited.

DAYBREAK

A fine mid-season Aster of symmetrical growth, 18 inches high, with good-sized, densely double soft pink flowers. 50 cents per trade packet; $2.50 per ounce.

VIOLET KING

A fine late-branching variety of exceptionally free growth, bearing very large double flowers of a pleasing shade of soft violet. 30 cents per trade packet; $1.50 per ounce.

EARLY WONDER

The earliest of all Asters, blooming at the end of June; flowers of good size on good stems and valuable where early flowers are desired. We offer pure white and pink, 40 cents per trade packet; $2.00 per ounce.

QUEEN OF THE MARKET

An early-flowering, first-class Aster, coming into bloom in July, lasting well through August; flowers of large size on long, strong stems. A good variety for growing under glass. We can supply in the following six desirable colors:

Pink	Bright Rose
Purple	Crimson
White	Lavender

Any of the above, 20 cents per trade packet; 60 cents per ounce. Finest mixed, all colors, 15 cents per trade packet; 50 cents per ounce.

Stumpp & Walter Co.'s BEGONIA and GLOXINIA BULBS

We have the finest stock of these bulbs, and have been supplying the most critical trade for a number of years.

All carefully selected and graded, true to name and color.

Every florist should grow at least a few of these bulbs, for selling in pots during the summer months, and can also, by transplanting in large pots, grow specimen plants for September and October blooming.

We offer them in the following names and colors:

Begonia Bulbs Single flowering. White, yellow, pink, nan-keen, rose, red, dark red, salmon, orange, or mixed, dozen, 40c; 100, $2.50; 1000, $20.00.

Begonia Duke of Zeppelin, dozen, $1.00; 100, $7.00.

Begonia La Fayette, dozen, $1.50; 100, $10.00.

Begonia Bulbs Double flowering. White, orange, yellow, rose, dark rose, dark red, red, salmon, or mixed, dozen, 60c; 100, $4.00; 1000, $35.00.

Begonia Worthiana, dozen, $2.00; 100, $15.00.

Begonia Butterfly, dozen, $3.00; 100, $20.00.

Gloxinia Bulbs The handsomest of our blooming plants, the rich and varied coloring of the flowers being interesting in the extreme, many of them beautifully speckled; flowers 3 inches long by 2 inches in diameter, upright and pendulous; colors various and exceedingly rich in appearance.

Emperor Frederick, red bordered white.
Emperor William, violet bordered white.
Princess Elizabeth, white bordered blue.
Princess Mathilda, white bordered rose.

Mont Blanc, pure white.
Violacea, dark violet.
Madame Helene, white crowned violet.
Queen Wilhelmina, dark rose.

Defiance, scarlet.
King of the Reds, deep scarlet.
Prince Albert, dark violet.
Fine mixed.

Per dozen, 75c; per 100, $5.00; per 1000, $47.50.

this seed business, and if they come and tell us a plain tale do you not think this committee can pass on it fairly?

Mr. Green. I have great confidence in the fairness of this committee.

Mr. Richardson. They will pass upon it fairly after hearing you gentlemen giving facts and statements; we do not want any commissions.

Mr. Green. I have confidence in this committee. I do not care whether you have scientific men on it or not. But I would like to get together with some men where I could have an interchange of views with them.

Mr. Richardson. They would bring their report in and we would probably not pay any attention to it. But you come in here, practical men, talking common sense, and the committee has no other purpose than to do what is right for the good of the country, and we will pass on it all right, instead of having a commission.

The Chairman. We have been making progress in reference to this legislation, I think; do you not, Mr. Green?

Mr. Green. Yes; I think there is very marked progress.

The Chairman. On both sides?

Mr. Green. Yes.

The Chairman. The committee has learned some things and so has the seed trade.

Mr. Green. Yes, sir.

The Chairman. And we are much nearer now than we were when we reported the bill originally?

Mr. Green. Yes, unquestionably.

The Chairman. I think after a while we will find you will come in here, as some people did the other day on another bill to which they were opposed some years ago, and all advocate a proposition.

Mr. Green. I think so.

Mr. Richardson. I can tell you what you could expect if you got a commission. You would expect this committee to take the verdict of that commission and act on it.

Mr. Green. No; I would not expect that of any congressional committee. I would think that the report of that commission would receive due weight.

Mr. Hubbard. You would expect them to agree with you, would you not, substantially, and if so, they would simply come here and say what you would say, would they not?

Mr. Adamson. You would like to know that the commission has your views when you parted, would you not? That is generally the situation.

Mr. Green. Yes.

Mr. Richardson. You would give the commission your views, and you would expect them to carry them out.

Mr. Adamson. Nobody wants a commission except to adopt his views.

Mr. Green. Yes. We have great confidence in them, because we believe our views are right.

Mr. Richardson. You see, we have seen all that demonstrated with other commissions, and we are tired of them.

THE DAVIS SEED CO.

The incorporation of the John B. Davis Seed Co., Sturgeon Bay, Wis., was reported in this column a few weeks ago. The following is from a recent issue of the Sturgeon Bay Advocate, where it appeared under the head, "Shipbuilders Engage in Seed Business":

"A new seed company that will bid for the patronage of the public and good will of the farming community in this county the ensuing season is the John B. Davis Seed Co., recently incorporated under the state law. The organization is composed of John B. Davis, president and general manager; August Rieboldt, vice-president; Joseph Wolter, treasurer, and Jos. M. Schauer, secretary. Each one of these individuals is well known in the business life of our city and is counted among its most stable and reliable citizens. Mr. Davis, the head of the concern, has for a number of years been identified with the W. W. Barnard Co., and is therefore well known to the farming community of the county. The new company will make its headquarters in the building and premises formerly occupied by the W. W. Barnard Co., the latter having withdrawn from the county entirely. The company are seedsmen, growers of

AMERICAN PANSY SEEDS

Hesperian Strain. A selection of the most beautiful varieties, noticeable for their large size and perfection of form and coloring. We offer this mixture after 30 years' experience in pansy seed and plant growing for both the wholesale and retail trade, and recommend it for those having the most critical customers. Pkt. 25c; 1000 seeds 50c; ½ oz., $1.25; ¼ oz., $2.25; oz., $7.00. Price list of other mixtures and separate varieties free to any address.

fancy varieties and buyers of commercial peas and beans, dealers in garden, flower and field seeds, growers and dealers in trees and plants and bulbs, and especially gladiolus bulbs."

SEED NOTES FROM HOLLAND.

Writing to one of the English trade journals, a Hollander said under a late February date:

"In general the farmers here prefer to sow their summer crops early, and some of them have already sown beans, peas and spinach. Seed growers at Andijk are already planting cabbages for seed. This early sowing and planting may cause heavy losses if we get some days of sharp frost, but at present the plants are budding. Several growers around Andijk are laying out gardens to grow rhubarb. Kale crops look well, and this article yielded well in North Holland, but this culture is going backwards in the Gron districts, as insect pests destroyed the seed crops during several years.

"After a two years' slow trade in nasturtium, a demand has again sprung up for it, and the leading English houses have placed contract orders in this country. Large quantities of nasturtium are grown yearly on the Zealand Isles. Several acres of curled Mustard Southern Giant will be grown here this summer for the American trade."

Lily bulbs have two arch enemies—green fly and too much water. When lilies are bad, one or both prevail as a general thing. Of course, sometimes the bulbs are at fault, but 75% of the time they are not. Any grower who permits his lilies to be infested with green fly doesn't deserve good lilies. He has no more business to allow green fly on his lilies than he has to allow fleas on his body. Again, a grower will permit a greenhorn to water the bulbs, whereas it takes a man who knows how and when. Any grower who buys Horseshoe Brand Giganteum Lily Bulbs and gives them the attention they deserve, cannot help but have first-class lilies at any time of the year, with a minimum of loss. There are positively no better bulbs grown anywhere in the world and no one takes as much pains toward quality as the producers of the Horseshoe Brand Products.

Of course, they cost more than others, because they cost more to produce. But they don't cost more than they are worth. Try them.

PACIFIC COAST.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

Business last week was nothing startling; counter trade was normal and funeral work kept down the surplus. The continued sunshine is improving matters wonderfully, yet the carnations are a little off crop. Roses are unusually scarce, with a heavy demand. Violets are plentiful, but daffodils are scarce and it is impossible to supply the demand, although other spring flowers are hard to move.

Potted stock is plentiful, especially tulips and hyacinths. The question of greens is alarming; there is practically no asparagus on the market and smilax is running low; shipments from California are usually of poor quality, being grown on the outside.

Sweet peas are becoming more plentiful and bring top prices.

Various Notes.

C. C. Taylor, representing the Kentucky Tobacco Product Co., of Louisville, is calling on the trade this week.

L. W. Judges, of North Yakima, Wash., stopped over on his return trip from the south.

George Baldwin, of Carrillo & Baldwin, Mamaroneck, N. Y., is in town.

Waldo Rohnert, of Gilroy, Cal., also is in town, talking sweet pea seed.

Louis Goodfriend, representing Wertheimer Bros., is also here. E. R. C.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

The Market.

The weather last week was quite a mixture of rain, hail, snow and drying winds. As a consequence stock of all kinds, with the possible exception of violets, has been scarce. This has been particularly noticeable with everything in the line of light-colored flowers and, as there has been quite a bit of funeral work distributed among the retailers, much scurrying for roses and carnations has resulted. A big wedding February 28 used all the orchids in town and neighboring cities, as well as a goodly assortment of other kinds of stock. Valley is in fair supply and daffodils, although showing the rough weather, are in sufficient quantity to fill requirements. Narcissi are not abundant and are quickly bought when brought to town. Freesias are holding out well and have proved to be a valuable flower when all blossoms are only in limited supply.

We are looking for more moderate weather and if the signs are correct we shall be favored with it in a few days. The fact that Lent has arrived will put a quietus on some lines of trade for quite a while, but the funeral orders do not show any signs of diminishing at present.

Various Notes.

J. C. Littlepage is erecting a range of houses at Marine View, San Mateo county.

Arthur Simpson has accepted a position as landscape gardener at the Presidio.

New Red Dahlia Mrs. Minna Burgle

A cross between Joe Thomson and Clown, originated by Mr. J. Burgle of Fruitvale, Cal., and named after his wife, Mrs. Minna Burgle, is the best Red Decorative Dahlia ever produced and will supersede all other red varieties now grown for cut flowers here or abroad. It draws your attention instantly when planted in a collection of Dahlias, for it is one of the most showy flowers ever created. True decorative, bright scarlet, showing a darker shading in center, bold erect flowers, 6 to 8 inches in diameter, with excellent stem, foliage of remarkable substance, height 5 to 6 feet, good keeper and will not burn in hot weather, and is a freer bloomer than either parent. This variety has been tested by me for three years and has shown no weak points.

A vase of 50 blooms shown by me, also a basket of them exhibited by Sievers Floral Co., of San Francisco, both carried first prizes in the Fall Flower Show in San Francisco, and caused more comment among gardeners and visitors than any other exhibit. Cut flowers sold for the first time last year brought 50 per cent more than any other variety of dahlias, including Joe Thomson.

spring flower show has issued its list of premiums. As the proceeds are to be donated to a charitable institution, the awards will consist only of diplomas and certificates of merit. A. J. Rossi will manage the show, which will be held March 30, 31 and April 1 at the Fairmount hotel.

Much ill feeling exists among the street hucksters in the neighborhood of the Chronicle building. Within the last few weeks the Greeks and Turks have reduced the price of violets to 5 cents a bunch and this is not pleasing to the Italians, who are the pioneers in this branch of the trade. Meanwhile the dear public continues to patronize whichever faction happens to sell cheapest. G.

OUTDOOR MUMS IN OREGON.

I should like to know whether chrysanthemums can be grown outside by having a framework built over them for cover in case of storms or frost in the early fall. Will they grow large enough to be of commercial value? L. A. P.

This query comes from Oregon and it is only necessary to remind the correspondent that not over one per cent of the chrysanthemums grown and marketed on the Pacific coast are produced under glass. The largest fields are in the neighborhood of San Francisco, where the climatic conditions are ideal for the developing of quantities of blossoms with the least effort. Although the weather is slightly different in Oregon, the writer has seen many patches of well-paying mums in the northern country. They are essentially a fall flower and covering is not required, unless for the late flowering of particularly delicate sorts. It is true that a much finer flower can be grown if a light shading is used, and there is no more grateful blossom in the florists' category when any extra attention is shown them, and any effort to assist will always be met with an extra fine output on the part of the plant. Late blooming kinds will need some protection from early frosts and an excess of moisture on the petals, but for anything outside of this, if judgment is used in the selection of varieties, there will be no difficulty in growing a well-paying crop without paying much attention to the subject of shading. G.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

March started in with a grand rush and the wind raged at a terrific pace for about twelve hours. Slight damages were reported, but nothing really serious happened. The weather then moderated nicely and it has been pleasant since, with a bright sun. Stock has not increased or, properly speaking, the business has demanded considerable stock and no surplus has accumulated as yet. From close observation, the large demand seems to be more the reason for the scarcity than the lack of a good number of blooms per plant. Every occasion now demands more or less flowers, and as this custom has been increasing rapidly, we do not seem prepared for it. Call it what you may, the stock has not been overplentiful for months, and even now the lenten season has not been noticed to any extent. Funeral work has been plentiful and this feature has used a tremendous amount of stock.

Last week the usual Saturday sales were displayed and some lively competition ensued. The result was violets selling at 25 and 35 cents per bunch and carnations two dozen for 35 cents. This method may be all right, but it hurts the trade in general and makes money for nobody.

Various Notes.

C. F. Christensen, of Eggertsville, has again succeeded in growing his usual lot of spring stock to perfection. Geraniums now in 4-inch pots are particularly fine.

Thomas Doyle, of Corfu, has purchased the Jarnham greenhouses and will engage in the growing of carnations and peas for the Buffalo market. R. A. S.

THE Fairbury Nurseries, of Fairbury, Neb., recently secured a certificate of authority to transact business in Texas. vania Horticultural Society, and R. T. Brown, of the Cottage Gardens Co., Queens, N. Y., met at Philadelphia March 1 to arrange for the June show of the American Peony Society. The meeting gave promise of a most successful exhibition. The committee was assured by Mr. Rust of the hearty cooperation of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society and local exhibitors. It is intended, if possible, to arrange the date so that the local midseason varieties will be in their prime, which will allow exhibitors from the north to send their earlier varieties and those from the south to send their later kinds.

ORANGES IN POTS.

May I ask to be informed as to the orange which is grown as a pot plant for Christmas and Easter? What varieties are they and what is the name of the base on which the small-growing varieties are grafted? I did some of the grafting in Germany, but cannot remember the names of stock and scion. Where could such plants be obtained; also can they be grown from seeds?

M. L.

The oranges in pots, commonly seen at Christmas and later in the winter, are commonly called the Otaheite, which is really a dwarf form of the common sweet orange, but which by some is supposed to be a hybrid between an orange and a lemon. The leaves resemble those of the lemon. The flowers are pinkish. Under pot culture fine fruiting plants no more than a foot high can be produced. The botanical name of the Otaheite orange is Citrus Aurantium Sinensis, although it has also been called C. Aurantium Otaitense. Stocks are usually raised from seed. Some of these might give desirable fruit, but many would not.

DON'T FORGET

in the present rush of work, that you'll need stock later on. For example, there's your

LILY OF THE VALLEY. Reimschneider's Exposition, $14.00 the thousand (1700 to the case); Perfection, $12.00 the thousand (2000 to the case); Holsatia, for storage and later forcing, $11.00 the thousand (3000 to the case).

LILACS, imported, pot-grown, for cut flowers, bushy, suitable for 7 or 8-in. pots, 50c each, $5.00 the dozen. Charles X only.

HALF-STANDARD ROSES. Baby Rambler and Mrs. Cutbush, 50c each, $5.00 the dozen. No better at any price. Full-standard Baby Rambler, same.

The common sweet orange will make desirable stock and budding is preferable to grafting. In order to insure a good crop of flowers and a set of fruit, the plants should have a period of partial rest in the late fall and early winter, when they must be kept cooler and drier at the root. Bud the young seedlings with scions from a true Otaheite as soon as they are nicely established in their pots.

APHIS ON LETTUCE.

I noticed in The Review of February 23, page 62, the inquiry of W. E. C. in regard to green aphid on lettuce. I have been growing lettuce for about fifteen years and have had convincing evidence that prevention in this matter is worth more than all the cures put on the market. I have often been in the difficulty he speaks of, especially in the earlier part of my experience.

My practice now is to get tobacco stems at a cigar store, run them through a cutting machine, and then, immediately after planting a bed, cover the soil lightly between the plants with these stems. Later, when the crop is about half grown, I repeat the dose of stems and thus avoid all trouble with green fly.

Of course, when a crop becomes badly infested it is hard to get rid of the pests, but if you start in with the young crop and keep right after them in the way I have suggested, you will be surprised to find how easy it is to have clean lettuce, and that means quick sales. But if there is a bug on the lettuce, the good housewife will be sure to see it and will quickly lose her appetite for the vegetable.

I never smoke my lettuce houses and have never used cyanide, yet I have not seen a dozen aphid on my lettuce this winter. The secret of success, in this as in everything else, is everlastingly keeping at it. No matter if there are no bugs to be seen, give them a dose of cut tobacco stems regularly and "keep on a-keeping on," as Speaker Cannon says. H. L. Clapp.

THE CANNA OF TODAY

"Antoine Wintzer, the dean of Canna hybridizers in America, has 3000 Canna seedlings on trial this season. Of these fully 300 have been marked for further trial. His efforts in securing promising varieties are more than usually successful; the experience of 17 years, aided by a favorable season, has produced splendid results. A flower that would have been considered an improvement 10 years ago is scarcely noticed now; size, substance, color, form, foliage, each and all must be better than in some existing variety, or the claimant is discarded."

Extract from "The Weekly Florists' Review," Sept. 22, 1910.
Describing a visit to our Nurseries.

We have introduced in the past dozen years about 75 varieties of Cannas, most of which are still prominent. Our introductions have not been confined to any certain class or color, but represent the best to be had today in practically every color and class. Take for example the Yellows—We suppose every florist in the United States knows the BUTTERCUP, which was one of our earliest introductions. And you know GLADIATOR? If not you surely should, so distinctly is it marked with brilliant red spots on a solid yellow ground and a fiery red tongue in the center. But this week we want to introduce to you a new variety, BRILLIANT. This is one favorite with the Department of Agriculture at Washington. A bed of these on our office lawn, last summer, called forth repeated praise. It has the same pure, brilliant yellow as the Buttercup, but is far more striking as a result of a bright red center petal, which is a regular eye-catcher—You would like BRILLIANT; you could not help it.

If we had the space, we would like to introduce to you the giant, orchid-flowering, heat resisting, praise winning Cannas, WYOMING and INDIANA, six and seven feet, magnificent foliage. They are majestic in every sense. Wyoming with its orange color; rounded petals and handsome purple foliage—and Indiana almost a prototype with green foliage.

The above varieties can be supplied at 75c per doz.; $5.00 per 100, subject to stock unsold. We have other yellow varieties, but none better than these; all of which are our own introductions.

BRILLIANT, 90c per doz.; $7.00 per 100.

You can make money on these.

If interested, write for our complete list of improved Cannas.

APHIS ON LETTUCE.

I noticed in The Review of February 23, page 62, the questions of W. E. C. in regard to aphid on lettuce. From my experience, I cannot believe that fumigating will ever effectually rid one of the pest. It might do so if only leaf lettuce were grown, but only a spray will get at the insects in the head lettuce. I have used nicotine extract with satisfactory results, putting about a teaspoonful of the liquid in a gallon of water and spraying the lettuce thoroughly with an auto-spray. If the spray is used at night the aphid will have disappeared by morning and no ill effects will come from eating the lettuce at once.

NEW ROSES WORTH GROWING.

to the front and give not only our moral support, but actual money in trying out those things that give promise of honest and real advances over existing types.

The list of new roses which I submit for your consideration embraces only those sorts which have been thoroughly tested, and I am confident they will stand up under all normal conditions and prove worthy of any attention that the grower may wish to give. These varieties have been under observation from two to five years, and my notes thereon have been strengthened by tests made in other sections of the south, and, of course, under varying climatic conditions. The varieties in question are considered wholly from a garden viewpoint, and in connection therewith comparisons were made with all of the older varieties, of similar characteristics, now commercially grown.

Hybrid Tea Roses.

Antoine Rivoire is the best hybrid tea of its color. Not a new rose, but many retail houses fail to realize the value of this variety. There is no garden rose of greater substance. Color, creamy white, with delicate pink tinge.

Aurora is another variety which has been overlooked. An honest rose, that is always doing something just right. One of the best varieties, doing well in all soils. Color, clear, bright pink. Full and very double, fragrant and constant in flower.

Betty is a bold rank grower, one of the best fancy colored garden roses. Long pointed buds, opening into a perfectly formed bloom. Always beautiful. Color, coppery rose, overspread with golden yellow, shaded with deeper and lighter tints which can not well be described.

Chateau de Clos Vougeot has a most wonderful color and texture. Color, deepest velvety maroon red, shading to blackest crimson. Much darker than Prince Camille. Flowers are large and of splendid substance.

Colonel Leclerc is a strong grower, of branching habit; good foliage; buds borne singly; open blooms of excellent form. Color, lovely cherry red.

Countess of Gosford is salmon pink

A seedling of Boston Market and Harlowarden that has been under test for the past five years and which has shown up so well under all conditions that I now feel confident it is one of the best commercial varieties and have pleasure in offering it for the first time for spring delivery 1911.

The color is a shade lighter pink than Lawson; form high built, much like Boston Market; stem long and graceful; healthy grower; blooms freely from November all through the season.

This new variety I am confident will prove a money-maker—a pink Boston Market—only much larger and better and destined to be one of the most popular commercial varieties.

Come and see it growing. I guarantee same to be in perfect health. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

BRIGHT SPOT

The best dark pink carnation ever introduced. The best producer ever offered in its color.

Outclasses everything heretofore grown in the dark pink section. Won first honors in the 100 class for best dark pink at the A. C. S. meeting, Pittsburg, January, 1910, and has won many other honors.

It is a pure, bright, dark pink of even shade, size 3 1/2 inches, an early and continuous bloomer, brings fully 25 per cent more flowers to the plant than Lawson at its best; flowers well shaped on long, wiry stems; calyx does not split. It is a good shipper, and the cuttings root easy.

While with most carnations early cuttings are desirable, this is not so much the case with Bright Spot; it is such a strong grower that March cuttings make just as good and very large plants by the end of July.

Price, per 100, $12.00; 25 at 100 rate; per 1000, $100.00; 250 at 1000 rate; per 5000, $400.00.

The Market.

All stock is coming in plentifully and, while the demand is fair, there is the natural lull on account of the lenten season. Beauties continue scarce. Sweet peas also are short, although those who grow their own stock have a good supply. Violets are in their prime. The quality of the stock on the market is superb, particularly so with the singles.

J. H. Dunlop recently wrote the government officials protesting on the introduction of chemicals for disinfectants in the city water supply, used by the growers. E. A. F.

Hot Springs, Ark.—Fire which broke out at midnight, February 25, destroyed two dwellings formerly owned by J. M. Starke, on Harrel avenue near the north city limits, and damaged the adjoining greenhouse. Mr. Starke, who occupied one of the dwellings, succeeded only in saving a part of his household goods. The property had been purchased a few weeks previously by J. W. Vestal & Son, of Little Rock, Ark., who expected to take possession soon.

Carnation Norwood

This variety has been grown by us for four years and has proven to be the best White Carnation we have ever grown.

NORWOOD is a Pure White, of good form, about 3½ inches in diameter, exceedingly fragrant, never known to split, and a free and continuous bloomer. The most profitable Carnation we have ever grown. An ideal commercial variety. Rooted cuttings (immediate delivery), $10.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000.

It will pay every Carnation Grower to plant this variety—there's money in it.

"Expect to Grow Dorothy Gordon Next Year—Good Size and Color"

—writes one of our friends who gave Carnation "Dorothy Gordon" a thorough trial last year. This customer is a prominent florist of New England, and his letter was in answer to an inquiry sent him and many other growers a few weeks ago, asking about their success with "Dorothy Gordon." These replies varied in their tone, of course—but most growers expressed satisfaction with its good qualities; many voluntarily stated their intention of growing it again.

"Dorothy Gordon" is a money-maker; is succeeding for growers in many states. The plant is unusually vigorous and productive, the stem is generally long and stiff, and the flower is a clear, bright pink, quite uniform in shade. "Dorothy Gordon" is a carnation of rare merit—your trade wants it and will gladly pay a good price to get it.

Our Palms Are Now Making a Better Showing Than Ever Before

Better stock, larger stock, more room to grow it in — these features are going to make 1911 a banner year for Heacock's palms and for dealers handling them.

We're pretty proud of the palms we grow, and if you've ever sold any of them you know why—healthy, vigorous growth, plants fine and stocky; in our home-grown palms you get a quality that lasts.

Wherever used, Heacock's Palms please your customers—on the porch or lawn in summer or indoors in cold weather. There's a fine opportunity, too, for you to do a good business renting them for decorative purposes.

You can handle Heacock's Palms at a profit—hundreds of dealers have been doing it for years. Remember, all our stock is home-grown—started from the seed in our own houses. They cost no more than foreign-grown plants, though, and your trade will quickly appreciate the difference.

Let us know your requirements at once; we'll gladly quote prices.

E. A. Kunderd has sold to Montague Chamberlain, Groton, Mass., his collection of plain petaled gladioli, the transaction including all the separate colors in the large collection, except some twenty varieties. Mr. Kunderd retains, besides, his ruffled sorts and his mixed stock.

Mr. Kunderd's collection was the result of fifteen years' study and breeding. One of his productions, Mrs. Frank Pendleton, Jr., secured by Rawson and exhibited last season at several flower shows, was awarded a certificate of merit by the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. Mr. Kunderd's greatest achievement, of course, is the production of ruffled gladioli, an entirely distinct type. His collection of these was becoming so large that he decided to dispose of his plain petaled varieties, and devote his time and means to the new type. The collection secured by Mr. Chamberlain includes over 300 varieties and only some half dozen of these have been named. Among them is a pure white which Mr. Chamberlain says will rank with Reine Blanche and Europa; another he thinks will be a strong rival of the famous Princeps, having the advantage of Princeps in displaying more blossoms at a time. The popular America also has a rival in this collection, the new-comer being of somewhat deeper pink and of larger size.

Mr. Chamberlain has been for some time building up a collection of gladioli by propagation and by purchasing from the leading American and foreign growers, until his collection is one of the finest in the country. He is connected with one of Boston's largest dry goods houses, but his farm is at Groton, in the midst of the famous New England apple belt. Always a student of nature, he was for a number of years connected with the Scientific School of Harvard, is an author of note, and will undoubtedly become a leading grower of gladioli.

The monthly meeting of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society was held on Friday evening, February 24, with President Brunger in the chair. T. W. Stobo, R. Franke and W. MacBean were elected active members and one application for membership was received.

A communication was read from the New York Florists' Club asking the coöperation of the Tarrytown society in securing the passage of a bill through the legislature appropriating $50,000 to erect greenhouses at Cornell for experimental purposes.

It was announced that the fall show will be held October 31 to November 2, in the Music hall, Tarrytown.

The discussion and exhibition at the next meeting will be in the line of "Roses and Bulbous Flowers."

DO FERNS NEED PROTECTION?

While it is said that Vermonters may have to prevent the stripping of ferns from their mountain sides by means of legislation similar to recent enactments to protect their Christmas trees, florists in the big eastern cities probably will not become anxious over that prospect so long as the other New England states overlook the matter. Regardless of Vermont's reputed dissatisfaction because the industry of gathering ferns is alleged to be systematically organized in the big outside cities, employees being sent up to do the work, it is possible that the inroads made upon these plants have been largely overestimated.

Vermont is the first state to call attention to the possibility that ferns, as well as fir trees, might be in need of conservation. In reality, florists get their principal supplies of ferns from Massachusetts, and also draw largely on New Hampshire, Maine, Connecticut and even Rhode Island. These states, evidently, have found no reason as yet to complain. Furthermore, investigation discloses that it is the common brake variety of fern which is in greatest demand, and, like the rest of the fern family, the brake is a perennial instead of an annual.

If the claim that 50,000,000 ferns were sent out last fall from four Vermont towns is authentic, of course, some alarm might be regarded as justifiable in the face of such figures. As to any lasting damage resulting to the fern growth, however, there is plenty of room for doubt. Hence, it would seem that Vermonters might arrange to earn themselves the $25,000 or $30,000 said to be paid fern gatherers there each fall, for if a prohibitive tax were placed on Green mountain fronds, that attractive income would surely be diverted to other parts of New England.—Boston Daily Paper.

McMinnville, Ore.—Herbert & Fleishauer say the demand for cut flowers has been heavier this season than ever before, and that it will be necessary for them to increase their output of carnations in order to supply the call from surrounding towns.

THE GRANDEST FERN OF THE AGE
NEPHROLEPIS ROOSEVELT

NEPHROLEPIS ROOSEVELT is a sport from Nephrolepis Bostoniensis, but a wonderful improvement over the parent variety and others of stiff, upright growing habit, known as Harrisii or the Harrisii type. It is a stronger maker of fronds and young plants than any other variety and will produce a larger finished plant in a six-inch pot than Boston or Harrisii will produce in a larger size.

The finished fronds of Nephrolepis Roosevelt are at least a third wider than Boston and have more graceful drooping habit. The pinnae are distinctly undulated, giving them a beautiful wavy effect which attracts the eye instantly. Cut flower dealers will find fronds of Roosevelt invaluable for design work. A single plant of Roosevelt grown in a six-inch pot will when finished almost double the number of fronds produced by Boston or Harrisii type varieties and while Boston and Harrisii show stiff, upright growth in a six-inch, the wide, wavy fronds of Roosevelt droop gracefully over the pot, hiding it completely from view. Finished three-inch plants of Roosevelt are equally large and more attractive than the average well-grown four-inch Boston, and growers of Harrisii and the Harrisii type admit they cannot produce attractive plants of these varieties in pots smaller than ten-inch. Without an exception Nephrolepis Roosevelt is the most valuable fern ever offered for florists' use. It has the vitality to withstand more rough treatment than other varieties and does not revert to the parent type. In our long experience we have never offered the trade any plant with greater assurance of entire satisfaction and predict Nephrolepis Roosevelt will very soon lead in popular demand, sweeping from the list Boston, Harrisii and the Harrisii type. We are booking orders for delivery, June 1st, 1911, and will fill them in strict rotation as to the date received. Get yours in early; you will not be disappointed in this fern. 2½-inch pots, 40c each; $3.50 per dozen; $25.00 per 100; $200.00 per 1000. 25 plants at 100 rate; 250 plants at 1000 rate.

FINE FERNS

Ready For Immediate Retail Sale

We have an exceptionally fine and large stock of Ferns in the following varieties—first-class plants of exceedingly good value—plants that will please the most critical buyers, both in regard to quality and value.

Nephrolepis Elegantissima (improved). The finest of this type—never showing a Boston frond; has not reverted in the last four years. Fine plants, 4-in. pots, $2.50 per doz.; 6-in., $6.00 per doz.; 8-in., $12.00 per doz.; large specimens in 12-in. pans, $3.00 to $5.00 each.

Nephrolepis Elegantissima Compacta. This bears the same relation to Elegantissima that Scottii does to Bostoniensis. It is a dwarf, compact plant, especially fine in the small sizes. Fine plants, 4-in. pots, $3.00 per doz.; 6-in., $6.00 per doz.

Nephrolepis Scholzei. Fine plants, 3½-in. pots, $2.50 per doz.; 6-in. pans, $6.00 per doz.; 8-in. pans, $12.00 per doz.

Nephrolepis Bostoniensis. Extra strong plants, 8-in. pans, $12.00 per doz.

Nephrolepis Scottii. 8-in. pans, $12.00 per doz.

Small Ferns for Fern Pans. Best and hardiest varieties, assorted: Pteris Mayli, Wimsettii, Adiantoides, Aspidium Tsussumense, Cyrtomium Falcatum, etc. Strong plants, 2½-in. pots, $3.50 per 100.

CROTONS. Nice assortment, well colored, 5-in., $9.00 per dozen.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

The lenten season has really had some effect on the posy business, at least on prices. Several days' sunshine brought an increased cut and down went the price of flowers; not that there were so many more flowers, but that there was so much less demand. Everything suffered except roses, which still hold their own. Stock of all kinds is showing the benefit of a few days' sunshine and it will probably bring carnations in such quantities that the bottom will drop out of prices entirely.

The retail shops are looking pretty just now, with all the blooming plants, as the help has enough time to put on a few extra touches. They will have a few slow days and then will forget all about Lent, as the cheaper flowers will bring increased sales and they will be busy as ever.

Various Notes.

One of our retailers advertised four dozen carnations and spring flowers for $1 last Saturday.

Mrs. E. A. Williams took advantage of the lenten season to get a well deserved rest after one of the best of seasons. She sailed Saturday, March 4, for the West Indian Islands, where all points of interest will be visited. She expects to be gone about six weeks.

Tuesday evening, February 28, in the English room at the Fort Pitt hotel, the reception to Prof. Richard Vincent and Mrs. Vincent, of White Marsh, Maryland, was the social event of the season. The members of the club, with their ladies, after viewing Prof. Vincent's pictures and hearing his delightful lecture, which was interspersed with a solo by Miss Voelp and topical songs with local hits by Allen Langhans, retired to the dining room, where a nice lunch was served, completing a most delightful evening.

The John Bader Co. has several houses of azaleas which are looking fine and will just come right for Easter. This company never had as fine a show of plants as at the present time.

Chas. Koenig, the big lily grower of this section, says the lilies are just coming right for Easter. He is also cutting fine Valley, all of which goes to the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co.

New Marguerite Mrs. F. Sander

NEW MARGUERITE, MRS. F. SANDER.

The most valuable flowering pot plant which has been offered to the trade since the introduction of the Lorraine Begonia.

In this we have unquestionably the most important flowering plant introduced in recent years, which, like its predecessors, the French Marguerite and the later introductions, white and blush Queen Alexandra, will be grown extensively for cut flowers during the winter, while its pure white color will make it more valuable than any as a pot plant for Easter decorations.

Unlike all other Marguerites, its color is of the purest glistening white throughout; in size it frequently measures 5 inches across; the center of the flower is a mass of closely arranged fringed florets; these are surrounded or edged by the broad, shining white ray petals, forming a flower which reminds one forcibly of a glorified double Pyrethrum. These are produced on long stems with a freedom not known in other varieties of the Marguerite.

The entire stock of this grand novelty has been placed in our hands for American distribution and we are now booking orders for delivery the latter part of April or early in May:

Good 2 1/4-in. pots, $2.00 per doz.; $15.00 per 100.

The above prices are intended for the trade only.

See our current Wholesale List for a complete line of seasonable Plants, Seeds, Bulbs, etc.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

Weather conditions have greatly improved; sunny days have been more numerous, so that the supply has been ample for all needs and trade has been good. Carnations are again in the market in large quantities, after a marked shortage for several weeks.

Roses are plentiful; American Beauties retail at from $1 to $1.25 per dozen; Killarney are not quite as popular and retail at $1 per dozen. One of the leading florists of the city offered as a special attraction for Saturday sweet violets at 25 cents per bunch. The best Hudson river violets have been selling at 50 cents per bunch. Potted hyacinths, tulips and daffodils are plentiful.

Various Notes.

The largest single order of carnations ever sent from Rochester went to Syracuse Friday, March 3, to be sold on the streets of that city for the hospital fund.

The Rochester bowling team entertained the Buffalo association bowling team Wednesday evening, March 8, at Lang's alleys.

The Rochester Florists' Association will meet Monday evening, March 13. The special business will be the consideration of an amendment to the constitution to increase the dues to $2 a year. This resolution was introduced by R. G. Salter. E. F. R.

Janesville, Wis.—The Janesville Floral Co. recently had a large wedding decoration at Broadhead. The work of both Mr. Amerpohl and Mr. Myers, of the firm, was required to execute the plans.

Canon City, Colo.—J. T. Calvert, the vegetable grower who recently completed a $5,000 iron-frame greenhouse in the Hot Springs district, now has the house well stocked with vegetables in all stages of growth. He is one of the most successful growers in this vicinity and realizes especially good profits from his celery.

PREPARE FOR EASTER

FROM WHOM WILL WE PURCHASE OUR EASTER SUPPLY?

From our old friend, Godfrey Aschmann, of Philadelphia, of course. He was our man of the past and he shall be our man this Easter, and, as long as he ships us good plants, he shall be our man in the future. He always treated us right before, and we can rely upon him. What he advertises is true and is no bluff.

What Florists Say About Our Lilies

Daily visitors to our establishment, among them two well known growers, one from Cincinnati, Ohio, the other from South Orange, N. J., say: "You have the best lilies we ever have seen on our visits to many florists' establishments. We congratulate you. You certainly can be proud."

An immense stock of choice Easter plants, blooming Easter week, or earlier, if desired, are now ready for immediate shipment. Come yourself or mail your order direct to headquarters.

Our reputation in growing Easter plants for the wholesale market, to which we ship all over the entire country, Canada and Mexico, from the Atlantic to the Pacific oceans, for many years past, is sufficient guarantee to prove our ability.

Go to Headquarters for Azaleas

Azalea Indica is a specialty with us, grown for us under contract by an Azalea specialist in Belgium for the last twenty years. Have four houses full of the choicest. Only best well-known American varieties are imported, and are now in excellent condition, covered with buds, just right for Easter. We ship only good stock, full of buds and flowers.

What is the name of the best double pink azalea? Mme. Van der Cruyssen is the name, originated by the well-known azalea specialist Mr. Van der Cruyssen of Belgium. Millions are raised every year and shipped to every point of the globe from Belgium. We have a big stock on hand of this so well-known and favorite variety in tip top condition. Every plant is as round as an apple, covered with buds, just right for Easter trade. 6 to 7-in. pots, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each.

Deutsche Perle. This is the best pure double white, 6-in. pots, 75c, $1.00 to $1.50. Outside the Deutsche Perle we have no white to offer in small sizes, because the other varieties, Niobe and Bernard Andrea alba, of which we had a large stock, during transportation across the sea and during winter lost all their buds and have to be carried over for another year. This first variety the year imported does not do well, but makes fine plants the next year.

Bernard Andrea alba (white). We have mostly big plants, $1.50, $2.00 to $3.00 each; a few smaller sizes, 75c, $1.00 to $1.25; Niobe, also white, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each. Vervaneana, De Schryveriana (double variegated), 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00.

Professeur Wolters, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. Pres. Oswald de Kerchove, $1.00, $1.25 to $2.00. Empress of India, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. Apollo (red), 50c, 60c, 75c to $1.00. Other good varieties, such as Helene Tholemann, etc., 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00. When we are out of one color, we send the next similar color; also, if we are out of the size ordered, we send the next size either above or below the price mentioned.

Hydrangea Otaksa never was as good as this year, green as grass, full of buds, every branch stocked up. 5½, 6 to 7-in. pots, 25c, 35c, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50.

Easter Lilies, Lillium multiflorum, the genuine Japanese Easter Lily, directly imported by us. We have a friend in Japan who looks after our interests there. He picks out for us only the good, healthy ones, and marks them while they are growing, the 10-in. bulbs, and therefore he ships to us the cream of the plants of Japan. We have lilies this year to burn; can supply, if nothing happens, every customer and others who want lilies. If you see them growing in our greenhouses you must all admit they are "crack-erjacks." We sell them cheap, too. Where other florists get 15c per bud, we only charge you 10c per bud, for plants in 6-in. pots, having 5, 8, 10 and more buds to the plant. Plants under 5 buds, 12c per bud, 6-in. pots.

Murillo Tulips, double, pinkish pearl, valued very highly as a pot tulip, 3 bulbs in a 4-in. pot, $1.80 per dozen pots; $14.00 per 100.

Touneol Tulips, best double tulips, variegated, three bulbs in a pot, $1.80 per dozen pots; $14.00 per 100.

Primula Obconica. 5-in., $2.00 to $2.50 per dozen.

White Daisies, 5-in. pots, $2.00 dozen.

Cineraria Hybrida Grandiflora. Henry F. Mitchell Co.'s new improved strain. Our plants and flowers of this strain are twice the size of those of other years, with perfect green foliage, almost as big as a bushel basket, 6-in. pots, 25c, 35c, 50c, 75c to $1.00 each.

Spiraea Gladstone. This variety, owing to the dry summer in Holland last year, will be very scarce this Easter, but we, fortunately, secured enough to fill two houses full, and they are now in fine condition, full of buds, 5, 5½, 6 to 7-in. pots, 25c, 35c, 50c, 75c to $1.00 each; dozen or 100 the same.

Ipomoea Noctiflora, purest white moonflower, for which we have a world-wide reputation, now ready, 2½-in. pots, $5.00 per 100.

Hyacinths, four best colors, King of the Blues (dark blue), Grand Maitre (light blue), Gertrude (best pink), La Grandesse (best white), right for Easter, in cold frame, 4-in. pots, 10c to 12c.

Crimson Rambler, nicely staked up, 30, 36, 40, 50 inches high, 50c, 75c to $1.00.

Daffodil Von Sion, double-nosed bulbs. This is the best double yellow narcissus in existence. 5½ to 6-in. pots, 8 bulbs in one pot, $2.50 to $3.00 per dozen pots.

Araucaria Robusta Compacta, Glauca and Excelsa. Our reputation of being one of the largest importers and shippers of this beautiful ever-green decorative plant is so well known, dating far back into the 19th century, that our name, as well as the Araucaria itself, shall never die out, and is still fresh in people's minds same as when we first started. Why the Araucaria is so popular is because it is an ancient plant, kept by Greeks and Romans as a special favorite in their household, as a good omen.

Araucaria Robusta Compacta, specimen plants, spring 1910 importation, 6 to 7-in. pots, 5 years old, 3 good tiers, 20, 25 and 30 inches high, same in width, very handsome, $1.50 to $2.00 each.

Araucaria Excelsa Glauca. This is a beautiful blue variety, very graceful and beautiful. Specimen plants, 6-in., 7-in., 8-in. pots, 4 and 5 years old, 4, 5 and 6 tiers, 20, 25, 30 and 32 in. high, same in width, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75 to $2.00 each; spring 1910 importation.

Araucaria Excelsa, 3, 4 and 5 years old, 4, 5, 6 and 7 tiers, 6-in. pots, 25, 30, 35 and 40 in. high, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each. Can meet all applications; spring 1910 importation.

Scholzeli and Whitmani ferns, 6-in., 7-in. and 8-in. pots, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50.

Boston Ferns, 5½-in. to 6-in., 7-in. and 8-in. pots, 40c, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50.

Scottii Ferns, 5½-in. to 6-in., 7-in. and 8-in. pots, 40c, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50.

Nephrolepis Glatraii. This is a very handsome fern, resembling the Scottii, but shorter and bushier, with weeping habit, which gives it a very fine appearance and makes it valuable, 5, 5½ to 6-in. pots, 40c, 50c and 75c; small 4-in., 25c.

Ferns for dishes, 2½-in., assorted, $4.00 per 100.

Asparagus Plumosus Nanus. We have a nice lot out of the seedbed, big enough for 2½-in. pots, $15.00 per 1000. Asparagus Sprengeri, 4-in. pots, strong, 10c; 2½-in., strong, $4.00 per 100.

Kentia Forsteriana, in fine shape, 5½ to 6-in. pots, 4, 5 and 6-year-old, 30, 35, 40 and 45 inches high, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $2.00 to $2.50.

Kentia Belmoreana, 5, 6 to 7-year-old, 6 to 7-in. pots, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each.

Kentia Belmoreana, combination plants, 8 plants in 6 and 7-in. pots, 25, 30 to 35 inches high, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50 each. This is a special bargain, seldom offered.

Latania Borbonica, 6 to 7-in. pots, 30 inches high, 50c to 75c.

Dracaena Bruanti, 6-in. pots, 25 to 30 inches high, 40c to 50c.

We have no catalogue.

All goods must travel at purchaser's risk. Cash with order, please. Please state if you want stock shipped in or out of pots. All bulbs are now under cover in cold frame and will bloom in two weeks from time of bringing them in the greenhouse.

*Pennsylvania is not an exhibition bloom, but it is a very free bloomer, a good sized flower and a splendid one to grow commercially. We believe it is a good money maker and there is nothing better on the market for a grower retailing his own stock, as this variety will hang on for ten days to two weeks in splendid shape. We have never had a better keeper. Buyers this year, we believe, will go into it much heavier another season.

NOVELTIES.

REAL NOVELTIES AND NOVEL REALITIES
IN HARDY PLANTS.

The biggest collection offered anywhere, is found in our NOVELTY CATALOGUE, just out. Of great interest to the amateur and commercial grower alike.

It describes and illustrates uncommon plants of singular beauty, desirability, and simplicity of growth; inexpensive to acquire.

Besides our low prices, plants are big, making them valuable, in small or large quantities.

Mailed along with our illustrated wholesale catalogue of Hardy Perennials, etc., on receipt of three 2c stamps, which pays postage only, and which amount is credited on first order.

Horticultural Books

We can supply any of the following books at the prices noted, postpaid, and any other book at publishers' price:

Pronouncing Dictionary.

A list of plant names and the botanical terms most frequently met with in articles on trade topics, with the correct pronunciation for each. 25 cents

Practical Floriculture.

By PETER HENDERSON. An illustrated guide to the successful propagation of florists' plants. A detailed account of the requisites to success and a clear explanation of improved methods. For the amateur and professional florist. 325 pages. Cloth. $1.50

The Florists' Manual.

By WM. SCOTT. A practical guide for the florist, covering the successful management of all the usual florists' plants; including many topics, such as greenhouse building, heating and floral decorating, etc. Written so you can understand it and profit by its guidance. Fully illustrated. $5.00

The Pruning Book.

By L. H. BAILEY. This is the first American work exclusively devoted to pruning. It differs from most other treatises on this subject in that the author takes particular pains to explain the principles of each operation in every detail. Specific advice is given on the pruning of the various kinds of fruits and ornamental trees, shrubs and hedges. Considerable space is devoted to the pruning and training of grape vines, both American and foreign. 530 pages. Illustrated. $1.50

Greenhouse Heating.

WHEN BOILER IS TOO LARGE.

My experience with a large boiler may be of benefit to L. C. B., whose inquiry appeared on page 90 of The Review of March 2. We have about 8,000 feet of glass and started with a small boiler. Later we added a tubular boiler, 5x16 feet, containing eighty-four 3-inch tubes. We kept the small one for fall and spring use. After one season we threw out the small one, finding that it consumed more coal than the larger one in doing the same work.

We accomplish this by cutting down the firebox space and by shutting off the chimney draft. The back half of the grates is covered by a cast-iron plate, obtained at a junk shop. This prevents the air from entering. Then a thin, clean fire is kept in front, using one or both doors, as the season demands. When only one door is used the other side is filled with ashes to keep air out. Should we ever need more steam the plates can be easily removed. The chimney draft is closed to about an 8-inch hole. The result is perfect and we use less coal to the foot of radiation than any of our neighbors.
G. S. Ramsburg.

One of my neighbors, like L. C. B., has a boiler that is unnecessarily large, but he succeeded in running it economically by adopting the following plan: It is a horizontal boiler and he plugged up the top row of flues with wooden plugs, so that the fire could not pass through them. Then he could make steam much more easily, with a smaller amount of water, and the boiler would hold steam a longer time. Another plan might be to make the firebox smaller by placing bricks on each side.
A. F. Johnson.

BOILER PROBABLY TOO SMALL.

We are having some trouble in keeping up the temperature in our houses. We have four greenhouses, each 16x118 and nine feet to the ridge, which we are heating with a Winchester hot water boiler, No. 34. It is an upright boiler and has a firebox thirty-six inches in diameter. There are two 4-inch mains from the boiler along the shed, with one 3-inch flow which runs to the far end of each greenhouse and then drops down under the benches, where it connects with six 2-inch returns running back to a 4-inch main return in the shed. The highest point is eight feet directly above the boiler.

No loss from sudden drops in temperature if you use the

Hughson Regulating Valve

In connection with a steam heating plant. Carry 40 or 50 pounds pressure on the boiler and set the valve for 5 or 10 pounds—it will do the rest. You'll be free from worry this winter, if you follow this advice: "Install a Hughson Regulating Valve when making your repairs." The temperature often falls to 40 degrees by morning, after being left at 55 degrees at eleven o'clock at night. We want to maintain a temperature of about 50 to 55 degrees. Our coldest weather here, in eastern Virginia, is rarely lower than 15 degrees above zero. What is the trouble? Have we too much of a load on our boiler, or have we not enough returns?
B. H. P. C.

It is extremely difficult to give an offhand opinion regarding the trouble mentioned. It would seem, however, that the amount of radiation is ample to maintain the temperature desired. The trouble would, therefore, appear to be due either to lack of boiler capacity or to some defect in the arrangement of the piping. So far as can be determined from the description, the piping should give a free circulation, and the trouble, then, would appear to be with the boiler.

I have had no experience with the Winchester heater, but it is probable that the size you have in use, unless it is unusually effective, would be capable of heating not to exceed 2,000 square feet of radiating surface, while a boiler

Castle Automatic Circulator

If your greenhouses are not heated perfectly, ask us to help you out.

- It quickly forces the hot water to the uttermost parts of the system.
- It corrects errors in piping without expensive alterations and without putting additional pressure on your system.
- It reduces the coal bill.
- By speeding up the circulation, more water flows through the piping, more heat is taken from the fire, and more heat units are actually used for heating your houses.

What the Users say

Better and Cheaper than Any Other System

ZANESVILLE, O., Feb. 11, 1911.

GENTLEMEN: In regard to the Kroeschell Threaded Tube Piping System, I think it is better than standard piping system, not only in being cheaper, but thinner, and giving more heat. I found the Generator was a paying proposition and would recommend its use to all using a hot water system. My No. 11 Boiler does the work satisfactorily on over 25,000 sq. ft. of glass.

Very truly yours,

wall. The ends and partitions will be glass, except three feet of double siding.

There will be three apartments, forty-one feet, twenty-nine feet and ten feet long, respectively. The 10-foot section will be between the other two and will be used as a potting room; the boiler will be in a pit under this part. I shall probably use a sectional hot water boiler. I shall use raised benches and should like to run 1½-inch return pipes under them, with 2½-inch flows on the purlins.

Should the flows run uphill or downhill? How many pipes will be required to heat the 41-foot part to 50 degrees, for carnations, and the 29-foot part to 55 degrees, for pot plants, in zero weather? What would be the best way to arrange the pipes and where should valves be placed? Could the expansion tank be put lengthwise directly under the angle of the roof, or what would be the best place for it? P. A. D.

In the house 21x41, use three 2½-inch flows and ten 1½-inch returns. Carry one of the flow pipes about two feet under the ridge and the others on the plates. Give the flow pipes a slight fall. For the other house use three 2½-inch flow pipes, arranged as above, and twelve 1½-inch returns, carrying four under each bench.

If there is no place where the expansion tank can be located so that it will have greater elevation, it can be under the ridge, as proposed. It will be well to have a valve on each of the flow pipes, wherever it will be most convenient. For the main flow and returns use 3-inch pipes, breaking each up into three 2½-inch pipes.

Standard Simplicity

In our ENGINE the valves and the cylinder are completely water-jacketed, yet whenever it is necessary to get at the valves, to clean and regrind them, they are readily reached by simply unscrewing the flat iron plate that serves as cylinder head. This accessibility is exclusively a Standard feature, and you will find that in other engines you must disconnect the cooling-water pipe and the exhaust pipe, and expose a water-jacket joint before you can get at the valves.

The accompanying cut shows the engine cylinder head with the plate removed, exposing the vertical inlet and exhaust valves.

The same ingenuity has been used in making the valves of the pump accessible, as we shall show upon this page within a few weeks.

Cut flower trade was good last week, considering that Lent is now with us. Flowers are more plentiful and prices are a little lower as a result. We have had considerable sunshine the last two weeks, bringing out the flowers in large quantities, although the weather continues rather cold.

Carnations retail at 10 cents per dozen, a few bringing 75 cents; roses get $1.50 to $2 and are in bigger supply. Bulb stock is plentiful, with the prices down, tulips retailing at 50 cents per dozen; daffodils the same; double tulips, 75 cents; snapdragons, 75 cents to $1; callas, $2; Easter lilies, $2.50; mignonette, 60 cents; Paper Whites, 50 cents; violets, $1 per hundred, and sweet peas from that up to $1.50. Plant trade is good and freesia and alyssum help out in design work.

The street fakers were with us last Saturday, selling violets at 15 cents per bunch, and carnations and daffodils at 35 cents per dozen.

Everything looks good for Easter.

91-93 CHAMBERS ST. NEW YORK

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet.
An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

WICHITA, KAN.The Market.

The unusually dry winter seems to be thoroughly broken; the last few weeks brought some good rains, and more recently an 8-inch snow. The weather for Valentine's day was fair and warm, and the valentine trade pleased everyone. This year showed more effort in the way of special displays and fancy arrangements, all of which was well repaid. Stock was good, and the demand satisfactory. Prices remained about normal, although violets crowded up slightly and were all taken. Since Valentine's, the weather has offered samples of every kind in the catalogue, but transient demand has been quite good. There has been a noticeable lack of local funeral work; in fact, the leading cemetery reported a hitherto unparalleled fact, namely, no graves dug for two weeks and three days.

The beginning of Lent is making a difference in the demand for entertainment flowers. Local bulbous stock is coming in heavily and in splendid quality, and other local grown stock is showing up better, both in quantity and quality, while there seems to be a marked improvement in shipped flowers.

Various Notes.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

With bright weather prevailing the greater part of last week, receipts were greatly increased. Still, the demand kept about even pace with the supply, leaving little or no stock on hand.

Club Meeting.

Although there were only fourteen members present at the club meeting, March 2, it was by no means a dull one. President H. V. Hunkel appointed the following executive committee for the 1911 flower show: J. G. Heitman, C. Dallwig, A. T. Kellner, Nic Zweifel, Art Leidiger, C. C. Pollworth and Wm. Zimmermann. Mr. Hunkel also is a member of this committee. To judge from little conversations overheard, the show this year is to cover many more square feet than at any previous time.

C. C. Pollworth and C. Dallwig were appointed a committee to draft suitable resolutions protesting against the passage of a bill now pending at Madison, which would compel all concerns located within two miles of the city limits to use smoke consumers. This would include most of the local growers, and aside from its being a great expense and trouble, it would be impossible to install such a system where no steam is used.

The entertainment committee announced the coming bowling match between the Chicago and Milwaukee boys, which will take place March 19 at Eleventh and Prairie streets.

The club's treasury was again enriched somewhat when Treasurer Heitman, of the 1910 flower show, handed in his final report, which was accepted with words of thanks and praise for the whole committee.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Bowling League will roll its return match game with the Odahnas at Steinke's alleys, Eleventh and Prairie streets, during the afternoon of March 12.

The Harrisii plants at the C. C. Pollworth Co.'s greenhouses are in fine shape, giving promise of a banner harvest.

Among numerous plants for Easter, the Holton & Hunkel Co. has a whole house devoted to spiraea plants, which will hit it just right.

Already many retailers are getting inquiries for bids for the spring openings of local department stores, which take place in the near future. E. O.

SOUTHINGTON, CONN.

The growers here are all confident that Easter this year will be a record-breaker.

Otto Glueck, who has leased Nelson Bavier's range of glass, is sending down some handsome sweet peas to Alfred Ostermann, in New Haven, who is also handling his cut of carnations and bulb stock. One of Mr. Glueck's specialties is white marguerite daisies.

Olson & Lunden report a good season. William Fischer has just completed an addition to his range. Carnations are Mr. Fischer's main crop.

The past week of bright, sunny weather has been welcomed by all. The way the temperature runs up at mid-day makes us realize that spring is surely close by. B.

AN EVEN UP PROPOSITION

That's what our Iron Frame House is. Dollar for dollar you get your dollar's worth. What do you care what a thing costs, if that thing brings down the cost of doing business? That's exactly what Hitchings' Iron Frame House does. It costs a bit more to buy, but a lot less to keep bought. In other words, repairs cut down, better flowers and more flowers. Write us.

West Park, N. Y.—A new range of Lord & Burnham greenhouses has just been completed on Col. O. H. Payne's estate, where Andrew Mason is superintendent.

Dover, N. H.—Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Howe, of the Garrison Hill Greenhouses, were among the guests at the governor's reception and ball at Augusta, Me., February 21.

THE RETAIL

FLORIST.....

THE ROSE BOUQUET.

The roses in the bouquet illustrated herewith were wired in order to hold them to position. With the long-stemmed roses now so freely produced, rigidity is secured without the wires; that is one of the reasons why retail florists who seek to turn out the best of work are willing to pay the extra price for the long stems, even though they cut off a good part of the stem in making up their work. A few years ago such roses as are now abundant in all the leading markets were undreamed of and the retail florists had to make use of many practices not now necessary, except where shorter and weaker-stemmed stock is employed.

COLOR SENSE.

Natural and Acquired Skill.

There are two ways of acquiring knack in coloring—one by the exercise of the natural sense of color, and the other by the practice of what is learned by rote training. While both are desirable, the endowment to be coveted is the eye that can analyze the coloring of a flower or plant at a glance. Arbitrary training will teach one to avoid glaring mistakes, but it will never lead to fine color work. It may cry "Shame!" at a vase of Killarneys against one of Beacon carnations, but without a color eye one can never learn which white to combine with which pink, or to compose a symphony in lilac, violet and magenta. Ignorance of so simple a matter as the order of the spectrum colors need not hold one back if he has strong color instincts, for they do not often err.

On the other hand, all one can learn from the mass of material that is to be read on color—which, however, must be classified and adapted to this branch of art—will greatly develop and encourage his natural instincts.

Somebody once said, "How can I make up for the lack of the color sense? I don't understand what colors to combine." I do not know. What would be said of a man who proposed to go into the machinists' trade without mechanical ability? How would a person progress in music who had not ear enough to tune a violin? Do not persist in work foreign to your talents.

Well, how am I to know whether I have talent for entering, or continuing in, this branch of the business?

Tests of Ability.

There are several simple tests which may be helpful in this line. First, as a phrenologist will tell you, there are unmistakable evidences of color and form talent, or the lack of it, as plain as the nose on your face. Color and form ability are indicated by large eyes, arched eyebrows, long eyebrows, or prominent bone development about the eyes.

Second, if you know yellow, red, green, violet, orange and blue apart, can you trace these colors as two or more of them are found in some one familiar flower or leaf, termed pink, lavender, heliotrope, russet, gray, etc? For example, can you see any yellow in a Bridesmaid rose, or can you find any red in a Clematis Jackmani? What colors can you trace in the skin of a russet apple? Or, in other words, can you analyze the color mixture which you find in any ordinary flower? For there are no flowers of one pure color. If not, out tints which appeal warmly to you, or others which are cold and repelling? Fifth, is the subject of color one of absorbing interest to you? Are you willing to sacrifice pleasure and rest occasionally in order to pursue its study?

Encouraging, but Not Conclusive.

THE RETAIL

FLORIST.....

THE ROSE BOUQUET.

The roses in the bouquet illustrated herewith were wired in order to hold them to position. With the long-stemmed roses now so freely produced, rigidity is secured without the wires; that is one of the reasons why retail florists who seek to turn out the best of work are willing to pay the extra price for the long stems, even though they cut off a good part of the stem in making up their work. A few years ago such roses as are now abundant in all the leading markets were undreamed of and the retail florists had to make use of many practices not now necessary, except where shorter and weaker-stemmed stock is employed.

COLOR SENSE.

Natural and Acquired Skill.

There are two ways of acquiring knack in coloring—one by the exercise of the natural sense of color, and the other by the practice of what is learned by rote training. While both are desirable, the endowment to be coveted is the eye that can analyze the coloring of a flower or plant at a glance. Arbitrary training will teach one to avoid glaring mistakes, but it will never lead to fine color work. It may cry "Shame!" at a vase of Killarneys against one of Beacon carnations, but without a color eye one can never learn which white to combine with which pink, or to compose a symphony in lilac, violet and magenta. Ignorance of so simple a matter as the order of the spectrum colors need not hold one back if he has strong color instincts, for they do not often err.

On the other hand, all one can learn from the mass of material that is to be read on color—which, however, must be classified and adapted to this branch of art—will greatly develop and encourage his natural instincts.

Somebody once said, "How can I make up for the lack of the color sense? I don't understand what colors to combine." I do not know. What would be said of a man who proposed to go into the machinists' trade without mechanical ability? How would a person progress in music who had not ear enough to tune a violin? Do not persist in work foreign to your talents.

Well, how am I to know whether I have talent for entering, or continuing in, this branch of the business?

Tests of Ability.

There are several simple tests which may be helpful in this line. First, as a phrenologist will tell you, there are unmistakable evidences of color and form talent, or the lack of it, as plain as the nose on your face. Color and form ability are indicated by large eyes, arched eyebrows, long eyebrows, or prominent bone development about the eyes.

Second, if you know yellow, red, green, violet, orange and blue apart, can you trace these colors as two or more of them are found in some one familiar flower or leaf, termed pink, lavender, heliotrope, russet, gray, etc? For example, can you see any yellow in a Bridesmaid rose, or can you find any red in a Clematis Jackmani? What colors can you trace in the skin of a russet apple? Or, in other words, can you analyze the color mixture which you find in any ordinary flower? For there are no flowers of one pure color. If not, out tints which appeal warmly to you, or others which are cold and repelling?

Fifth, is the subject of color one of absorbing interest to you? Are you willing to sacrifice pleasure and rest occasionally in order to pursue its study?

Encouraging, but Not Conclusive.

There are some arguments which also may seem to indicate, but only superficially, talent in this line. For instance, one's fondness for flowers is regarded as a more or less encouraging sign. This, however, does not necessarily indicate talent for artistic floral work. Because I have an extreme fondness for violin music is not sufficient argument that I should adopt it as a profession.

Again, you may say, "But people admire my work." There is no disputing that fact. I have seen scores of people gush over the poorest kind of work as quickly as over a gem in floral arrangement. If the thing is sifted down, you will find that it is the beauty of the flowers themselves, and not the arrangement, which attracts them. To illuscan you pick out any one of the colors of which it is composed?

Third, do your untaught color attempts please your eye? Are you tempted to linger over the harmony produced? Is there a pleasant reaction upon your eye?

Fourth, what sensations do certain colors excite in you? Can you point trate: A customer whom I had coached for years in good designing and coloring, who was a lady of fine taste in other lines, gave me a heart stab by admiring and asking me to admire a slovenly looking, characterless excuse for a funeral design. If people admire your work, and meanwhile give you any convincing proof that they appreciate your skill as well as the flowers which you did not make, then you may flatter yourself.

Mediocrity or Excellence?

Many people argue that they have sufficient ability for commercial purposes and that the general public is not discriminating enough to know the difference between common work and ex-

BULLETS VS. BIRDSHOT.

All advertising has only one object—the sale of merchandise—but there are almost as many ways of advertising as there are advertisers, though most advertising can be classified into one or another of two groups. One group is composed of those advertisements, specific in their character, which make a method and the other the shotgun method of advertising. The shotgun scatters its fire; it may hit a larger number of objects, but the execution is not always so great.

BREITMEYER'S FLOWER CHAT.

John Breitmeyer's Sons, who now have a branch store on Woodward avenue in Detroit, as well as the main store in the Breitmeyer building, have undertaken the publication of a monthly 4-page bulletin of flower news. They call it Breitmeyer's Flower Chat and the March issue is printed in that most striking of all color combinations, yellow and black. While the folder is designed as an advertisement, the advertising feature is kept in the background, the purpose being accomplished through suggestion. The talk is so good that a part of the contents of the March issue is reproduced herewith:

MARCH.

The first of the Spring months is here with its increased sunshine, giving brighter colors and more fragrant odor to those many representatives of Flora, commonly called Spring Flowers.

One of them, the Violet, for whom we always have an open hand and an open heart, is in its prime condition during this month.

Its blooms are never so large, its color never so blue, its odor never so delicious, as when kissed by the golden rays of the March sun.

As a corsage with Rosebuds or in combination with other Spring Beauties for Luncheon, or as a special aristocratic touch added to a box of Spring Flowers, their superior quality during the month of March is universally recognized.

We admire Sweet Peas and Lilacs at Christmas, but what are they compared with the same flowers during March? For that matter, all kinds of flowers benefit by the increased sunlight and longer days.

As the apple depends on the sun to paint his cheeks real rosy and red, so do flowers need the sunshine to fully develop their bright color and charming fragrance.

Is it not wonderful how a few Tulips and Daffodils or the gentle Violets decrease our mental or bodily ailments? They seem to be animated—to be speaking to us to console us.

The chef may be ever so Frenchy, and his sauce as tasty as culinary art can make it, still a few well-arranged flowers increase appetite and wit most wonderfully.

CARE OF CUT FLOWERS.

Flowers require fresh air that is moist and free from gases. Flowers should not be exposed to draughts.

Fresh water is a vital need, and the cut flowers should be placed in same immediately on their arrival.

The best holders are those which provide sufficient water so that the stems can be set in deep and well submerged.

The water should be changed at least daily. The stems of blooms should be occasionally recut or broken, and dead foliage should be removed.

A WRONG IMPRESSION

SOME PEOPLE SAY they cannot understand how we can afford to spend so much money advertising and still sell high-grade flowers at popular prices.

THE ANSWER IS: By advertising we are letting the people know our prices are low, correcting a wrong impression that many have had. In this way we have increased our business to such an extent that we are able to continue to reduce the price of flowers.

WE ARE THE LARGEST RETAILERS of high-grade flowers, consequently the largest buyers. This enables us to buy and sell at the very lowest prices, which we are doing, and offer all flowers, strictly fresh—the lasting kind, at cellent work. All very well, if you have no higher ambition than to be a mediocre workman. But somebody of artistic instincts and ambition is going to show better work and explain its good points. Your best patrons can see the differences that have been pointed out. People buy the finest pictures, the finest carpets and furniture; they learn to discriminate in jewelry and in wearing apparel. The fact that they have never seen excellent floral work may account largely for their lack of taste. But decorators are waking up, and it means that the question will occur to each of us sooner or later, "Do I mean to live or merely to exist?"

In another chapter on the subject of color will be given some simple color laws.
Gertrude Blair.

A GOOD FRONT.

A. Meyer, formerly of the Smart Set Floral Co., has recently started in business for himself at Eightieth street and Madison avenue, in New York city. The accompanying illustration is prepared from an exceedingly poor photograph, but it serves to show that Mr. Meyer is following the precept of William Scott, whose frequent advice to young men was: "Wash all you got, and hang out all you wash."

Eau Claire, Wis.—O. R. Demmler on his recent trip to Europe found a tradescantia named Silver Queen, of which he brought home stock, carrying the package personally all the way. He has worked up stock and it is now on the market.

definite offer of one or more articles in such a way as to tell the public all about them and to cause inquiries to be made at the store for the particular articles advertised. The other group of advertisements is composed of those which aim merely at general publicity, the keeping of the line and the store before the buying public, with sales generally promoted, but less easily traced. One may be called the rifle

Wedding Decoration in a Large Church, by Jacob Schulz, Louisville, Ky.

As a rule, flowers keep best if the blooms or petals are kept dry, but spraying of the foliage is beneficial.

When not in use or display, a cool and dark place sufficiently moist is favorable for flowers. To help produce such conditions, tissue paper or a light fabric placed over them and well sprinkled is effective.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Mrs. L.—Burns Ave.

Your Boston Fern will need repotting, not a larger pot, but new soil. This is a good time to have it done. To place the plant in the greenhouse is not as a rule satisfactory. The atmospheric conditions are so different.

Mrs. D. L. K.—Cass Ave.

A palm with one or two leaves cut off looks to us like a handsome cup with a couple of chips broken out of it. Neither is desirable around the house; a cup cannot be mended, and a palm will use up one to one and one half years to reproduce two new leaves.

The "Questions and Answers" page can be made of special interest, if you will write us for any special information you may desire regarding flowers and their care. Will you give us your help by asking questions? We will not use your name unless we have your permission.

DECORATION IN A CHURCH.

Possibly no other class of work performed by the retail florist receives so much attention as his wedding decorations. Not only do the wedding guests pass judgment on each job, but the other retail florists who have the opportunity study the decoration and profit by its perfection or imperfections. A wedding decoration is difficult to photograph. This is especially the case where the decoration is in a large edifice, like a church. In the case of the present illustration, a church decoration is shown, the work of Jacob Schulz, of Louisville. Only a portion of the work appears, one of the principal features being the large wedding bell, which hung so high that it was beyond the range of the camera. For this decoration, in addition to several loads of palms and ferns, twenty cases of wild smilax were required, and 400 Easter lilies.

PLUMOSUS TURNING YELLOW.

In The Review of February 16, page 60, I noticed the inquiry of H. & H. in regard to their Asparagus plumosus nanus turning yellow. Now, I know of two ways in which this trouble is likely to be caused. If the temperature is kept at 60 degrees at night, on dull days at 65 degrees and on sunny days at 72 to 75 degrees, the plants will generally have a good color. But this important exception must be noted: After a succession of three or four dull days, the temperature should not exceed 68 to 70 degrees, or the foliage will be liable to turn yellow and sere at the ends.

Again, if a good crop has been cut and the plants have been left a little too bare, and if water is used freely afterward, the same sort of trouble will probably result; all shoots will come up with yellowish white ends. After cutting heavily, little watering must be done for two or three weeks, until the plants show signs of new growth. I am speaking from experience, as I grow thousands of these plants for cut sprays for the New York market.

THE BRITISH VISITORS.

As previously stated in The Review, a party of about twelve British horticultural traders intend visiting the United States on a holiday trip next month. Sailing from Liverpool on the Lusitania March 11, we hope to spend Friday, March 17, in New York, traveling the same night to Philadelphia for Saturday and Sunday. Monday morning, on the way to Washington, we intend to give R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons a call, and after two days in Washington, March 21 and 22, we will go on to E. G. Hill's establishment at Richmond; from there to Chicago to spend March 25 and 26; thence on to Niagara Falls, and from there to Boston for the National Flower Show, arriving March 28, and about April 1 return to New York for four days.

Our party will embrace all sections of the horticultural trade, including a quartet of Covent Garden growers; namely: G. Prickett, who excels in chrysanthemums, one of the oldest members of the National Chrysanthemum Society; W. A. Cull and G. Pratley, who grow ferns and pot plants by the million, and L. M. Graves, in the front rank with cyclamens and primulas. Roses will be represented by J. Brown, of W. & J. Brown, Stamford; hardy flowers by J. S. Gunn, of Gunn & Sons, Birmingham, who grow and show phlox and hardy flowers second to none. The carnation will be represented by C. Engelmann, the raiser of Carola, one of our best growers and keenest hybridizers, also by the writer, one of the originators and chairman of the Perpetual Flowering Carnation Society since its inception. The horticultural sundries trade will be represented by S. South, of London, and E. Barker, of Manchester.

Should any American friends desire to correspond with the writer or other members of the party, will they please address letters in care Messrs. Thomas Cook & Sons, 1200 Broadway, New York?

Mediocrity or Excellence?

Many people argue that they have sufficient ability for commercial purposes and that the general public is not discriminating enough to know the difference between common work and ex-

BULLETS VS. BIRDSHOT.

All advertising has only one object—the sale of merchandise—but there are almost as many ways of advertising as there are advertisers, though most advertising can be classified into one or another of two groups. One group is composed of those advertisements, specific in their character, which make a method and the other the shotgun method of advertising. The shotgun scatters its fire; it may hit a larger number of objects, but the execution is not always so great.

BREITMEYER'S FLOWER CHAT.

John Breitmeyer's Sons, who now have a branch store on Woodward avenue in Detroit, as well as the main store in the Breitmeyer building, have undertaken the publication of a monthly 4-page bulletin of flower news. They call it Breitmeyer's Flower Chat and the March issue is printed in that most striking of all color combinations, yellow and black. While the folder is designed as an advertisement, the advertising feature is kept in the background, the purpose being accomplished through suggestion. The talk is so good that a part of the contents of the March issue is reproduced herewith:

MARCH.

The first of the Spring months is here with its increased sunshine, giving brighter colors and more fragrant odor to those many representatives of Flora, commonly called Spring Flowers.

One of them, the Violet, for whom we always have an open hand and an open heart, is in its prime condition during this month.

Its blooms are never so large, its color never so blue, its odor never so delicious, as when kissed by the golden rays of the March sun.

As a corsage with Rosebuds or in combination with other Spring Beauties for Luncheon, or as a special aristocratic touch added to a box of Spring Flowers, their superior quality during the month of March is universally recognized.

We admire Sweet Peas and Lilacs at Christmas, but what are they compared with the same flowers during March? For that matter, all kinds of flowers benefit by the increased sunlight and longer days.

As the apple depends on the sun to paint his cheeks real rosy and red, so do flowers need the sunshine to fully develop their bright color and charming fragrance.

Is it not wonderful how a few Tulips and Daffodils or the gentle Violets decrease our mental or bodily ailments? They seem to be animated—to be speaking to us to console us.

The chef may be ever so Frenchy, and his sauce as tasty as culinary art can make it, still a few well-arranged flowers increase appetite and wit most wonderfully.

CARE OF CUT FLOWERS.

Flowers require fresh air that is moist and free from gases. Flowers should not be exposed to draughts.

Fresh water is a vital need, and the cut flowers should be placed in same immediately on their arrival.

The best holders are those which provide sufficient water so that the stems can be set in deep and well submerged.

The water should be changed at least daily. The stems of blooms should be occasionally recut or broken, and dead foliage should be removed.

A WRONG IMPRESSION

SOME PEOPLE SAY they cannot understand how we can afford to spend so much money advertising and still sell high grade flowers at popular prices.

THE ANSWER IS—By advertising we are letting the people know our prices are low, correcting a wrong impression that many have had. In this way we have increased our business to such an extent that we are able to continue to reduce the price of flowers.

WE ARE THE LARGEST RETAILERS of high-grade flowers, consequently the largest buyers. This enables us to buy and sell at the very lowest prices, which we are doing, and offer all flowers, strictly fresh—the lasting kind, at cellent work. All very well, if you have no higher ambition than to be a mediocre workman. But somebody of artistic instincts and ambition is going to show better work and explain its good points. Your best patrons can see the differences that have been pointed out. People buy the finest pictures, the finest carpets and furniture; they learn to discriminate in jewelry and in wearing apparel. The fact that they have never seen excellent floral work may account largely for their lack of taste. But decorators are waking up, and it means that the question will occur to each of us sooner or later, "Do I mean to live or merely to exist?"

In another chapter on the subject of color will be given some simple color laws.

A GOOD FRONT.

A. Meyer, formerly of the Smart Set Floral Co., has recently started in business for himself at Eightieth street and Madison avenue, in New York city. The accompanying illustration is prepared from an exceedingly poor photograph, but it serves to show that Mr. Meyer is following the precept of William Scott, whose frequent advice to young men was: "Wash all you got, and hang out all you wash."

Wedding Decoration in a Large Church, by Jacob Schulz, Louisville, Ky.

As a rule, flowers keep best if the blooms or petals are kept dry, but spraying of the foliage is beneficial.

When not in use or display, a cool and dark place sufficiently moist is favorable for flowers. To help produce such conditions, tissue paper or a light fabric placed over them and well sprinkled is effective.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Mrs. L. Burns Ave.

Your Boston Fern will need repotting, not a larger pot, but new soil. This is a good time to have it done. To place the plant in the greenhouse is not as a rule satisfactory. The atmospheric conditions are so different.

Mrs. D. L. K.—Cass Ave.

A palm with one or two leaves cut off looks to us like a handsome cup with a couple of chips broken out of it. Neither is desirable around the house; a cup cannot be mended, and a palm will use up one to one and one half years to reproduce two new leaves.

The "Questions and Answers" page can be made of special interest, if you will write us for any special information you may desire regarding flowers and their care. Will you give us your help by asking questions? We will not use your name unless we have your permission.

DECORATION IN A CHURCH.

Possibly no other class of work performed by the retail florist receives so much attention as his wedding decorations. Not only do the wedding guests pass judgment on each job, but the other retail florists who have the opportunity study the decoration and profit by its perfection or imperfections. A wedding decoration is difficult to photograph. This is especially the case where the decoration is in a large edifice, like a church. In the case of the present illustration, a church decoration is shown, the work of Jacob Schulz, of Louisville. Only a portion of the work appears, one of the principal features being the large wedding bell, which hung so high that it was beyond the range of the camera. For this decoration, in addition to several loads of palms and ferns, twenty cases of wild smilax were required, and 400 Easter lilies.

SEASONABLE

SUGGESTIONS

Easter Lilies.

A late Easter, nearly always causes growers to hold back much of their stock of Easter lilies a little too long. They figure that as March has been moderately warm, April is bound to be even warmer. Were we sure of these climatic conditions, it would be all right, but not infrequently a warm, sunny March gives place to a cold, sunless April and our theory about an April week being worth two or three in March gets a severe jolt. It is always safe to get the lilies along in good season, for even if they flower a week ahead of the time they are wanted, a cold cellar will hold them nicely. The buds should now be dropping on all plants for Easter and in an average night temperature of 60 degrees these will be in flower in good season. Considerable moving around of the plants will be found necessary to have them all in bloom together. Plants which are only just showing the buds may still be flowered in time if subjected to hard forcing, 70 to 75 degrees at night. Frequent syringing and a close, moist atmosphere will be needed to hurry them and those who have a batch of late plants know better than anyone else how painfully slow their progress seems, more especially when we get a dark spell of weather during the last few days before Easter.

Bulbous Plants for Easter.

A correspondent inquires if it would be possible to flower such bulbs as hyacinths, tulips and daffodils without fire heat for Easter. It is not only possible, but in the case of a late Easter is much the best way to grow them. It is too early to start these bulbs, but from March 25 to April 1, according to the condition of the bulbs and the variety, they can be brought from the cellar, where they have been stored for the winter, and placed on a bed of ashes in a coldframe, well up to the light. Here they can be properly watered and cared for and ventilated freely, and the plants will be much stockier than if grown in a greenhouse. Of course, a hot spell of weather will send these plants on with a rush and it may be necessary to remove them to a cold cellar to retard them. On the other hand, with cold weather a removal to the greenhouse, or a closing of the frames to bottle up a little sunheat, may be necessary. To reduce the temperature in the frames on hot days, mats can be thrown over them. This is better than shading the glass, as this latter method tends to draw up the plants.

Hydrangeas.

We have passed the middle of March now and Memorial day will be here within ten weeks. There are advantages in an early Easter, as it gives us bench space for the Memorial day crops several weeks ahead of 1911, for example. The hydrangeas should all be started now, not under benches, but if you have no greenhouse space utilize some coldframes with the necessary head room.

Stand the pots on a surface of coal ashes and be sure to protect them on cool nights with mats, as a little frost will injure the tender shoots. If you have any bench space in a cool house, utilize it to the fullest extent for the hydrangeas. They should have the light now, to prevent their making thin, spindling growths.

The plants for Easter should now have flower heads well advanced. If at all backward, give them a brisk, moist heat to hurry them along for a couple of weeks. They are better in quality, however, if not hard forced. Hydrangeas are notoriously thirsty subjects and, given good drainage, it is hardly possible to overwater them while in active growth under glass. Feed freely also and in case of any showing pale foliage, a dose or two of Clay's fertilizer applied in the form of a top-dressing, or in liquid form, or soot water will soon green them up.

Marguerites.

The marguerites intended for Easter flowering must now have the closest attention. The fact that Easter comes at a later date than usual makes it possible to have them in better flower than is customary. Marguerites enjoy the fullest light, are gross feeders and, the pots being full of active roots, manure water should be given at least twice a week. Never allow the plants to get dry or once they are in flower much foliage and many flowers will be lost. Do not let the plants stand too closely. Elevate some on inverted pots and stand a saucer below them to prevent undue drying out. As a general rule, marguerites well flowered and of good shape are not overabundant at Easter, and well grown and shapely plants should sell well. Queen Alexandra is not naturally an early bloomer and, rather than attempt any forcing tactics, hold them cool for Memorial day, when marguerites always sell well.

Transplanting Seedlings.

Many small seedlings will now require pricking off into flats. It never pays to delay this work, as once the little plants start to crowd each other, they become drawn and weakly, and unless carefully handled many will die when transplanted. A light compost passed through a half-inch screen is suitable for all seedlings. If half is leaf-mold and the balance loam which has had a little old manure mixed in it, about all seedlings will take kindly to it. In addition to seedlings, there are many small cuttings which are just as well, or better, in shallow flats than in pots. Never leave them in the cutting bench to become hard. When the roots are quite short is the time to transplant and not when they have matted the whole bench with roots. Careful and thorough watering and shading are necessary essentials for all newly transplanted cuttings and seedlings, and shade from direct sunlight and a moderately close and moist atmosphere for the first few days will reduce losses to a minimum.

Geraniums

SEASONABLE CULTURE.

The fall rooted cuttings, if not already in 4-inch pots, should go into this size without delay. When repotting geraniums and, for that matter, any other plants in active growth, be sure that the balls of earth are moist; it makes a great difference to the future welfare of the plant. A small ball in a perfectly dry state takes a lot of water to soak it after repotting, and if you want to satisfy yourself on this point, just select a few plants and mark them.

Geraniums at the final shift are better potted firmly. Avoid much decayed manure in the soil; any used should be old and crumble through the hands or sieve readily. Use a 4-inch pot of fine bone to each barrow-load of soil. This tends to build up a firm, stocky growth and one which will be floriferous, and every country florist knows that the geraniums and other bedding plants with flowers on are what people will buy, the strong, green flowerless plants being neglected.

The earlier spring, or rather winter rooted cuttings, should now be in 3-inch pots and can get a further shift in three weeks' time. While not so strong as the fall cuttings, they will make nice, salable stock. A later batch is well rooted in 2-inch and ready for a size larger pots. It is now getting too late to root any further cuttings to produce plants of sufficient size for late spring sales, but any such can be saved and planted out at home for stock.

At this season are received numerous inquiries in regard to diseased plants. This trouble sometimes has its inception in the cutting bench. It can, however, be created by giving the plants too much nitrogen in the soil, which will cause a rank but soft growth, and sometimes leaf-spot or bacteria will become rife and spread with great rapidity under such conditions. The best way to counteract it is to clean away the affected leaves. Allow the plants to dry out well between waterings to assist in hardening the growths. Air abundantly during favorable weather. Keep the atmosphere dry, rather than moist, and let all possible sunlight strike the plants. Geraniums should not be forced at any stage of their growth. The cuttings themselves root better in a temperature of 50 to 55 degrees than 10 degrees higher, and after potting 50 degrees should be the absolute maximum night temperature where stocky plants are wanted.

NEW ROSES WORTH GROWING.

A Good New Bedder.

Florence E. Coulthwaite is a splendid bedding variety, substantial in every respect. Color, deep cream, overcast with rose; a unique color.

Dean Hole is an intense salmon pink; exquisite bud, opening into a mammoth bloom of wonderful substance. An ideal garden rose.

Instituteur Sirday is deep golden yellow, with lighter shadings. Distinct and valuable.

Laurent Carle is an erect grower, with branching habit, good foliage, long pointed buds. Color, brilliant carmine.

La Galissiere is a bright, deep pink; free and constant; very double, with splendid form and good substance. The only drawback to this variety is the weak neck, which can not support the mammoth blooms. Should be thoroughly tested.

Lady Ursula is a most beautiful shade of fresh pink, of good form; a free, consistent bloomer. This is one of the best garden roses, being of strong growth without any bad manners.

La Detroit has proved to be an excellent garden rose. A good pink of pleasing color.

The Best in Its Color.

Mme. Jeanne Guillemot is the best variety of its color. Buds long and pointed; deep saffron yellow, shaded into deeper tints. A strong, upright grower, with free, branching habit.

Mme. Leon Pain is of stocky, robust growth; handsome foliage; silver salmon, with orange yellow center; reverse bright red and yellow.

Mme. Second Weber is one of the best roses of recent years. Color, rosy salmon or flesh pink; flowers of perfect formation; free and consistent bloomer.

Mrs. Aaron Ward is a most delightful bedder. Color, deep golden orange, shading out to lemon or creamy yellow toward the edge of petals. Good grower and consistent bloomer. A variety of exceptional value.

Mrs. A. R. Waddell is a strong, rampant grower, with heavy, leathery foliage; buds long and pointed, rosy scarlet suffused with old gold, opening into coppery salmon. The open flower is large, semi-double, but lasting. This is one of the showiest roses extant and is an ideal bedder.

May Miller is a last year's introduction. An excellent rose, strong growing, free flowering. Back of petals is coppery yellow, suffused with bright pink; the upper surface peach and apricot, shaded fawn.

Mme. Philippe Rivoire is apricot yellow, with lighter center; free grower and constant bloomer.

Has Been Overlooked.

Mamie is a grand garden rose which has been overlooked. A vigorous grower, constant in bloom, giving flowers of enormous size. Color, rosy carmine, with distinct yellow zone. A superb variety.

Mme. Constant Soupert has large buds, sharply pointed and plump. Color, deep golden yellow, tinted and shaded with rosy peach.

Olivia is a splendid addition to the red section, which still needs a greater assortment. Color, deep rosy red, resembling Helen Gould in form and color.

President Taft is a variety of quite recent introduction, but it is sure to become a favorite. Color, shining, intense pink, lasting under all conditions. A splendid grower and good bloomer, and flowers are of good size. This variety should not be confounded with the rose under the same name which has been introduced from Europe. The latter is of small value.

Rhea Reid is perhaps too well known to be properly placed in this list. However, it may be safely classed as the best red garden rose introduced to date.

White Killarney is quite as good as Pink Killarney and will become a standard white for the garden.

William Shean is similar in make-up to Killarney, holding its color well during hot weather. Worthy of trial.

Worthy of a Test.

The following varieties of hybrid teas also promise well, and should be tested: Andre Gamon, deep rose and carmine, petals edged carmine lake; Col. R. S. Williamson, satiny white, deep blush center, large; F. R. Patzer, creamy buff, shaded pink, changing to orange pink; George C. Waud, glowing orange vermillion; Reliance, glowing pink, base of petals creamy white; Rose Gubert, canary yellow, deeper at center; Rosemary, shining silvery pink; Senateur Mascuraud, amber yellow with golden center.

Teas.

The list of novelties in this section is limited, but every variety noted is a distinct and substantial addition to this beautiful type of rose.

Blumenschmidt is a sport from Mlle. Francisca Kruger, having every good point of the parent variety. Color, pure citron yellow, outer petals edged tender rose. A splendid bedder.

THRIPS AND LEAF-SPOT.

I am sending by separate mail some buds and foliage from my carnations. I have about fifty plants which are coming like the samples. Please let me know what the trouble is and what to do to stop it. G. H. W.

The buds forwarded show plainly the ravages of thrips. With warm weather coming on, you will have to get busy at once, else they will ruin your entire crop. Get some tobacco extract and spray two or three times each week, until you have them under control. After that, one spraying each week will suffice to keep them in check.

The foliage seems affected with the common leaf-spot. The reason the ends of the leaves are dried up is because the spot extends clear across the leaf, and, the sap being cut off, the entire portion of the leaf above the spot dries up. Just cut off these shoots below the joints where the dried leaves start and the plant will make new breaks which will come healthy, providing you remove the source of the disease. Dust these plants with a little Grape Dust, or with dry slaked lime and sulphur in equal proportions. A. F. J. B.

DISEASED BEACON AND VICTORY.

I send herewith some carnation foliage, which is affected by a disease that is new to me. Kindly let me know what the trouble is and how I ought to treat it. So far, it seems to be confined to the Beacon and Victory. G. N. L.

I have never been able to satisfy myself as to the exact classification of the disease you are complaining of. Part of the trouble appears to be leaf-spot, while other leaves look more as if they had been dried up by stigmonose. I have seen this frequently on Beacon, and it seems that when it gets a firm hold on a plant, it usually destroys it in time. Fortunately, in the cases which have come under my notice there were only a few plants affected, and, by pulling these up and burning them, the trouble was gotten rid of. It does not seem to spread much, as the diseased plants would stand right among perfectly healthy ones.

So I would advise you simply to pull up these diseased plants and burn them, as I do not think you can doctor them up enough to get any returns from them this season. A. F. J. B.

A BROOKLYN BANQUET.

The Greater New York Florists' Association achieved a distinct success with its first annual dinner, held at Raub's restaurant, Brooklyn, N. Y., Thursday evening, March 9. The attendance was large, the decorations beautiful and the fraternal spirit pronounced. All the Brooklyn wholesalers were present, and many prominent growers and retailers. Addresses were made by David Mellis, president of the association, and by J. B. Nugent, president of the New York Florists' Club, by A. L. Miller, president of the New York and New Jersey Plant Growers' Association, by J. V. Phillips, the veteran retailer, and by Mrs. Phillips, president of the Ladies' S. A. F., also by members of the press. An excellent vaudeville entertainment was provided and dancing followed. The committee in charge consisted of Messrs. Wilson, Jahn and Phillips and only eight days were consumed in planning and holding the banquet. Those present were:

NEW YORK.The Market.

We have an express strike and a warm wave, with greatly increased shipments, to add to the burden of an already overcrowded market. The retail demand has been light since Lent began and gives no promise of recovery before Easter. The supply of first-class American Beauty roses has been short for weeks. For the best 60 cents to 75 cents was easily obtainable last week. All other roses have fallen, some grand Killarney and Maid going as low as $6 per hundred March 13. In roses, the week holds out no encouragement to growers. The best carnations could be purchased at $2 per hundred the early part of this week, and in large quantities $10 per thousand was the limit of the buyer's offer. For the accumulations of both roses and carnations any fair offer of the street men is accepted.

There is only a limited demand for crebids, and prices are made attractive by the wholesalers, with tardy and discouraging responses. Cattleyas are coming in great variety; in one shipment from a Jersey grower I counted fifteen varieties. Lilies are abundant and in large quantities 8 cents was the best offer obtainable March 13. In some of the wholesale stores the enormous surplus presages an abundance for the rapidly approaching Easter season, now less than four weeks distant. There is plenty of valley and an oversupply of all kinds of bulbous stock, especially of daffodils, the southern shipments having already begun. The sweet pea arrivals also are enormous and the demand for any but the best of them is nil. Unless there comes a spell of exceptionally warm weather there will be no shortage of violets for Easter, as seemed possible a few weeks ago. As low as $1 a box was accepted for the accumulations March 13.

Club Meeting.

President Nugent has the commendable habit of opening the club's meetings promptly at 8 p. m. March 13 for the legislative committee P. O'Mara reported his visit to Albany with Messrs. Pierson, Powell, Kasting, Vick and others. C. H. Totty gave his experiences with a similar bill in Jersey, for a grant of $30,000 for greenhouses at New Brunswick Experiment Station. The bill already has received the approval of the house. He urged all Jerseyites to lend their influence in its favor.

Robert Young reported for the outing committee: The date, June 28; the place, Wetzel's; the boat, the Isabel; the tickets, men, $4; ladies, $2; children, $1; prizes only for ladies and children; no souvenir program.

W. E. Tricker, Jos. J. Broezert, Charles Knight and S. Whitfield were elected to membership and L. W. C. Tuthill proposed. The resignation of Fred Weir, U. G. Scollay, M. A. Bowe and A. L. Don were accepted with regret.

Messrs. McConnell, Kessler Bros., Wiesman, Zeller, Schmutz and Schultheis, Jr., were appointed a decorative committee for the club's banquet, for which Mr. Weathered reported most of the seats sold. The club voted to entertain the English tourists at the banquet and Messrs. O'Mara, Shaw and Traendly were appointed a committee to meet them on the arrival of the Mauretania March 17. Mr. Vincent, of White Marsh, will also be in New York to welcome them.

W. H. Siebrecht, Jr., reported for the market committee, H. A. Bunyard for the transportation committee, W. F. Sheridan for the committee on resolutions.

Of the exhibits Charles Weber's vases of Brooklyn carnation and Seedling No. 2 were highly commended; Beacon and Alma Ward carnations from Wm. Eccles, Oyster Bay, received a cultural certificate; Howard Gould carnation and Seedling No. 513 from the Cottage Gardens, each received a cultural certificate. A. Zvolanek, Boundbrook, staged sweet peas in nearly 100 varieties, including winter-flowering Spencers, and received certificates, commendations and thanks of the committee. Lewis P. Lord, of Minneapolis, was a visitor and showed his frost-proof plant box, which was awarded a certificate of merit. The award committee reported on a visit to C. H. Totty, February 24, to see his new carnation, Wodenethe, which scored ninety-three points and received the club's certificate. Also the committee visited the plant of P. A. B. Widener, Ogontz, Pa., William Kleinheinz, gardener, to see his new carnation, Dimple Widener, which scored eighty-eight points and was awarded the club's certificate.

Messrs. Bunyard and Miller gave short addresses on the National Flower Show and the National Sweet Pea Society. John Birnie read a practical and interesting paper on "The Benefit to New York Floriculture in the Establishment of the New Plant Market." I. S. Hendrickson read a paper on "How Can the Gladiolus Be Made a Popular Florists' Flower?" James T. Scott spoke eloquently on "Why Florists Do Not Take More Interest in the Nursery Branch of the Business." Frank McMahon spoke of the damage the trade sustains from leaking gas pipes, and this provoked considerable discussion. Harry Turner, back from England, gave a talk on his holiday experiences there.

Various Notes.

In the plantsman's department of the trade there is much to encourage the growers. The new market which opens April 1 at Fifty-ninth street will prove a great boon and boom to the plant growers in and around New York. The opening of the preliminary market will speedily be followed by the completion of the larger and permanent market under the bridge, and already many other branches of the trade are planning for offices, branches and conveniences for display that will bring them in daily touch with a multitude of people. The outlook for a great market is bright and Secretary Siebrecht deserves great credit for his persistency.

The MacNiff Horticultural Co. reports a wide demand for seeds and will develop this branch of its business.

The New Yorkers who accepted the invitation of H. A. Dreer to visit the new greenhouses at Riverton are loud in praise of the magnificent plant and the splendid reception accorded them. A telegram from Wm. F. Dreer, who is in California, was read by Mr. Thilow, who made the welcoming address. An eloquent and humorous oration by Robert Craig followed. A buffet lunch was served and special trains were provided for the guests. The whole affair was up to the Dreer standard. This immense new enterprise is only a beginning!

Anton Schultheis, of College Point, has been confined to the house with a severe attack of the grip. Charles Millang has also lost several days in a fight with the prevailing malady.

Adolph Myer, Eightieth street and Madison avenue, and Miss Delia Jacoby will be married April 2.

MacDonald & Schreiner, at Seventy-first street and Lexington avenue, have an up-to-date corner store and are fast building up a good family trade.

The Florists' Club's banquet this week Saturday, at Shanley's, promises to be the floricultural event of the season.

J. McHutchison is traveling in South America.

The second monthly exhibition of the Horticultural Society of New York took place March 8 at the American Museum of Natural History. A larger attendance and plant display than usual was encouraging. Winthrop Sargent, of Fishkill, won the silver medal for carnation blooms, with his new white Wodenethe. Scott Bros., of Elmsford, received a certificate of merit for their new red carnation, William Eccles. Anton Zvolanek, of Bound Brook, received a certificate of merit for his winter flowering sweet peas. Lager & Hurrell, of Summit, N. J., showed many rare kinds of orchids and received a silver medal for their unnamed Schroederæ.

Moore, Hentz & Nash have added a shamrock side issue to their cut flower enterprise. The demand for shamrock plants of the genuine Irish parentage is persistent this year.

Charles A. Dards is enjoying a brief holiday in the south.

William Tricker, of Madison, N. J., foreman for Charles Totty, was fortunate a week ago in saving his home from destruction by fire. It was a close call.

The attendance from New York at the National Flower Show will be large. Many will go by boat Friday evening, March 24, and some will spend the entire week at the Hub.

Bowling.

The following scores were made March 10:

August Millang states that he has bought the entire business of William Muller, Brooklyn, including the store, greenhouses, stable, horses, wagons and all stock. He will carry on the business.

Joseph B. Davis, 2152 Third avenue, has been laid up at St. Luke's hospital for several weeks with a broken knee cap, his second experience of the kind within a year. He is again attending to business, but is carrying his knee in a brace.

Charles Thorley drives a big imported C. G. V. automobile, just now undergoing an overhauling in the Brock garage at Trenton.

COLUMBUS, O.

The Market.

Trade has been rushing for the last two weeks. There has been a great deal of funeral work of late, which has made the demand heavy on all kinds of stock. The few clear days we have had have increased the supply considerably. Roses are more plentiful than at any time this season, and carnations are coming in heavily. While the demand has been strong on them, there has been quite a surplus and some of the stores were offering specials on carnations March 11. Sweet peas are plentiful, but demand for them is excellent. Bulbous stock is coming in heavily and the report from growers here is that it will be hard to hold some of the stock back for Easter, especially in the bulb line.

Various Notes.

All the greenhouses are taking on the look of spring, with the repotting of geraniums and the general line of bedding stock.

There was a meeting of the officers of the Florists' Association at the Chittenden hotel March 11, in reference to taking some action to drive the Greeks off the streets. Quite a number have made their appearance in the last week.

The club dance March 8 was quite a success in a financial way, as well as providing a social good time.

BOSTON.The Market.

Trade was only moderate during last week. Weather conditions favored a much increased flower production and while the demand, for the lenten season, was good, it was insufficient to use up the heavy arrivals. White flowers have sold better than colored ones, and while these hitherto have been in rather short supply, this temporary shortage is now relieved. Beauty roses are now fine and the best make $6 per dozen. White Killarney has been selling finely, being in heavy call for funeral work. Both these and the pink ones are of grand quality. Richmond is better than it has been heretofore this season. Mrs. Aaron Ward continues in popular favor and many are seen with quite long stems. Some nice flowers of the old Bon Silene and Safrano are also coming in. Carnations are in oversupply and many go at $1 per hundred.

Sweet peas are arriving in tremendous numbers. Those with long stems are selling at 50 cents to $1 per hundred, while short-stemmed stock is hard to move. Single violets are abundant, but show signs of nearing the end. Prices on these continue low. Double violets cut a small figure here, but are selling moderately well. Bulbous stock is abundant and prices have a downward tendency. Lily of the valley is overabundant and there is something of a glut of callas and lilies. Spanish iris has made its appearance; so have anemones, ixias and sparaxis. Orchids are moving slowly. There are still sufficient cattleyas to go around and an abundance of dendrobiums. Mignonette is quite abundant and antirrhinums are of extra good quality. The trade in green supplies continues satisfactory. Pot plant trade is getting quite brisk and everything points to a record-breaking Easter business. Rambler roses are becoming abundant, while acacias, ericas, genistas, cyclamens and many pots and pans of bulbous stock are seen.

Various Notes.

Shamrocks have been in big demand during the last few days. Among the growers who have sold large numbers are C. J. Harvey, Needham Heights; Robert E. Lassman, Watertown, and J. Tailby & Son, Wellesley.

The Halifax Garden Co., in addition to its usual heavy shipments of sweet peas and carnations, has added mignonette, which they are daily sending of fine quality to H. T. Capers.

Adolph E. E. Koch, of Nobscot, Mass., has an extra fine cut of antirrhinums of the best selling colors. He is also an expert carnation grower, as the splendid quality of his Winsors, Fenns, White Perfections and Enchantress testifies.

Prof. E. A. White, of Amherst, will sail March 22 on the Bermudian for a trip to Bermuda, with Mrs. White, who has been quite sick for some months.

From Peirce Bros., at Waltham, some fine shipments of cinerarias of the large flowered type are coming, also cyclamens and azaleas extremely well flowered.

Arnold & Petros, on Boylston street, have had in their window a pyramid of cut Liliun longiflorum rising to the top of the window with single violets, Winsor carnations and narcissi around the base.

The next meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, which comes March 21, promises to be a hummer. In addition to a lecture, there will be a lot of business consequent on the coming S. A. F. National Show and other matters of importance to be discussed. A large influx of new members is already assured and the meeting promises to be the liveliest and most largely attended in years.

P. J. Van Baarda, of J. Breck & Sons' force, spent a few days in Geneva, N. Y., last week. He will address the North Shore Horticultural Society this week on a recent trip to Holland. Peter M. Miller spoke before the same society last week on "Grass Seeds."

Thomas F. Galvin, on Tremont street, has an attractive dendrobium window this week, fine specimens of various types of nobile and Pierardi being utilized to good effect. These were grown by F. Vardon, who cares for Seth Borden's collection at Fall River.

H. M. Robinson & Co. report lenten business as satisfactory.

The Montrose Greenhouses should have some fine quality roses for the coming big show. Their Richmond and Killarney are now extra fine. With them Mrs. Aaron Ward seemed inclined to go dormant in winter, but is now blooming satisfactorily.

It is now apparent that even the big space in Mechanics building will be none too great for the S. A. F. show. Competitive entries are now pouring in from all sides and about everyone in this section is planning to show something. Entertainment arrangements are being perfected as rapidly as possible and every effort will be made to show all possible courtesies to visitors.

John Barr's cyclamens are selling out fast. No commercial grower turns out nicer plants than Mr. Barr and he has no trouble in selling several thousands annually. He has some thousands of hydrangeas for Memorial day coming along in heated frames.

W. A. Hastings is able to be around again after an attack of grip. Mr. Hastings has been appointed state vice-president for the S. A. F. for eastern Massachusetts.

P. Welch is one of those who are laboring assiduously for the success of the coming big show. He is specially interested in the rose section and thinks this department will make the finest show on record. Down at the Devonshire street emporium, business with Welch Bros. continues good all around.

Mann Bros., of Randolph, were first in the market with Spanish iris. They grow this popular bulb in large quantities. They have 25,000 of the small flowered gladioli. These they are holding mostly for Memorial day.

Inquiries at the Fottler, Fiske, Rawson Co., T. J. Grey Co., R. & J. Farquhar & Co., and Joseph Breck & Sons, elicited the information that the seed business was fairly under way. Mail orders were heavy and the last few bright days, with suggestions of spring, had caused a big increase in counter trade.

E. H. Wilson, the noted Chinese traveler, is expected back in Boston towards the end of April. Farquhar & Co. will exhibit many of the new shrubs he has introduced at the National Flurbs Show. They had one beautiful pure white cerasus at their store last week.

Arthur Griffin, of Woburn, who is one of the best of our new commercial growers, finds Pink Delight carnation a free bloomer and excellent seller and will plant it much more heavily next season. He has one of a pure white color.

From the N. F. Comley conservatories, Lexington, some excellent Mary Tolman carnations are coming in. White Enchantress remains a prime favorite with Mr. Comley. W. N. Craig.

ST. LOUIS.The Market.

The local market was in good condition during the whole of last week. There seems to be plenty of everything, with the exception of long fancy roses and Beauties. The retail florists throughout the city say that trade has been fairly good since Lent set in, but the bulk of the work is for funerals. This and the spring openings downtown will be about all the work looked for until Easter.

In the wholesale market Monday morning, March 13, there was a fair supply of roses, nothing fancy, and Beauties were in great demand. Carnations were a surplus in all varieties and good stock could be bought as low as $10 per thousand, with the Enchantress varieties in the lead. Lilies, especially callas, are also more plentiful than the call warrants. There are quantities of good valley and other bulb stock, such as Von Sions, jonquils, Paper Whites and a few Romans.

Sweet peas are a glut and the market is fairly flooded with them in all grades and colors. California violets are also a glut and the Kirkwood growers say that if the warm weather continues, violets will be scarce for Easter.

Everything in greens is plentiful.

Club Meeting.

At a well attended meeting of the Florists' Club, held March 9 in Odd Fellows' hall, a telegram of congratulations was sent to Treasurer Smith at Edwardsville, his wedding having necessitated his absence. He had, however, left a token of his regard for the club in the shape of a box of cigars. Early spring work undoubtedly kept many members away from the meeting, as the day was especially fine.

Chas. Schoenle and Geo. B. Windler were appointed to assist the trustees in the preparations for the celebration of the club's twenty-fifth anniversary next June. William Trelease, director of the Missouri Botanical Garden, announced that Fred G. Grossart had been granted the scholarship for which he was recently nominated by the club.

Walter E. Ogel, of Belleville, was elected to membership and applications were received from Frank H. Wild, of Sarcxie, and Thomas C. Carr, of St. Louis.

Henry Jennemann, of Webster Park, exhibited the new violet which is being grown for him by Joe Hauser. The judges pronounced it quite an improvement over the California variety. The St. Clair Floral Co., of Belleville, showed a few well grown Cochet rose blooms.

The club is making preparations to assist in entertaining the American Association of Nurserymen when they meet here in June. Wholesalers from other cities, who have been supplying local department stores that have no regular flower departments, were condemned by a vote of the club, as local wholesalers are prohibited from this practice. The secretary was instructed to notify such wholesalers of this action.

C. E. De Wever suggested that the local plantsmen and wholesalers should get together to regulate prices, but owing to the late hour the discussion was carried over to the next regular meeting, April 13.

Various Notes.

Fred H. Weber, state vice-president of the S. A. F., is out hustling for new members. He says he has quite a few who have promised to join before the August convention.

The fine, spring-like weather brought out a few plantsmen to open their stands at Union market. Tom Carr was one of the first to be ready for business. He is also one of the oldest at the market.

Ostertag Bros. had the big decoration at the Coliseum for the Adolphus Busch golden wedding jubilee. Henry Ostertag says it was one of the largest jobs he has tackled for a long time.

A. G. Greiner says he has a good call for nursery stock and especially California privet. C. E. De Wever and Emil Rothenhover are also busy planting out nursery stock of all kinds.

Otto Sander, in the Century building, continues his fine window decorations. Mr. Sander says it pays, as his business has greatly increased since he started these attractive displays.

Fred H. Weber had the big decorations at Vandevort's department store, which opened Monday, March 13. A big force worked all day Sunday to complete it and 500 fancy Beauties were used.

The Retail Florists' Association, at its regular meeting March 6, condemned the practice of outside wholesale florists selling to our department stores which have no floral departments.

The Engelmann Botanical Club held its regular meeting March 13 at the Missouri Botanical Garden. The main feature of the meeting was a paper presented by H. W. Anderson on "Immunity from Disease in Plants."

The marriage of W. C. Smith, of the W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co., and Miss Helen West, of Edwardsville, Ill., was the occasion last week of quite a demonstration by the employees and other members of the firm. Mr. and Mrs. Smith will be at home to friends in their apartments at Shenandoah and Grand avenues on their return the last of this week.

W. W. Randall, of the A. L. Randall Co., was a recent visitor. J. J. B.

SPRINGFIELD, O.

The Springfield Florists' Club held its regular meeting Monday evening, March 13, at the office of the Good & Reese Co., with a fine attendance. Progress was reported by the committee appointed to confer with the park commissioners in regard to the proposed rose garden at Snyder park.

"Plant Life" was the subject of a most interesting and highly instructive paper read by Christian Binning, of the Geo. H. Mellen Co., which showed evidence of close observation and study for a lifetime, beginning with his school days in Germany. Sex in plants was explained along with the aid of insects in cross-fertilization of flowers, and man's work toward reversing nature by efforts toward the doubling of blooms was decried. A general discussion followed, participated in by John M. Good, Carl E. Glenn, Frank E. Good and others, the consensus of opinion being that the subject is too vast to be covered at a single session, and that there is much room for progress in the way of scientific methods in floriculture, arboriculture and agriculture.

Ge Dale.

Colorado Springs, Colo.—An additional greenhouse, 21x100, is being erected on the estate of Spencer Penrose, on West Dale street.

OBITUARY.

J. F. Beyer.

J. F. Beyer, secretary of the Beyer Floral Co., South Bend, Ind., and the youngest of the three sons of August F. Beyer, head of the concern, died Tuesday, March 14, after only a short illness. The funeral will be held at South Bend March 16. Mr. Beyer was only 26 years of age. A widow survives. Associated with the deceased in the management of the business of the Beyer Floral Co. were two brothers, Paul and Will.

John Senger.

John Senger, who for twenty-six years had been engaged in business at Chicago, died March 8 at his home, 2330 North Spaulding avenue. Mr. Senger was born in Germany almost fifty-five years ago and learned his trade in his native land. He came to Chicago thirty-one years ago and after working at the trade a few years, started in business in a small way at the intersection of Milwaukee avenue and Bloomingdale road. He spent seventeen years at this place, removing to Palmer square. Later he made another change of location, to North Spaulding avenue, where he had seven greenhouses and a retail store. He was a man little given to participation in the trade affairs, devoting his whole thought and attention to his private business, but he had a large number of friends in the trade, for he grew large quantities of miscellaneous stock for wholesale and retail and was doing a big business. Mr. Senger leaves a widow and four children, three sons and a daughter. The youngest son is 17, but all three were engaged with their father and will carry on the business.

Mrs. James Wolfe.

Mrs. Mary V. Wolfe, widow of the late James Wolfe, founder of the business of Wolfe the Florist, at Waco, Tex., died recently at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Annie Wolfe Brigance, 703 South Fourth street, Waco, at the age of 66 years. Her death was due to a complication of diseases and her illness had been long and painful. She was born in England, but had been a resident of Waco for about eighteen years. Four children survive, two daughters and two sons, Mrs. Annie Wolfe Brigance, Mrs. Hannah Robinson, Tom and Fred Wolfe, all of Waco.

J. W. Adams.

Of J. W. Adams, who died March 4, The Review said in a biographical sketch, published December 28, 1908: "To have lived over four-score years, a half century of which has been devoted to a single business, is an achievement which it is given to few men to accomplish. John W. Adams is active and alert, mentally and physically, and might easily pass for a man twenty years younger. For fifty years he has conducted the business of a nurseryman, getting his start when a boy by reading some works on horticulture. With the aid of his father he developed a small nursery at his New Hampshire home and the experience thus obtained proved most valuable in the years that followed, when he engaged in the business for himself. Now he has thirteen acres under cultivation at Springfield, Mass., with large greenhouses in connection."

John William Adams was born in Stratham, N. H., June 20, 1828. Locating first in the nursery business at Portland, Me., in 1866 Mr. Adams bought a section of Marshall P. Wilder's nursery in Boston and made arrangements to move there. His plans were suddenly changed, however, by the offer of a tempting salary as superintendent of a copper mine. Mr. Adams made a success of the mine. July 5, 1867, he moved to Springfield and started the business he and his sons have since conducted with success. He found time for many outside activities, being a member of the Massachusetts legislature in 1892-3. Mr. Adams married Miss Sarah Frances Waterhouse, at Portland, September 5, 1865, and they had six children, four sons and two daughters. Two of the sons died early in life. Walter Adams and Charles Adams are associated with their father's business. The two daughters, Mrs. Oatman and Miss Nellie Adams, are also members of the firm of J. W. Adams & Co.

John J. Harrington.

John J. Harrington, who has been gardener for Henry A. C. Taylor, at Newport, R. I., for thirty-six years, died suddenly Sunday evening, March 12, of heart disease at his home on Annandale road, at the age of 65 years. He had not been in good health for some time, but attended to his duties as usual up to the very last. He is survived by his widow, one daughter and two sisters. The funeral was solemnized from St. Mary's church Wednesday morning, where there was a large gathering of relatives and friends to pay the last token of respect. Interment was in St. Mary's cemetery. There were many handsome floral tributes from his fellow gardeners in Newport.

William Webster.

William Webster, the oldest landscape gardener in Rochester, N. Y., died at his home in that city, Tuesday, March 7, aged 94 years. Mr. Webster came to this country from England in 1833, one year before Rochester was made a city. He planned the grounds of the University of Rochester, and was prominent in the planning of the grounds at Cornell University, at Ithaca, Kodak park, Maplewood park and other places in and about Rochester.

Heman Glass.

Heman Glass died at Rochester, N. Y., Saturday, March 4. In 1881 Mr. Glass organized the Heman Glass Seed Co., and remained in active control until about five years ago. He was a member of the state legislature during the term of 1875-76.

DENVER.

The Market.

For the last three weeks stock has been in excess of the demand. The last few days of February were cold and disagreeable, with snow falling most of the time, making the streets and sidewalks wet and muddy and putting a damper on business in general. Then Lent was ushered in with the first of March, and for a short time it looked as though it might have some effect on trade; but it has made little difference. Business has been comparatively good, and the oversupply of stock is due to the fact that everyone is cutting a big crop. This is especially true about carnations. There are always a few who, when they have a large cut of carnations, will travel around from store to store, trying to sell, and when they cannot get the price first asked, will take almost nothing rather than carry the stock back home. Such people are the cause of the drop in carnation prices, for when a retailer can buy first-class flowers at one or two cents, he is spoiled for a while, and it is a difficult matter to make him see that other carnations are worth three cents.

In some of the greenhouses, where a great deal of outdoor planting is done, the carnation plants are being thrown out to make room for young bedding stock. The California violet peddlers have disappeared from the streets, much to the relief of the retailers, and as a consequence home-grown violets are more in demand. In fact, at times the demand has been a little more than the supply. The indications are that there will be no violets for Easter. It comes so late this year, the warm weather is almost sure to spoil them.

Bulb stock is so plentiful you can hardly give it away. Everyone seems to have quantities of hyacinths, tulips and daffodils, and in some cases the prices have been cut exceptionally low.

Various Notes.

The closing of the Capitol Hill branch of the Denver postoffice on Sundays makes quite a difference to the Speth Floral Co., whose store is next door. Mr. Speth always has an attractive window, and many people who went to the postoffice for their mail were attracted to the store and invariably made purchases that they would not otherwise have made. Mr. Speth says the loss is considerable.

W. D. Black has opened a flower store at 1455 Broadway, just across the street from the Capitol building. Mr. Black believes in advertising, and is having a large electric sign made to light up his place at night.

A beautiful lavender wistaria, full of blossoms, and grown by Ben. Boldt, was on display last week in the window of the store of Cooper & Berry. It was quite a novelty, for many people had never seen one before.

Emil Glauber is dissatisfied with his automobile. He wants to sell it and buy a better one. The machine is new, having been used only a few months, and one which almost anyone would be glad to own. However, it does not go fast enough to suit Mr. Glauber, so he is going to sell it and buy one that has more speed. M. R. J.

LOW FARES TO BOSTON.

The railroads have been kind to the National Flower Show. Under the guise of a convention rate, there being, in fact, simultaneous conventions of three of the principal trade societies, the Eastern Passenger Association granted a rate of one and three-fifths fare for the round trip and the Central Passenger Association now has concurred. This is in effect a reduction of twenty per cent from the regular round trip fare and applies as far west as the Mississippi river. Railroad fares through practically every mile of the territory are regularly on a 2-cent basis, so that with the twenty per cent reduction the S. A. F. is getting extremely low rates. The reduction in railroad fares should have the effect of insuring a large attendance of those in the trade and should be particularly effective in increasing the attendance from a distance. It makes the round trip from Chicago only $35.20. Of course this is on the certificate plan, full fare going and three-fifths fare returning.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Meeting of Directors.

By order of the president, notice is hereby given that the mid-Lent meeting of the executive board of the Society of American Florists will be held at Boston, Mass., from March 25 until April 3, with an adjourned meeting to be held at Baltimore April 4. Meetings are called at Boston for 9 a. m. each morning from March 25 to April 3, inclusive. The meeting at Baltimore is called for 10 a. m. April 4 and will remain in session until all business is disposed of.

Reduced Rates to Boston.

A special rate of a fare and three-fifths on the certificate plan has been granted by the New England Passenger Association (excepting the Eastern Steamship Co.), the trunk Line Association, and the Central Passenger Association. Tickets may be secured not earlier than March 22 and not later than March 27 and will be good returning to April 5, inclusive. In securing your tickets purchase a regular full one-way first-class fare and be sure to ask for a certificate. No reduction in fare will be made unless a certificate be secured at the time of the purchase of the ticket.

Immediately upon your arrival at Mechanics hall, present your ticket to the secretary of the S. A. F. A fee of 25 cents is charged by the railroads for each ticket validated. Certificates will be signed by the agent March 26, 27 and 28 and at no other time.

When returning, certificates should be presented at the railway ticket office and a ticket at three-fifths of the regular fare will be furnished you.

For those living west of Chicago and St. Louis, tickets should be bought to those cities, from which points tickets may be secured at the reduced rates. It will be well to confer with your agent concerning rates and routes.

Convention Preparations.

There will be no hotel headquarters for the S. A. F. at this convention.

The office of the National Flower Show committee is in Mechanics building. Chester I. Campbell, manager of the show, is in charge. All business connected with the flower show should be presented there.

Orders for members' tickets must be presented to the committee in charge of admission and exchanged for regular tickets. All orders and tickets in hands other than the owners will be taken up and canceled.

All members of the S. A. F. and affiliated societies should register with the secretary of the S. A. F., so that a record may be kept of the attendance and so that members may be located when asked for. H. B. Dorner, Sec'y.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

Department of Registration.

J. H. Leach & Son, North Easton, Mass., have registered Carnation Pink Supreme, a seedling x Boston Market; color, flesh pink; size, three and one-half inches; habit, similar to Fair Maid, flower larger and fuller; strong, stiff stem; does not split the calyx.

Charles Weber, Lynbrook, N. Y., has registered Carnation Brooklyn; prosperity x Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson; color, bright, deep pink; size, three and one-half inches; habit, same as Lawson, with foliage not quite so heavy; free growing, very healthy; prolific, every shoot running to flower; form of flower somewhat irregular, slightly fringed.

A. F. J. Baur, Sec'y.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

The following gentlemen have accepted the position of judges of roses for the first division at the National Flower Show: William F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.; Frederick Burki, Gibsonia, Pa.; Otto G. Koenig, St. Louis, Mo., and Emil Buettner, Park Ridge, Ill.

The program provides for three meetings, headed the commercial growers' meeting, the business meeting, and the amateur rose growers' meeting. President Elliott is much in earnest about making these meetings interesting.

Eber Holmes is the manager of the show, and will look after the details on the spot. Any one having any special prizes to offer, dues to pay, or other matters of interest, write to the secretary. Benj. Hammond, Sec'y.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

There are few in the trade who do not realize that this is the lenten season. Had it not been for several good, big funerals, there would have been little doing last week. It seemed like a general slump all along the line and almost everything felt it. Lilies are abundant and violets seemed to have gone out of style. Roses have held their own, but are due for a drop, as they are coming in more plentifully every day.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club held its meeting March 7, with a good attendance. One new member was elected and seven new names presented. The subject was "Roses" and some good stock was shown.

The E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., showed new roses, Mrs. Aaron Ward, and Carnation Bonfire. Bonfire is the dandy red; the color could not be improved and the strong stems and size were satisfactory to all.

C. H. Totty, Madison, N. J., showed Rose Lady Hillingdon, a beautiful copper yellow, for which there is room, and Carnation White House, which was well thought of.

James Moore, Phipps Conservatory, north side, had Cineraria hybrida grandiflora, grown from Beckert's seed. The plants were the best seen this year.

Phipps Conservatory, Schenley park, also made a display of hyacinths, cinerarias and a few novelties.

Geo. J. Learzaf, Mt. Washington, Pittsburgh, exhibited White Perfection and Enchantress carnations grown within a mile of the center of the city, right in the smoke district. They were good.

Frank Crook, gardener for Jos. H. Park, showed Primula obconica, which were fine.

Finleyville Floral Co., Finleyville, Pa., had a vase of pink and white seedling carnations, which were considered good enough to introduce to the trade.

Randolph & McClements had an assortment of good things, such as they always grow.

The Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. had vases

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, '01.
Officers for 1911: President, George Asmus,
Chicago; vice-president, R. Vincent, Jr., White
Marsh, Md.; secretary, H. B. Dorner, Urbana,
Ill.; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.
Special convention and National Flower Show,
Boston, Mass., March 25 to April 1, 1911.
Annual convention, Baltimore, Md., August 15
to 18, 1911.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

THE second week in Lent showed a much better record of business than did the first seven days following Ash Wednesday.

THE National Council of Horticulture has begun the annual spring press service, distributing articles entitled "Spring Work Among Shrubs," "Preparing for the Flower Garden," and "Hotbed Hints."

CHICAGO TO BOSTON.

For the National Flower Show and convention of the Society of American Florists, the American Carnation Society, the American Rose Society, the Sweet Pea Society of America, and the American Gladiolus Society, at Boston,
Mass., March 25 to April 1, 1911:

For the above occasion the transportation committee of the Chicago Florists'
Club has decided to use the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern railway, and arranged with that company for a special section of the Lake Shore Limited to leave Chicago 5:30 p. m., Thursday, March 23, due in Boston the following evening at 8:30, provided a sufficient number of requests for reservations are received to warrant a special section; otherwise the party will be accommodated in special sleepers attached to the regular Lake Shore Limited, leaving and arriving at the same hours as above quoted.

The rate authorized for this occasion is one and three-fifths fare from Chicago, on the certificate plan, which means $22 going, and three-fifths of that, or $13.20, returning; making a total for the round trip of $35.20.
(Don't fail to ask for certificate at time of purchasing ticket.) Selling dates: March 22 to 27, inclusive; final return selling date, April 5. Passengers coming from points west should purchase to Chicago only, and repurchase here, as no special rates are authorized west of Chicago. Pullman rates: Double upper berth, $4.40; double lower berth,
$5.50; section, $9.90; compartment,
$15.50; drawing room, $20.

Sleeping car reservations should be made at the earliest possible moment, and your committee respectfully requests that you write or phone (Har.
7600) G. K. Thompson, General Agent Passenger Department, Lake Shore &
Michigan Southern railway, 180 South Clark street, Chicago, Ill., who will book your berths.

Yours very truly,
Philip J. Foley,
E. F. Winterson,
H. B. Howard,
Committee.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The retailers do not complain of dull business; indeed, most of the stores say trade is excellent, considering the lenten season, but the wholesale houses find nothing in the situation to warrant bragging. The supplies of stock do not seem to be exceptionally heavy for the middle of March, but there is an abundance of practically everything. There is a fair volume of business, perhaps; but prices have weakened to the point where a good many of the wholesalers find their total sales for the first full week in March did not aggregate as much money as for the same week last year, with no better prospect for the present week. It is to be considered, however, that we were three weeks nearer Easter at this date last year.

The one item that is on the short side is the American Beauty. A few growers are cutting fair quantities of shorter stems, but the daily receipts of long Beauties are extremely light. Were there any special demand for these it would be impossible to do anything with the orders. The supply of long fancy Killarney, White Killarney, Richmond, Maryland and Jardine is so great that prices have declined possibly twenty per cent. Rose stock is not only adequate in supply, but extremely reasonable in price, quality considered.

Carnations are in heavy supply and do not clean up, except for Saturday's special sales. Early in the present week there was a shortage here and there of white carnations, which were being held in anticipation of the extra demand for St. Patrick's day. Probably more were died this year than ever before, but the effort at accumulation prevented any shortage or extravagant prices.

Bulbous stock continues in oversupply,
the outdoor southern crop having arrived.
Violets have not improved in salability and there are too many low grade sweet peas. Easter lilies and callas have accumulated badly; these are not flowers on which it is easy to force sales. Last week there was big shipping March 10, Friday, for Saturday's special sales and Saturday morning city trade was active, prices being made sufficiently attractive to clean out the accumulated surplus.
March 13 found everyone well stocked up again and indications at the middle of the week were that no clean-up would be made until Saturday. Prices for the moment are in the buyer's favor. Even cattleyas are seeking buyers.

Chicago to Boston.

It now looks as though the Chicago party to-Boston, leaving at 5:30 p. m.
March 23 on the Lake Shore, will fill at least two cars. One car was already filled March 14, at which time the following reservations had been made:

Valentine, J. A., Denver.
Glauber, Emil, Denver.
Philpott, Harry A., Winnipeg.
Koenig, Otto, St. Louis.
Critchell, C. E., and wife, Cincinnati.
Hartshorne, Wm., Joliet.
Kemble, I. O., Marshalltown, Ia., two reservations.
Asmus, George.
Partridge, Lester L.
Jurgens, August.
Washburn, C. L.
Smyth, Wm. J.
Foley, Philip J.
Rudd, Willis N.
Howard, H. B.

Quite a few others have declared their intention of making the trip, but have procrastinated in the matter of reserving berths. Address E. F. Winterson, 45 Wabash avenue, or G. K. Thompson,
180 Clark street.

Various Notes.

READY TO BOOK YOUR ORDERS FOR LILIES

FOR EASTER

Really good Lilies will not be plentiful this Easter—too many ready too soon, too much disease, too many short stems. But our Lilies will be fine—all true Giganteums, clean, healthy and even; mostly long stems. Protect yourself by placing your order with us now.

Long stems, the best in the market.....	100	1000
Medium stems, fine flowers.....	$15.00	$125.00
Short stems, good flowers.....	12.50	100.00
	10.00	85.00

These will run three to five flowers to the stem, will be packed at the greenhouses in boxes of 100 and shipped without rehandling.

KILLARNEY

To the users of the best grade of Killarneys it will be good news that our crop once more is large—the quality always is the best in this market. While we have a fair supply of short to medium, the greater part of the crop is the Select and Special grades. The color in the pink Killarney is extra good. We never handled finer roses, and we invite all retailers who want good stock to order some of these.

CARNATIONS

The season has arrived for featuring the Carnation. We have never had a finer lot of stock, nor do we recall a season when prices have been more reasonable. Write for quotations on thousand lots—push for business and you will find this one of the most profitable seasons of the year.

SWEET PEAS

For years we have been headquarters for Sweet Peas, but we never have had at this date such fine stock or such large quantities as now. Extra long stems, carrying large, perfect flowers. All the fancy colors as well as white and pink. We are shipping these Peas, fresh picked, in great quantities and they never fail to give buyers the best of satisfaction.

Valley

Fine Valley is something you need every day in the year. We always have it. Order of us and get the best.

Violets

You get the cream of the crops, double or single, when you order of us. Thousand lots our specialty.

Cattleyas

Our orchids are home-grown, you always get your orders filled.

Bulb Stock

Tulips, all colors; Daffs, Jonquils, Paper Whites in large supply.

Also place orders with us for home-grown Gardenias.

corporators are: John F. Kidwell, E. O. Blameuser and George C. Weiland. It is stated that the plan is to place the stock in lots of not more than five shares with different growers for this market and to open a wholesale cut flower establishment, probably in the autumn, but possibly before Easter. A meeting of the interested parties was held in a downtown hotel March 14 to further the work of organization.

E. B. Washburn and Mrs. Washburn returned March 11 from a six weeks' vacation spent at Pasadena. C. L. Washburn is feeling so much better he has decided to forego his trip to West Baden.

W. E. Lynch is again on duty at E. H. Hunt's after several days spent in fighting a case of blood poisoning, which affected his neck and left arm. C. M. Dickinson has returned from a short trip to Denver. Clifford Pruner attended the funeral of Joseph Labo's son at Joliet March 10.

A. L. Randall offers what seems like a logical explanation why the arrival of Lent was more apparent this year than last, through the falling off in business. He points out that Easter was three weeks earlier last year, bringing Ash Wednesday into the time that roses still were scarce. This year Lent came in just as the market was easing because of increased supplies.

The demise of John Senger, who was one of the oldest florists in Chicago, is recorded in the obituary column this week.

J. A. Budlong is having built one of the largest ice-boxes in the market, to occupy the north end of their new store, being erected for Fred Stielow, at Niles Center, is a feature quite new to greenhouse building. This is a cast-iron foot piece for posts that is two feet six inches long, the upper six inches projecting above the ground like a sleeve surrounding the base of the supports. It is claimed by the Geo. M. Garland Co., the patentees, that it will practically entirely prevent the corrosion and rust that so frequently cause steel supports to break off at the base.

Kroeschell Bros. Co. is sending a car loaded with boilers, piping, grates, etc., for exhibition at the Boston show. Mr. Lautenschlager says the demand for the new piping system has been unusually heavy this spring.

The American Metal Box Co., 31 Dearborn street, has taken over the line of Illinois self-watering flower boxes formerly manufactured by the Illinois Heater & Mfg. Co., and has added a large number of novelties in brass and copper fern dishes, concrete vases, brass jardinières and show window display pieces for florists' use.

"Isn't this basket with the flowers just dear? The arrangement is so pretty." As she spoke, the lady picked up one of the new Easter baskets, which Mr. Bruns had purchased from the Raedlein Basket Co. and filled with tulips. It had a place in his display window and the remark goes to show how much an attractive basket helps in displaying plants or flowers. So great has been the demand for artistic baskets, that the Raedlein company has found it necessary to take additional warehouse space a few doors south of their store at 717 Milwaukee avenue. The Rising Eastern Market.

The cut flower market is in a state of lenten dullness. There is plenty of stock, without any superabundance. Prices are fair; business is light. Thursday, March 9, was as dull as either of its predecessors. Friday saw a decided improvement, while Saturday was also fairly active, although there was nothing approaching a clean-up. Monday, March 13, was brisk in the morning and quieter in the afternoon. The two following days resembled those of the week before. St. Patrick's day livened the demand for white carnations, giving them a badly needed support that made prices firmer, even advancing them slightly. Prices have reached a point where the street merchants are willing to buy flowers that lack support from the florists. Carnations and violets are their favorites just now, though short roses and odd lots of anything cheap attract them.

Generally speaking, the best flowers sell best at good prices for the season, but there are times when good stock lacks support. Beauties, the strongest flower of a week ago, have dropped in price. The other leading flowers have changed little, except that the same quality averages less.

Speculation in Glass.

It used to be a common failing among our florists who had made a little money by hard work to speculate in stocks. This vice was quite general in a small way a score of years ago. About that time one of our principal florists, who went in a little more rashly and a little less fortunately than his fellows, suddenly disappeared from view. The place where he had prospered knew him no more. It was whispered, "Stocks." Robert Craig epitomized the situation by remarking: "A few bright men make money in the stock market; everybody else loses."

Since then the stock gambling vice has been less prevalent among our florists. The wholesalers and retailers derive enough excitement from the ups and downs from a market admitted to fluctuate more wildly than even the stock market. The growers, however, in these days of consignments hardly get enough excitement from reading their returns and watching the thermometer; with them speculation in glass has succeeded speculation in stocks. It is a wholly proper and oftentimes profitable pastime. The ability to indulge in this amusement is limited by the success of the individual. A florist who has had a good year buys 100 boxes or even 200 or 300, unless he be a Poehlmann or a Reinberg, when his wants are measured by carloads. Purchases of this size are more frequent in the west, with its wonderful railroad facilities, than in the east, though this season the purchases in both sections have been large.

Considerable surprise was created in the Philadelphia market about a week ago, when Patrick Joseph Lynch dropped in on the P. M. Co. In the course of conversation with Samuel S. Pennock, Mr. Lynch, as though searching mentally for something that interested his hearer, remarked that glass was so cheap that he could not resist a little flyer of five and a half carloads. Mr. Pennock, who knows the value of glass from top to bottom, was startled and to make sure that his caller was in earnest asked what was to be done with the five and a half carloads. But Mr. Lynch had not made up his mind; he just had it in reserve to use when it became necessary, to furnish a few more hundred thousands of the dollar-a-dozen rose plants in New Castle or from West Grove.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. are having a tremendous season, working their large force overtime to keep pace with their orders.

Mrs. Sarah I. Smith, of Secane, was the only lady florist in the Riverview trip.

Charles I. Kent, Jr., retails most of the product of his Secane greenhouses at his West Philadelphia flower shop. Mr. Kent's grandfather was a florist in this city fifty years ago. Phil.

Aschmann Bros. say they are well pleased with the condition of their stock and the prospect for Easter business.

CLEVELAND.

The Cleveland Florists' Club wishes to announce a lower fare to Boston than that originally stated. The fare on the certificate plan will be $14.20 going and $8.52 returning—a fare and three-fifths for the round trip. Be sure to notify the undersigned at once to reserve your berth and don't fail to ask for your certificate when buying your ticket.

ALBANY, N. Y.

About seventy-five members of the Albany Florists' Club and their invited guests, including Prof. John A. Howe, James J. Karins, of Philadelphia, and Winfried Rolker, of New York city, attended the annual banquet of the club, held in Donovan's hall, on Western avenue. A short business meeting was held early in the evening and at 8:30 o'clock the large dining room was thrown open. President Fred A. Danker made a short speech, in which he welcomed the guests and members, and then turned the chair over to Toastmaster John C. McAllister, who kept things moving every minute.

Prof. Howe made the principal speech of the evening and gave strong expression to the sentiment that "a man who loves flowers is pretty near being all right all the way through. Lovers of flowers are as a general rule lovers of animals and children and receive in return their trust and love." He then said he was sorry for preach-

SEFTON CORRUGATED SHIPPING CASES

STRONG, LIGHT AND CONVENIENT

WHY use heavy wooden Boxes for Shipments of Flowers and Plants when you can get a box better adapted to your needs, weighing about one-half as much?

Our Boxes are made to fold flat; thus insuring economy in storage space and enables the commission merchant to knock them down and return them in bundles, reducing return charges—they can be used over and over.

Our Patented K. D. Tin Corner is the only satisfactory K.D. corner ever adapted to a Corrugated Shipping Case. It gives you a perfectly flat box. Costs no more than set up corners.

ing and, branching off in a jolly vein, gave a number of recitations, which were received with shouts of laughter. Matt McCarthy, the amateur minstrel, sang songs and told funny stories for nearly a half hour.

A. N. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn., sent to the exhibition four of his new roses. F. Dorner & Sons Co., of Lafayette, Ind., sent a new white and a new light pink carnation. The Wa-no-ka Greenhouses, Barneveld, N. Y., sent on a new variegated carnation. Other choice exhibits were made by F. A. Danker, Fred Goldring and others, of this city.

DAYTON, OHIO.The Market.

A good thing is apt to spoil, and so it is with the condition of trade, which ever since the holidays has been a continual boom. Business last week was the slowest it has been in some time. There was only a slight demand for funeral work, and what there was consisted of small orders in the spray line. During the greater part of the week the weather was bright and kept stock coming along flourishingly. Lilies seem to be still the heaviest crop, and the most difficult one to dispose of. While carnations are coming in abundantly, at the same time in some way they disappear. Roses are coming along finely; cuts are keeping the demand well supplied, but if the warm weather continues there will be an extra heavy crop on in a few days. Long-stemmed stock predominates. Beauties in the long-stemmed grade cannot be had for love or money.

Club Meeting.

The Dayton Florists' Club held an enthusiastic meeting March 6 at the J. F. Young establishment on East Fifth street, nearly every member being present. The annual election of officers was held, with the following results: President, E. C. Mittman; vice-president, Arthur E. Schmidt; secretary, Horace M. Frank, reelected; treasurer, George Bartholomew, reelected. Steps were taken to increase the interest of the members in the club. A. E. Schmidt was appointed as chairman of the social committee; E. E. Schaefer, chairman of press committee, and Mrs. J. F. Young and Mrs. Bertha Hendrichs on the sick committee. The next meeting of the club will be a social affair at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Young.

Mrs. Bertha Hendrichs is on the sick list. Arno Hendrichs has returned

Six Pages of Retailers' Cards

This department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand. If you are the only florist in your city represented here, you get the orders coming into your territory from other florists. If you are not represented and "the other fellow" is—we can leave it to you what becomes of these desirable orders.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

The Market.

Roses are not plentiful. American Beauties are scarce and tea roses are off crop, not yielding enough to meet the demand. Though a few of the local growers are cutting fair stock, the bulk of the roses are shipped in from Chicago. Carnations are plentiful. The department stores make a run on carnations every Saturday at 2 cents each and hold our retail stores down for one day, at least, every week. Daffodils were advertised at 1 cent. Violets are plentiful and meet with a good demand. They are mostly home-grown and are all single varieties.

Blooming plants are plentiful in almost every variety. All potted plants sell well. They are frequently used as birthday presents, especially among the Jewish people. Dutch hyacinths are fine and sell well. Easter lilies are scarce, but the florists are hurrying them along for Easter, as some are rather behind on them. Sweet peas are most plentiful. Some of the truck growers are selling them as low as 20 cents per hundred.

Various Notes.

At the greenhouses of the W. L. Rock Flower Co., the carnations are in full bloom. Their sweet peas are fine and great preparations are being made to get them ready for Easter. They have a large stock of rambler roses in all sizes and shapes, in bud and some in full bloom. Their large stock of Easter lilies seemed a little backward, but Mr. Hite says he will have them in time. They also had a fine batch of cyclamens in full bloom and spiræas in excellent shape.

Their cutting bench was full of carnations. The palm house is in excellent shape, with some fine specimen plants. The orchids are doing well and some fine varieties are in full bloom. They have had good success this year with single violets, which are in full crop. They have some extra large azaleas that were kept over from last year, which are in full bud; these were about the finest we have seen. They were summered under a grove of trees near the lake and will be on time for Easter. The roses were partly off crop, but with nice weather they will be on hand with a large cut soon.

Nelson Jarret has his greenhouses in the best shape he ever had them. He had ferns by the thousands, begonias in full bloom in all shades—a sight well worth seeing. There was not one foot of space idle. Baskets were hung on all the posts. Rex begonias were under the benches, like cabbages. One house devoted to bedding plants is full to overflowing. Pansies in the coldframes are beginning to bloom. He also grows tomato plants for sale and does an immense business. His location is fine.

W. H. Sawvel is cutting some fine lettuce. Large preparations are now being made to plant ten houses to cut flowers this summer. Seven houses are to be planted to carnations and three to roses, such as Killarney, White Killarney, Richmond and Bridesmaid.

Arthur Newell reports excellent business and is looking forward to a heavy Easter trade.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

Last week showed no change in the local conditions. There is plenty of everything and the great desire now is to hold back the blooming stock for the Easter season. Prices rule about normal and funeral work keeps things just busy enough to avert stagnation. With the conclusion of the Easter period, everybody will turn his attention to the spring work, of which there is an unusual amount planned in this vicinity.

Seed Trade News.AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., E. L. Page, Greene, N. Y.; First Vice-pres., L. H. Vaughan, Chicago; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. Twenty-ninth annual meeting, June 20 to 22, 1911.

THE middle of March finds the mail order seed trade about as busy as it is possible to be—but orders are not stacking up.

THE demise of Heman Glass, once well known in the seed trade at Rochester, N. Y., is recorded in this week's obituary column.

C. R. Root, of the Barteldes Seed Co., has been appointed chairman of the agricultural committee of the Denver Chamber of Commerce.

WHILE Congress was appropriating $1,025,489,662 at the last session, the $289,680 for free seeds probably appeared a mere bagatelle.

A. B. Dicks, of Cooper, Taber & Co., who is widely known to American seedsmen through his many trips to this country, is reported seriously ill at his home in England.

CALIFORNIA seed growers, who had no rain at all until weeks after it was due, have since had as much too much as they formerly had too little. Floods have succeeded the drought.

E. W. King, of E. W. King & Co., Coggeshall, England, intends to visit the California seed growers in June. King & Co., are large growers of seeds, but are perhaps best known as sweet pea growers.

THE Rocky Ford Seed Growers' Association, of Rocky Ford, Colo., has announced that it will grow this year 400 acres each of cucumber and cantaloupe, 500 acres of squash and 100 acres of pumpkin.

THROUGH the season of 1910 the Livingston Seed Co., Columbus, O., published "Livingston's Seasonable Garden Suggestions," an eight-pages and cover pamphlet edited by Adolph Kruhm, the advertising manager. So successful were the "Suggestions" that the first number of the second volume is being distributed. It has a sweet pea cover, but treats on a variety of other subjects.

PAGE HAS TROUBLE.

Charles N. Page, of the Iowa Seed Co., Des Moines, has had trouble in getting his catalogues into Canada, the Canadian postal authorities in some ina pound and amounts to about 8 cents on each catalogue, which is too much for us to pay. There are many American farmers in Canada who want to use American seeds and these are denied them because of the stringent postal and revenue laws governing the admission of catalogues into Canada."

Mr. Page declares if the reciprocity treaty passes that the seedsmen of the country will use their influence to have the law governing the admission of seed catalogues changed. Under the reciprocity agreement, seeds will be free, when both countries act favorably on the treaty.

Mr. Page consummated what he thinks is the biggest deal in one variety of seed ever made west of the Mississippi when he purchased five carloads of red clover seed. The seed was all purchased from one man in eastern Iowa. The first carload arrived in Des Moines March 9, and in payment for it Mr. Page drew a check for $6,600. The seed was raised in eastern Iowa by a number of farmers, and following the harvest last fall, one of them bought the entire crop of all the others, holding it for an increase in price. He refused to sell it in small quantities. The amount of the transaction will be more than $20,000.

THE GERMAN SEED TRADE.

In the Quedlinburg district of Germany the winter has been unusually mild, the growing seed crops, flowers as well as vegetables, looking well and being farther advanced than usual at this season. The seed trade of the district extends itself over practically the entire world and has had a satisfactory business in the season now closing. Unusually high prices are ruling for peas, carrots and onions. Parsley, parsnip, spinach and rhubarb did not nearly equal the demand. The brassicas, celery, lettuce and radishes with few exceptions will suffice for the demand. Turnips will suffice for the call. Flower seeds have met with a larger call than usual and many of the chief varieties have sold out.

In the Erfurt district trade has been brisk and would have been larger if some of the important articles had not been in short supply. The crop of garden peas in 1910 was the worst on record here and was quickly sold. The call for garden beet from America was not as large as usual, but stocks were well cleared out, Egyptian Turnip-rooted being early exhausted. Parsley, parsnips, carrots and celery were early exhausted, but of radish and spinach there were enough. Both garden and field turnips sold well. The export trade on flower seeds was satisfactory. Asters sold well and such sorts as Hohenzollern have run short. Stocks were a light crop and would have war-

W. & K.—The Sign of Quality

It is indeed a pleasure to this office to know that the many readers of The Review are not only endorsing but heartily supporting the new enterprise of dealing direct with the best firm and growers of Dutch bulbs through this United States Branch house.

Fall in line, gentle reader. If you have not received our catalogue write for same at once and let us supply you with your Spring and Fall delivery of bulbs and roots.

If our varieties were stated in this paper they would at least cover half the edition. Our supply is unlimited, but would advise that you mail your order in as soon as possible. Thank you.

DREER'S
"Peerless Pink"
 BRANCHING ASTER

Dreer's Superb Strains of the Best Asters

Our stocks of the following Asters are grown under our own supervision and we are quite sure that nothing finer in quality can be had at any price from any source. Our yearly increasing sales are the best evidence that they give complete satisfaction.

DREER'S "PEERLESS PINK"

A magnificent new variety which may briefly be described as an improved late-branching shell-pink. Flowers of largest size, of rich shell-pink, borne on long, strong stems, making them one of the finest for cutting. 50 cents per trade packet; $4.00 per ounce.

DREER'S SUPERB LATE-BRANCHING

The finest of all September-blooming Asters. Our stock has been re-selected for a number of years and is now as perfect as the most painstaking care can make it. We offer the following eight distinct colors:

Azure Blue or deep lavender	Deep Purple
Pale Lavender	Rose-pink
Deep Crimson	Shell-pink
Deep Rose	Pure White

Any of the above, 25 cents per trade packet; $1.00 per ounce. Finest mixed, all colors, 25 cents per trade packet; 75 cents per ounce.

CREGO'S GIANT COMET

The perfection of Comet Asters, immense fluffy flowers, five inches and over across, borne on long, strong stems, coming into bloom in August, continuing through September. We offer pure white and shell-pink, 40 cents per trade packet; $2.00 per ounce.

The above are but a few of the many Asters which we offer. For a complete list see pages 2 and 3 of our current wholesale price list. If you do not have a copy we will be pleased to send one to any Florist on application. New crop seeds of almost all kinds are now in stock, and early orders from the trade are solicited.

DAYBREAK

A fine mid-season Aster of symmetrical growth, 18 inches high, with good-sized, densely double soft pink flowers. 50 cents per trade packet; $2.50 per ounce.

VIOLET KING

A fine late-branching variety of exceptionally free growth, bearing very large double flowers of a pleasing shade of soft violet. 30 cents per trade packet; $1.50 per ounce.

EARLY WONDER

The earliest of all Asters, blooming at the end of June; flowers of good size on good stems and valuable where early flowers are desired. We offer pure white and pink, 40 cents per trade packet; $2.00 per ounce.

QUEEN OF THE MARKET

An early-flowering, first-class Aster, coming into bloom in July, lasting well through August; flowers of large size on long, strong stems. A good variety for growing under glass. We can supply in the following six desirable colors:

Pink	Bright Rose
Purple	Crimson
White	Lavender

anted higher prices. The annuals had met with a good average demand, but in view of conditions elsewhere it is interesting to note that sweet peas hardly had the call that was expected. Practically all the greenhouse grown seeds have been cleaned up. The semperflorens type of begonia is coming into greater demand each year. In this district the winter has been mild, but changeable. Biennial crops are thus far in good shape, but there is time for plenty of snow yet, it being proverbial that a black Christmas brings a white Easter.

THE ANGLO-AMERICAN TRADE.

There can be no mistaking the signs of the times in regard to the increasing horticultural trade between Great Britain and America. We have several times drawn attention prominently to this matter. The leading business firms in England are paying more and more attention to American orders, and are sending their agents there with increasing frequency. An educational party visited a portion of the States last year, and this year a party of no fewer than twelve, and possibly several beyond that figure, is about to make an American trip lasting over several weeks. These tokens portend reciprocity in business, for the visiting is not one-sided: the Americans come over here in numbers, although not as yet in the coöperative party arrangement. One English chrysanthemum grower who has arranged for the dispersion of his novelties in America by means of an agent in that country, is jubilant at the success attending his efforts, and the well-known Reading seed firm finds such a demand from the rich owners of gardens in the U. S. A. that it has issued a special American catalogue this year. Our English growers, one and all, might do well, therefore, to adopt Sir Walter Scott's motto, "Watch weel."—Journal of Horticulture.

Kills Weeds in 48 Hours

Ammoniated Lawn Lime, a light top dressing for lawns, does it. Kills flat-leaved weeds, such as Dandelion, Daisy, Plantain, Sorrel, Chickweed, Moss, etc., in 48 hours.

Saves time and labor weeding lawns.

Is far superior to hand weeding, because it kills the weeds, making the pulling up or injuring the grass unnecessary. This wonderful compound will kill the weeds without injury to the grass, when used as directed. If very weedy, 1 lb. to 40 square feet; 25 lbs. to 1000 square feet (20x50). Half to one-quarter amount if moderately weedy.

AMMONIATED LAWN LIME

Makes Grass Grow. Insures a New, Vigorous Growth.

Produces a lawn grass that is wonderfully luxuriant, and a rich green distinctly noticeable.

Ammoniated Lawn Lime is now in general use throughout the country, with results so satisfactory as to insure repeated orders from a single trial. It is guaranteed as represented.

Special Trial Offer

To Superintendents of Cemeteries, Parks or Private Estates. Write for particulars.

TORONTO.

The Market.

Preparations made for St. Patrick's day indicated confidence in a good trade in novelties for this day. Trade is normal, with stock arriving in good condition and plentifully, with the exception of white roses and carnations. Easter stock is coming along well in the greenhouses and, if nothing unforeseen happens, everything will be plentiful.

Various Notes.

Frank Smith, formerly of J. H. Dunlop's, but now manager of the Connon Floral Co. store in Hamilton, Ont., was married March 15. His bride was Miss May Richardson, of this city.

Another of Toronto's old florists passed away March 12 in the person of Henry J. Allan. Mr. Allan was 57 years of age and is survived by three sons and one daughter.

J. H. Dunlop is progressing favorably towards recovery from his recent illness.

George M. Geraghty leaves March 24 for the flower show in Boston.

J. S. Simmons reports a good trade in all lines. E. A. F.

PROFITS FROM VEGETABLES.

A gentleman with some capital wants to build greenhouses for growing tomatoes, cucumbers and other vegetables, and he has applied to me for loose estimates of what a house 50x250 feet would bring if planted with tomatoes; also what a house 12x250 would bring if planted with cucumbers. He wants to know what would be the probable expenses and profits on such stock in this Missouri city, under favorable conditions and good management. T. N.

I regret that I am unable to give the desired figures. Perhaps some subscriber who has about that area of glass will be kind enough to write, stating what his expenses and returns are for a season. It is a difficult problem to figure out, as no two seasons run alike and no two growers get the same results.

A beginner is sometimes just as successful as older growers, but should not expect to get as large a profit as those of longer experience, unless thoroughly experienced help is employed and not too much of it. H. G.

YOUNG LETTUCE ROTTING.

I am writing to you for the purpose of finding out whether there is any remedy for rot of small lettuce. I have never before been bothered in this way with lettuce of this size; the plants only partly cover the ground, the leaves hardly touching. The lower leaves get soft first; then the whole plant withers or wilts down. I have kept the houses cool and dry and have also kept the lower leaves trimmed off as well as I could. Could I possibly have kept them too cool and dry? I used pulverized sheep manure at the rate of ten pounds to 100 square feet for this crop. Would this affect it? The ground was only fairly rich when I put the soil in last fall. I raked the sheep manure in to a depth of two or three inches. Would it have been better to spade it under six inches? B. A. B.

The sheep manure should have been turned under so that none of it would be left on top of the soil—not buried too deeply, but just nicely covered. If left on top, it makes a food for fungus to grow on, which spreads over the surface of the soil on any particles of decayed leaves, manure, etc., and in that way reaches the plants. When you water, place the hose between the plants and avoid wetting the foliage. I believe, however, that you understand the importance of not overwatering and of keeping ventilation on at all times. The soil should be just moist, not dry and not muddy.—If your entire crop is affected, you may have to replant it. If so, turn the soil over first. Air-slaked lime, scattered over the surface of the soil, will help to prevent the spread of the fungus, if it is only in spots. H. G.

Tarentum, Pa.—The McWilliams Floral Co. has been exceedingly busy of late, getting the new range of greenhouses well stocked for the spring trade.

To make money you have to spend. To grow a crop of Easter Lilies you have to plant bulbs. Here's where you plunge. It's a bet on the bulbs against the eternal cussedness of things. It's you against the chances of a crop. And YOU HAVE NO CHANCE AT ALL UNLESS YOU HAVE GOOD BULBS. Then you must treat them properly; and taboo the green fly, or they will be a fizzle. So the positive requirements are, first, good bulbs and then good treatment. Good bulbs you can get from us—the Horseshoe Brand. With them you will make more money per square foot of space than with any brand known, under the same conditions. Write us.

YONKERS, N. Y.

The March meeting of the Yonkers Horticultural Society was largely attended. Robert Henry was elected an active member, shows were discussed, and it was decided that the fall exhibition be so arranged that the date will not clash with other shows in the New York district. A committee was appointed to arrange for a clam bake, the date to be decided later.

R. Cochrane's prize brought out quite an array of exhibits. Messrs. Wright, Hoffman and Hebach were appointed judges, and reported as follows:

Lilium Harrisii Jamesii, first, finely shown by A. Herrington, superintendent for S. Untermeyer.

Violet Princess of Wales, second, of excellent quality, from H. Nichols, superintendent for W. B. Trevor.

Gardenias from the Lilienthal estate, H. Scott superintendent, received honorable mention.

The new white carnation, White House, showing splendid quality, was exhibited by C. H. Totty, of Madison, N. J. H. M. B.

PACIFIC COAST.

Oakland, Cal.—The business conducted by Sandkuhle & Carlson since 1906 will hereafter be run by the same owners under the name of the Sunset Nursery Co.

McMinnville, Ore.—Herbert & Fleishauer say that the bright sunshine is bringing flowers in rapidly and of fine quality. February was an unusually active month, with a heavy run of funeral work, and March started off with a rush of business, so they still are having need for everything they can cut.

SPOKANE, WASH.

H. M. Sanders is planning to make extensive improvements and enlargements of his greenhouses at Elk, Wash. Mr. Sanders has been in the flower business, both wholesale and retail, for a number of years. His jobbing business has grown to such an extent that it requires all his attention and he has consequently sold his retail business, at 722 Riverside avenue, to C. T. Kipp, of the Spokane Florist Co.

The store at present occupied by the Spokane Florist Co. adjoins the newly acquired store, and Mr. Kipp will combine and rearrange the two stores in such a manner as to make one of the most artistic and attractive flower stores in the west. The Spokane Florist Co. does not grow flowers, but is in the retail business only.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The beautiful rain is still with us and, as far as appearances go, it will be the order of the day for some time to come. This, together with the fact that we are in the lenten season, makes everything quiet in the florists' realm. Flowers are not plentiful, by any means, nor are they liable to be for some time to come, but, barring white stock, there are plenty to go around. Funeral orders have helped the retailers wonderfully and this class of work has been well divided among the stores. With a little more sunshine we could look for a sharp decline in the prices of all kinds of stock, but as long as this dark weather continues we may expect neither lower rates nor an increase in the quantity of blossoms brought into town.

Violets are still plentiful and cheap, and these, with daffodils, are all that we are getting from outside at present. Carnations and roses are a shade stiffer in price than they usually are at this season and this can all be laid at the door of the dark weather. Fruit blossoms show the results of this also, as do the wild flowers and ferns. Valley is in supply about equal to demand and the same can be said of Easter lilies. Tulips, although not in brisk demand, move well because of the general scarcity, and the light colored varieties are finding great favor for funeral flowers.

Various Notes.

The city of Berkeley will give a flower festival May 12 to 14, under the auspices of the local Chamber of Commerce.

E. Hoffman, of Sacramento, is in town on a short visit.

The showing of cinerarias at Golden Gate park is good at present and at

The Market.

Business conditions last week were about normal. With the advent of spring flowers are becoming more plentiful, especially bulbous stock, with the exception of daffodils. The indoor stock of daffodils is depleted and the outside stock is small and slow to develop. Tulips in pans move exceptionally fast. Spiræas, astilbes and rhododendrons also move well.

Carnations are plentiful, yet not in excess, and the price standard is maintained. Callas and Easter lilies are about sufficient for the demand. Violets are plentiful, with prices on the decline. Sweet peas are in fine form and color, and move well.

Various Notes.

F. W. Winters, of Spokane, was in town arranging for shipments of plants and flowers.

G. Kloninger, of Washougal, Wash., has disposed of his business and will return to Germany to spend the rest of his days in ease.

W. C. Johnson, representing E. H. Hunt, of Chicago, is in town. He reports business quite satisfactory all along the line. E. R. C.

IN RAIN-SOAKED CALIFORNIA.

Never in the history of the nursery and plant trade in the central and northern parts of California has there been such demoralization as exists at the present time. Not that there has been any reason to suspect that the public is not willing to purchase heavily of the goods usually sold at this time or that there is any great scarcity of salable stock in the nurseries. We might easily imagine, from advance orders booked last fall, that the deliveries were to be heavy and that we were to be treated to a good season's trade. But what a disappointment we have had!

There was incessant rain for over two months, which was preceded by excessive drought for the same space of time, and the showers are still falling. An almost entire absence of cold weather, at the time we should have received it, kept stock growing up to the latest moment, and when it finally was considered late enough to dig, the dryness of the ground would not admit of handling at all. After about a month of this peculiar condition, the heavens opened, the floods came and they have been coming ever since, until it seems as if they would never stop. Already the fruit trees are showing swollen leaf buds, caused by the excess of moisture and the natural warmth of the atmosphere, and in a few weeks more, even under the best conditions for trade, the season will have so far advanced that the buying public will defer much of their planting until next season.

It must be borne in mind that in the portions of the state mentioned, planting usually commences about the first part of December and continues until the middle of March, when, on account of the early growth, it is no longer safe. The dryness during last December admitted, however, of nothing of this kind and everyone prayed for rain. About the first of this year it commenced and has been falling steadily since. As a consequence it has been impossible either to dig or plant properly, and in some of the commercial places, where many lines of stock are grown on low ground, the loss from an excess of moisture at the root has been considerable. At no time during the season was it possible to handle it properly for removing to the heeling-in ground.

From all accounts, the sales made all summer and fall by the largest nurseries have been heavy, and at good prices as well, but it is now so late that, even if we have no more rain, many will defer planting till another season. This with many lines of stock is practically ruination and the brush heap will be decorated in the spring with many unrealized hopes. The planting of young nursery stock has also been interfered with and it is doubtful whether twenty per cent of contemplated stock is in the rows. Many thousands of young seedlings, of both foreign and domestic growing, are still in the original bunches, waiting for such time as they can be planted to advantage.

In the southern portions of California the climatic conditions have been more favorable to the nurserymen and there has not been such an excess of rain, but when one section suffers, all have to contribute to a greater or less extent and this is certainly the roughest deal the trade has had in several years. In the neighborhood of San Francisco the rainfall has been almost two and one-half feet since the first of the year. Think of it! G.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

Officers for 1910-11: Pres., W. P. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Vice-pres., E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia.; Sec'y, John Hall Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., O. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-sixth annual meeting, St. Louis, June, 1911.

NEW MASSACHUSETTS LAW.

On petition of Windsor H. Wyman, president of the Massachusetts Nurserymen's Association, a bill (No. 360) has been introduced in the legislature providing for the enlargement of the duties and staff of the state inspector of nurseries. A hearing recently was held by the Committee on Agriculture, at which the slight opposition to the bill was withdrawn, following the striking out of a retaliatory clause by Mr. Wyman, who handled the nurserymen's case and himself spoke in favor of the bill. Mr. Wyman said that the nurserymen want the bill to protect themselves and the people of Massachusetts, and also to prevent the spread of the opinion that has got abroad that Massachusetts nursery stock is not so good as that from other states, due to the presence of the gypsy and brown-tail moths.

The state nursery inspector, Professor Fernald, of the State Agricultural College at Amherst, said that nine-tenths of the work, by its nature, comes between July 1 and September 30, and that he took his summer vacation for it. The inspection must be late, or it would do no good. If it came in the middle of the season the insects might get in their work afterwards. Massachusetts was almost the last state to have the inspection law, and it was forced because other states complained of the poor quality from Massachusetts. A few years ago orchardists complained that while some of them were taking care of their trees, neighbors were not, and that as fast as they cleared up insects came from others' trees and continued their evil work. As a result the legislature ordered orchard inspection and tacked that duty onto the nursery inspector and without extra pay. Much stock comes from foreign sources and the inspector's force is too small to look after it, despite the fact that the imported stock often brings pests.

When Dr. Fernald was asked about the proposed change in the law providing for the right to adopt a retaliatory policy if other states decline to accept Massachusetts stock, he referred the questioner to Secretary J. Lewis Ellsworth, of the State Board of Agriculture. Mr. Ellsworth said that if a quar-

Alfred E. Robinson said that Massachusetts and New England in general are the best places for the sale of nursery stock. There is no provision at all now for keeping out moths and other pests. There should be inspectors to look over each shipment arriving from outside the state. New York does this. It is simply a business proposition not to permit insects to be brought into a state. Not only are nurserymen importing much from abroad, but private estates have taken this up also, and all of these shipments come in entirely without inspection.

Theodore F. Borst, of South Framingham, said that unless the change is made, Massachusetts nurserymen will

THE IMPROVED CANNA

"The Canna is no longer a foliage plant only, but is now a blooming bedder, producing the most stunning color effects procurable.

To Antoine Wintzer, Vice-President The Conard & Jones Co., belongs the credit of producing the finest cannas in existence, excepting only King Humbert. His Venus was a revelation to every one who planted it, and now he has made a further record with Mrs. Alfred Conard, a lovely peach pink with petals as long as they are broad."

(From the paper by E. G. Hill before the Illinois State Florists' Association at Urbana, Feb. 9, 1911.)

This week we want to give you some pointers on—

THE BEST PINK CANNAS OF TODAY

When prominent men like E. G. Hill express themselves as above, and other prominent men have said the same thing regarding our Cannas, it seems unnecessary for us to add more.

In no color class has Mr. Wintzer with his new Hybridized Cannas made such distinct and valuable contributions as to the list of Pink Cannas. Let us call your attention to a few of the most valuable and attractive.

MRS. ALFRED F. CONARD—Its great beauty makes it worthy to bear the name of our good friend, the wife of our late President. Has vigorous habit of growth with green foliage; heads of bloom erect and abundantly furnished; the flowers have a magnificent spread to their petals, which are an exquisite shade of Peach Pink. Height, 3 feet. Orders booked for 1912.

VENUS—A veritable "self-cleaning" Canna, the old blossoms drop of themselves just as they begin to fade, so that the truss always looks bright and fresh. A beautiful gay rosy pink, with a mottled border of creamy yellow. Strong constitution, fine green foliage and always brilliant with bloom. Height, 4 feet. Price, 90c per dozen; $7.00 per 100; $60 per 1000.

WEST GROVE, IMPROVED—Rich coral pink flowers; a good bloomer, withstands rain and heat. Height, 4-1/2 feet. 75c per dozen; $4.00 per 100; $30 per 1000.

Betsy Ross—Named after the illustrious maker of the first American flag. Is one of the loveliest, sweetest and most beautiful of all pinks yet introduced. 3 ft., 75c per doz.; $5.00 per 100.

Duke of York—(4-1/2 ft.) One of the largest and blooms prodigiously. Color, pink with creamy throat and edged with a border of gold. 75c per doz.; $5.00 per 100.

Gladiolora—(3-1/2 ft.) Remarkable for the unusual shape of the flowers, which look like large Gladioli. Petals are rounded and so wide they overlap each other. Color is crimson changing to carmine rose edged with gold. $2.50 per doz.; $15.00 per 100.

We are in the market to buy Rosea Gigantea and Minnehaha, excellent pinks, of our own introduction, deserving a place in this list. You can make money on these C. & J. American Cannas.

great damage, costing thousands of dollars to handle them.

J. W. Manning, of Reading, said that Massachusetts should have the retaliatory clause in order to enable the state to fight the false impression that the nursery stock produced here is bad.

Wilfred Wheeler, of Concord, said that the problems of orchardists are largely those of insects, and if they are kept out the work will be much easier.

Charles R. Fish, of Worcester, added his request for a change in the law to those previously voiced, and told of his own experiences to show the need for state inspection. When he had finished several others spoke for the bill.

In closing the hearing President Wyman said that he would withdraw the retaliatory provision.

DUTY ON ROSA RUGOSA.

August Rolker & Sons, New York, have established the $1 per thousand customs duty as applying to Rosa rugosa under the present tariff law. Being assessed 4 cents each on an importation, they filed a protest which has just been sustained. Appraiser-General Waite said:

We think the testimony in this case fairly establishes the fact that these goods are brier roses. This board held in G. A. 4635 (T. D. 21922), that the species of rose plants known as Rosa rugosa was properly dutiable as a brier rose under the law of 1897 (par. 252). The provision for "brier rose" has been reenacted into the law of 1909 (par. 264). No appeal was ever taken from the above findings, and under well-established rules of interpretation we think it was the intention of Congress that Rosa rugosa should be dutiable as previously classified under the same language. We therefore hold these goods to be dutiable as claimed in the protest, overruling the classification of the collector.

Rolker & Sons and G. J. Johnson have been sustained in protests at the assessment of duty on evergreen seedlings.

PENNSYLVANIA Pink Boston Market

A seedling of Boston Market and Harlowarden that has been under test for the past five years and which has shown up so well under all conditions that I now feel confident it is one of the best commercial varieties and have pleasure in offering it for the first time for spring delivery 1911.

The color is a shade lighter pink than Lawson; form high built, much like Boston Market; stem long and graceful; healthy grower; blooms freely from November all through the season.

This new variety I am confident will prove a money-maker—a pink Boston Market—only much larger and better and destined to be one of the most popular commercial varieties.

Come and see it growing. I guarantee same to be in perfect health. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000

GLEN COVE, N Y.

The monthly meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held in Pembroke hall, Wednesday afternoon, March 8. President Trepess occupied the chair and there was a good attendance.

Mr. Holloway, chairman of the executive committee, gave a report of the euchre party and dance which were held in February, and these were found to have been a great success financially. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded Mr. Holloway and his colleagues for the able manner in which they had performed their duties.

Duncan Beaton was elected to active membership and there were three applications for membership.

Henry Cliffe, James Elmslie and George Gilder were appointed judges of the monthly exhibits and their decisions were as follows: The society's prize for one cineraria, A. MacKenzie; one cyclamen, A. MacKenzie; one plant of stocks, A. MacKenzie. Honorable mention to E. Marshall, for cyclamen; certificate of culture to J. Everett, for mushrooms; honorable mention to J. Everett, for vase of Bride roses; honorable mention to Pierre Andevart, for violets; honorable mention to T. Petrocia, for chicory; thanks of the society to Harry Gaut, for sweet peas; thanks of the society to Valentine Cleres, for gardenias. Henry Matz won the cup presented by "Buds," of New York city, for the best collection of bulbs in bloom.

J. Everett gave a few interesting remarks on the growing of mushrooms.

It was decided to accept the offer of 500 vases by Mrs. Bucknall. It was decided not to hold any show during the coming summer. The society's prize in April will be for twenty-five mixed carnations, calceolarias and sprays of flowering shrubs. E. W.

BRIGHT SPOT

The best dark pink carnation ever introduced. The best producer ever offered in its color.

Outclasses everything heretofore grown in the dark pink section. Won first honors in the 100 class for best dark pink at the A. C. S. meeting, Pittsburg, January, 1910, and has won many other honors.

It is a pure, bright, dark pink of even shade, size 3 1/2 inches, an early and continuous bloomer, brings fully 25 per cent more flowers to the plant than Lawson at its best; flowers well shaped on long, wiry stems; calyx does not split. It is a good shipper, and the cuttings root easy.

While with most carnations early cuttings are desirable, this is not so much the case with Bright Spot; it is such a strong grower that March cuttings make just as good and very large plants by the end of July.

Price, per 100, $12.00; 25 at 100 rate; per 1000, $100.00; 250 at 1000 rate; per 5000, $400.00.

The New Fern Nephrolepis Dreyerii. (Sport of Boston.)

The New Fern Nephrolepis Dreyerii

(SPORT OF BOSTON)

GROWN BY

G. DREYER, Elmhurst, Long Island, New York

THIS New Fern, when exhibited at the S. A. F. & O. H. Convention last August, received the following description: "Nephrolepis Dreyerii has many good points which will render it popular. It makes a quick growth, is compact, of good color, and stands considerable rough treatment, adapting itself to almost any condition. It is of the Scottii type, but not as stiff, the fronds drooping gracefully, giving the plant a very attractive appearance."

Price: 2 1/4-inch pots, per 100, $25.00; per 1000, $200.00.

MOLINE, ILL.

The last monthly meeting of the Tri-City Florists' Club was held at the greenhouses of A. Anderson, Ninth street and Eleventh avenue. As this was also the annual meeting, great interest was manifested in it, and all the members but one were present.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President—Theo. Ewoldt, of Davenport.

Vice-President—John Staack, of this city.

Treasurer—William Knees, of this city.

Secretary—John Temple, of Davenport.

Financial Secretary—Harry Bills, of Davenport.

Directors—A. Eckstrom, of this city; Ed. Patton and H. Housley, of Rock Island.

The banquet committee reported everything in readiness for the annual banquet, which will be held March 23, and will be on a larger scale than ever before. "Greenhouse Construction" was the topic for the evening's discussion, after which a fine supper was served by the host and a social hour was enjoyed.

ROCHESTER.

Bowling.

Twenty-five members of the Buffalo Florists' Club visited Rochester on Wednesday evening, March 8, the event being the return game between the Buffalo and Rochester bowling teams. The visitors were met by a delegation of local florists, including Geo. B. Hart, A. F. Vick, John Dunbar, C. H. Vick and H. B. Stringer. Dinner was served at the Odenbach Hofbrauhaus, with John Dunbar, superintendent of city parks, as master of ceremonies. The principal address was made by William F. Kasting, of Buffalo.

The bowling commenced about 9 o'clock and the Rochester boys say little about the score. Probably another game will be played in each city before the close of the season.

Carnations

WHITE HOUSE. The quality white. Won the Silver Cup at Morristown for best undisseminated variety; Bronze Medal at Pittsburg, and five other certificates. Absolutely non-bursting, clean and kind in growth and a variety that will make good. We have 10,000 for March delivery and that is all we will be in a position to supply of this variety.

PRINCESS CHARMING. The finest thing in sight in the Enchantress shade of pink. Every bud a perfect flower and your net returns per square foot will surprise you.

Our stock is limited, but we are still in a position to supply first-class, rooted cuttings of both these varieties at $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

Chrysanthemums

We catalogue over 500 varieties and surely we have the kind you want.

LENOX, MASS.

The Lenox Horticultural Society held an unusually interesting and instructive meeting on Saturday, March 4. It was presided over by President Foulsham. The attendance was large and the members were amply rewarded by hearing a practical paper on "Mushroom Culture," by W. Jack. The essayist explained all the details in the process, beginning with the preparing of the manure, and said that the failures were due, in a large degree, to the dryness of the manure when the beds are made. A good discussion followed this paper, most of the members taking part, and the essayist was accorded a hearty vote of thanks.

A. J. Loveless was awarded a certificate of merit for a fine vase of Leptosyne maritima. It is rather a pity that this beautiful annual is not more widely grown. It somewhat resembles the marguerites, having large, lemon yellow flowers, borne on long, stiff stems. It is fragrant and is valuable for cut flowers. It can be successfully grown in a temperature of 50 degrees.

George Breed was awarded a vote of thanks for a vase of Gold of Ophir roses.

The schedule for the forthcoming shows was adopted as read. One new clause was added, to the effect that none other but the society's card should be used on exhibits at the shows. The following exhibitions will be held: Annuals and perennials, July 26; fall exhibition, October 25 and 26.

The annual dinner of the society will be held at the Curtis hotel, April 18. James Clifford, chairman of the annual ball committee, reported that it had been one of the most successful held by the society, financially and otherwise. The committee is to be congratulated upon the success attending its efforts. Rose and carnation night will be Saturday, March 18, and competition in the various classes will undoubtedly be seen.

The society is forging ahead, having elected thirteen active members and three life members since the new year. Quite a large delegation will attend the National Flower Show at Boston.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

The quality of cut flowers coming to town this week has never been excelled at this season of the year. It really seems that by far the largest proportion of many varieties of stock has moved into the special class. The demand is still unequal to the supply, but additional shipping orders have given a better tone to the market.

Carnations continue to be the weakest flower on the list and the buyers who can take a quantity secure far better than the listed quotations. Pink and white are mostly in demand, but there were days on which reds were in demand. Roses of every variety are of excellent quality and more than enough to go around, except occasionally in the fancy grades.

The supply of bulbous stock is now at its height. The jonquils, of which large shipments are being received from the south, are selling for 10 cents per dozen. Tulips in every color are moving well. Sweet peas are wonderfully fine; white, pink and lavender ones are obtainable in any quantity and are really the only flowers which are in steady demand. Violets are everywhere and the demand is heavy, but at exceptionally low prices for extra good stock.

Various Notes.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club held its annual election of officers March 12, and the business meeting was followed by a banquet.

The Washington ladies' bowling team bowled several games with the Baltimore ladies' team on the afternoon of March 12, at the Garage alleys. This was followed by a theater party at night.

The building fever is on in earnest around Baltimore and there are prospects of a banner year for greenhouse construction, largely on account of the low price of glass. About forty houses will be built here.

R. A. Vincent will entertain a number of English horticulturists at his nurseries. They will also visit Washington on their way to the National Flower Show at Boston.

A large number of Baltimore florists are planning a trip to the National Flower Show. Q.

New Marguerite Mrs. F. Sander

NEW MARGUERITE, MRS. F. SANDER.

The most valuable flowering pot plant which has been offered to the trade since the introduction of the Lorraine Begonia.

In this we have unquestionably the most important flowering plant introduced in recent years, which, like its predecessors, the French Marguerite and the later introductions, white and blush Queen Alexandra, will be grown extensively for cut flowers during the winter, while its pure white color will make it more valuable than any as a pot plant for Easter decorations.

Unlike all other Marguerites, its color is of the purest glistening white throughout; in size it frequently measures 5 inches across; the center of the flower is a mass of closely arranged fringed florets; these are surrounded or edged by the broad, shining white ray petals, forming a flower which reminds one forcibly of a glorified double Pyrethrum. These are produced on long stems with a freedom not known in other varieties of the Marguerite.

The entire stock of this grand novelty has been placed in our hands for American distribution and we are now booking orders for delivery the latter part of April or early in May:

Good 2 1/4-in. pots, $2.00 per doz.; $15.00 per 100.

The above prices are intended for the trade only.

FINE FERNS

Ready For Immediate Retail Sale

We have an exceptionally fine and large stock of Ferns in the following varieties—first-class plants of exceedingly good value—plants that will please the most critical buyers, both in regard to quality and value.

Nephrolepis Elegantissima (improved). The finest of this type—never showing a Boston frond; has not reverted in the last four years. Fine plants, 4-in. pots, $2.50 per doz.; 6-in., $6.00 per doz.; 8-in., $12.00 per doz.; large specimens in 12-in. pans, $3.00 to $5.00 each.

Nephrolepis Elegantissima Compacta. This bears the same relation to Elegantissima that Scottii does to Bostoniensis. It is a dwarf, compact plant, especially fine in the small sizes. Fine plants, 4-in. pots, $3.00 per doz.; 6-in., $6.00 per doz.

Nephrolepis Scholzei. Fine plants, 8½-in. pots, $2.50 per doz.; 6-in. pans, $6.00 per doz.; 8-in. pans, $12.00 per doz.

Nephrolepis Bostoniensis. Extra strong plants, 8-in. pans, $12.00 per doz.

Nephrolepis Scottii. 8-in. pans, $12.00 per doz.

Small Ferns for Fern Pans. Best and hardiest varieties, assorted: Pteris Mayii, Wimsettii, Adiantoides, Aspidium Tausseimense, Cyrtomium Falcatum, etc. Strong plants, 2¼-in. pots, $3.50 per 100.

CROTONS. Nice assortment, well colored, 5-in., $9.00 per dozen.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Trade has been rather uncertain for the last two weeks. One day is busy and the next quiet. Flowers are plentiful, spring bulb stock is coming in large quantities and most of it is consumed daily. Roses and carnations are of good quality, but Beauties are still poor. Sweet peas, valley, lilies, lilacs, orchids and daisies find a good market.

Various Notes.

Herman Junge and Carl Sonnenschmidt were visitors at Richmond last week, as Smith & Young are going to add some glass this year and they were inspecting the E. G. Hill Co. plant.

Reinhold Schilling, lately with John Rieman, is back at the old stand at the New York store.

Wm. Smith, with the Roepke-Rieman Co., has received an offer from an eastern baseball team to catch for them this year.

Geo. Gause, of Richmond; J. E. A. Haugh, of Anderson; Nixon Gano, of Martinsville; E. J. Brown, of Shelbyville, and Mr. Humfeld, of Muncie, were visitors in the city last week.

Will Roepke has plans ready for a new residence, to be built in the neighborhood of their greenhouses.

E. E. Temperly has been in the hospital for the last week suffering with appendicitis.

Adolph Baur, Pahud Floral Co., A. Wiegand & Sons, the Smith & Young Co., and Bertermann Bros. have been investing in glass lately.

L. F. Benson has purchased an auto for delivery purposes.

The smiling face of Mr. Farney, with M. Rice & Co., was seen in the city last week. Mr. Farney reports business good.

Among the local florists who have signified their intention of attending the National Flower Show are Adolph Baur, John Bertermann, Irwin Bertermann, Henry Rieman and Harry Rieman.

Baur & Smith have announced their intention to dissolve partnership in June. Adolph Baur is to take the new place and Sidney Smith is going to resume operations at the old place. Good luck to both.

Henry Rieman has been putting up some cement benches of his own construction. Mr. Rieman thinks them a big improvement and expects to finally equip his whole place with them.

Carl Groener, formerly with A. Wiegand & Sons, leaves this week for Portland, Ore.

From our old friend, Godfrey Aschmann, of Philadelphia, of course. He was our man of the past and he shall be our man this Easter, and, as long as he ships us good plants, he shall be our man in the future. He always treated us right before, and we can rely upon him. What he advertises is true and is no bluff.

What Florists Say About Our Lilies

Daily visitors to our establishment, among them two well known growers, one from Cincinnati, Ohio, the other from South Orange, N. J., say: "You have the best lilies we ever have seen on our visits to many florists' establishments. We congratulate you. You certainly can be proud."

An immense stock of choice Easter plants, blooming Easter week, or earlier, if desired, are now ready for immediate shipment. Come yourself or mail your order direct to headquarters.

Our reputation in growing Easter plants for the wholesale market, to which we ship all over the entire country, Canada and Mexico, from the Atlantic to the Pacific oceans, for many years past, is sufficient guarantee to prove our ability.

Lilies to burn, to burn, to beat the band

Easter Lilies, Lilium multiflorum, the genuine Japanese Easter Lily, directly imported by us. We have a friend in Japan who looks after our interests there. He picks out for us only the good, healthy ones, and marks them while they are growing, the 10-in. bulbs, and therefore he ships to us the cream of the plants of Japan. We have lilies this year to burn; can supply, if nothing happens, every customer and others who want lilies. If you see them growing in our greenhouses you must all admit they are "crack-erjacks." We sell them cheap, too. Where other florists get 15c per bud, we only charge you 10c per bud, for plants in 6-in. pots, having 5, 8, 10 and more buds to the plant. Plants under 5 buds, 12c per bud, 6-in. pots.

Spiraea Gladstone for Easter

What is a Home? What is a Store? What is a Church? What is an Easter present without having a few plants of the so much admired and so greatly in demand Spiraea Gladstone? Oh, those charming sprays of beautiful pure white flowers! And the foliage, too, with its waxy, deep green color is a jewel in itself. Mixed with beautiful lilies and other blooming plants it will complete the flower decorations for your happy, joyful Easter of 1911. Knowing the great demand for this plant the past Easters, when not half our customers could be supplied, we are well prepared this year for the rush and were fortunate, in spite of the scarcity last fall in Holland when other florists' supplies were cut short by Holland growers, in obtaining enough of the bulbs to fill two houses and we are able to supply all incoming orders promptly; 5½, 6 to 7-in. pots, full of buds and flowers, and some are as big as a wash tub, 25c, 35c, 50c, 75c and $1.00 each; dozen or more the same.

Go to Headquarters for Azaleas

Azalea Indica is a specialty with us, grown for us under contract by an Azalea specialist in Belgium for the last twenty years. Have four houses full of the choicest. Only best well-known American varieties are imported, and are now in excellent condition, covered with buds, just right for Easter. We ship only good stock, full of buds and flowers.

What is the name of the best double pink azalea? Mme. Van der Cruyssen is the name, originated by the well-known azalea specialist Mr. Van der Cruyssen of Belgium. Millions are raised every year and shipped to every point of the globe from Belgium. We have a big stock on hand of this so well-known and favorite variety in tip top condition. Every plant is as round as an apple, covered with buds, just right for Easter trade. 6 to 7-in. pots, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each.

Deutsche Perle. This is the best pure double white, 6-in. pots, 75c, $1.00 to $1.50. Outside the Deutsche Perle we have no white to offer in small sizes, because the other varieties, Niobe and Bernard Andrea alba, of which we had a large stock, during transportation across the sea and during winter lost all their buds and have to be carried over for another year.

Bernard Andrea alba (white). We have mostly big plants, $1.50, $2.00 to $3.00 each; a few smaller sizes, 75c, $1.00 to $1.25; Niobe, also white, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each. Verveeniana, De Schryveriana (double variegated), 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $2.00 to $2.50.

Professeur Wolters, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. Pes. Oswald de Kerchove, $1.00, $1.25 to $2.00. Empress of India, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00. Apollo (red), 50c, 60c, 75c to $1.00. Other good varieties, such as Helene Thelemann, etc., 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00. When we are out of one color, we send the next similar color; also, if we are out of the size ordered, we send the next size either above or below the price mentioned.

Hydrangea Otaksa never was as good as this year, green as grass, full of buds, every branch stocked up. 5½, 6 to 7-in. pots, 25c, 35c, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50.

Murillo Tulips, double, pinkish pearl, valued very highly as a pot tulip, 3 bulbs in a 4-in. pot, $1.80 per dozen pots; $14.00 per 100.

Tournesol Tulips, best double tulips, variegated, three bulbs in a 4-in. pot, $1.80 per dozen pots; $14.00 per 100.

Primula Obconica. 5-in., $2.00 to $2.50 per dozen.

Cinerarias for Easter

Readers, just a second! I wish to call your attention to a house full of Cineraria Hybrida Grandiflora for Easter, which has no equal. If you are not fortunate enough to see them growing in our establishment, then just imagine yourself in Paradise, a flower garden in Eden, your eyes feasting on a mass of flowers of many various high colors. This is the condition of our Cineraria house at Easter time, with our new improved strain, with many thousands 6-in. pot plants of medium tall sizes; some of the plants having immense heads of flowers, twice as big as those of the ordinary varieties, the plants being as big as a bushel basket; 6-in. pots, 25c, 35c, 50c, 75c and $1.00 each.

Ipomoea Noctiflora, purest white moonflower, for which we have a world-wide reputation, now ready, 2½-in. pots, $5.00 per 100.

Hyacinths, four best colors, King of the Blues (dark blue), Grand Maitre (light blue), Gertrude (best pink), La Grandesse (best white), right for Easter, in cold frame, 4-in. pots, 10c to 12c.

Crimson Rambler, nicely staked up, 30, 36, 40, 50 inches high, 50c, 75c, $1.00 to $1.50.

Daffodil Von Sion, double-nosed bulbs. This is the best double yellow narcissus in existence. 5½ to 6-in. pots, 3 bulbs in one pot, $2.50 to $3.00 per dozen pots.

Araucaria Robusta Compacta, Glaucous and Excelsa. Our reputation of being one of the largest importers and shippers of this beautiful evergreen decorative plant is so well known, dating far back into the 19th century, that our name, as well as the Araucaria itself, shall never die out, and is still fresh in people's minds same as when we first started. Why the Araucaria is so popular is because it is an ancient plant, kept by Greeks and Romans as a special favorite in their household, as a good omen.

Araucaria Robusta Compacta, specimen plants, spring 1910 importation, 6 to 7-in. pots, 5 years old, 3 good tiers, 20, 25 and 30 inches high, same in width, very handsome, $1.50 to $2.00 each.

Araucaria Excelsa Glaucous. This is a beautiful blue variety, very graceful and beautiful. Specimen plants, 6-in., 7-in., 8-in. pots, 4 and 5 years old, 4, 5 and 6 tiers, 20, 25, 30 and 32 in. high, same in width, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75 to $2.00 each; spring 1910 importation.

Araucaria Excelsa, 3, 4 and 5 years old, 4, 5, 6 and 7 tiers, 6-in. pots, 25, 30, 35 and 40 in. high, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each. Can meet all applications; spring 1910 importation.

Scholzeli and Whitmani ferns, 6-in., 7-in. and 8-in. pots, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50.

Boston Ferns, 5½-in., 6-in. and 7-in. pots, 40c, 50c, 75c to $1.00.

Scottii Ferns, 5½-in. to 6-in., 7-in. and 8-in. pots, 40c, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50.

Nephrolepis Glatrasii. This is a very handsome fern, resembling the Scottii, but shorter and bushier, with weeping habit, which gives it a very fine appearance and makes it valuable, 5, 5½ to 6-in. pots, 40c, 50c and 75c; small 4-in., 25c.

Ferns for dishes, 2½-in., assorted, $4.00 per 100.

Asparagus Plumosus Nanus. We have a nice lot out of the seedbed, big enough for 2½-in. pots, $15.00 per 1000. Asparagus Sprengeri, 4-in. pots, strong, 10c; 2½-in., strong, $4.00 per 100.

Kentia Forsteriana, in fine shape, 5½ to 6-in. pots, 4, 5 and 6-year-old, 30, 35, 40 and 45 inches high, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $2.00 to $2.50.

Kentia Belmoreana, 5, 6 to 7-year-old, 6 to 7-in. pots, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each.

Kentia Belmoreana, combination plants, 3 plants in 6 and 7-in. pots, 25, 30 to 35 inches high, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50 each. This is a special bargain, seldom offered.

Latania Borbonica, 6 to 7-in. pots, 30 inches high, 50c to 75c.

Cocos Weddelliana, 3-in., 15c.

Dracaena Bruanti, 6-in. pots, 25 to 30 inches high, 40c to 50c.

Begonia Rex, 3 varieties, 5½-in. pots, 20c to 25c.

We have no catalogue.

All goods must travel at purchaser's risk. Cash with order, please. Please state if you want stock shipped in or out of pots. All bulbs are now under cover in cold frame and will bloom in two weeks from time of bringing them in the greenhouse.

White Wonder 12.00 100.00
Gloriosa 12.00 100.00
Princess Charming 12.00 100.00

*Pennsylvania is not an exhibition bloom, but it is a very free bloomer, a good sized flower and a splendid one to grow commercially. We believe it is a good money maker and there is nothing better on the market for a grower re-tailing his own stock, as this variety will hang on for ten days to two weeks in splendid shape. We have never had a better keeper. Buyers this year, we believe, will go into it much heavier an-other season.

WHY—are Currie's Revolving Flower Stands the leaders? Because they are equipped with or without fountain. This should particularly appeal to the florists who display potted plants. No necessity for handling; simply revolve the stand. The stand is mounted upon a pivot and can be revolved completely around from either direction, without changing the floor position.
 When set up the stand is 38 inches high;
 it takes up but 2 feet 8 inches square floor space.
 Each stand has 9 pot containers, and each container holds a 7-inch pot. Our prices and booklet

The Market.

The lenten season opened rather quietly, though there seems to be about the average number of funerals. The warm weather last week caused the roses and carnations to bloom freely. Bulb stock is coming fast and probably will be all gone by Easter. There will be plenty of roses and carnations for Easter, judging from the present outlook.

Various Notes.

Nellie Goodge is cutting some nice carnations. She has a nice variety of plants in good condition.

The Wm. Blackman Floral Co. reports business as a little more quiet than for some weeks, but has no complaints to make. The company has a large supply of cut flowers and potted plants of all kinds. The roses are excellent and the carnations are fine, but the warm weather has about finished the violets.

Julius Niednagel & Sons are cutting lots of carnations and roses. Julius Nied-nagel is away on a vacation and expects to return about Easter. He went by way of New Orleans on a trip to Florida.

Mrs. Elspersman says business is a little quiet at present.

Henry Seymour is having a nice run of trade. He is cutting lots of good carnations and has a ready sale for all of them. His general stock of plants looks good.

Greenhouse Heating.

GAS AS FUEL.

Feeling that the cost of heating our plant is too high, we should like to know whether there is a boiler in the market especially constructed for gas as fuel? We shall be much obliged for any information along this line, as well as for other people's opinions about the most economical gas burners.

C. F. C.

I do not know of any boiler that is especially constructed for burning gas as a fuel, but almost any of them can be used with gas, it being only necessary to fit a gas burner to the boiler and connect it up.

HEATING WITH EXHAUST STEAM.

Has any one of the commercial growers tried to heat greenhouses with exhaust steam from factories? There is an electric light plant about 300 feet distant from our greenhouses and the only obstruction is a street. We could get a contract for the exhaust steam at small cost, if we were sure that the plan would be practical.

C. F. C.

It is entirely practical to heat a greenhouse with exhaust steam, if it does not have to be carried more than 300 feet. Care should be taken to have the pipes thoroughly insulated. They can be run underground, through sewer pipes or in grout conduits.

TO IMPROVE THE CIRCULATION.

I would appreciate any information on hot water circulation. The circulation in my piping is too slow. I have an open system. Would a change to a closed system be the best remedy? The boiler is not quite low enough. The expansion tank is about five feet above the boiler. When I run a good fire it makes steam, stops the circulation and forces the water through the expansion tank. How would I have to arrange the piping for a closed system? There is a vent pipe on the farther end of each pipe.

F. K.

Before putting in a closed system, it will be well to make several changes in the present piping and give it another trial as an open system, especially as the changes suggested will be necessary even if it is to be changed to a closed system. I would suggest running the flow pipes so that they will have a slight slope from the boiler. Keep capacity of the boiler, so we can only consider that the boiler and radiation area are ample. When the boiler is placed on a level with the greenhouse floor, it is seldom possible to secure a good circulation when the flow pipe is carried on an incline. If it is possible to carry the flow pipe overhead and give it a slight fall, this might overcome the difficulty. The higher the returns, too, the better will be the circulation.

What the Users say

Heats Up Some, and Quick

ALVA, OKLAHOMA, Jan. 4 1911.

GENTLEMEN: I thought I had better let you know something about the heating plant you sold me. Well, we had a blizzard here the last three days and nights and the thermometer went down to 11° below zero. Most everything in town froze up and people lost all their plants, but we are doing business at the old stand. We had no trouble to keep up the water in boiler to 170 and maintained growing temperatures in houses with part of the piping turned off. We are sure we can hold the temperature at 20 below zero. This boiler and piping system surely heats some, and quick.

Yours very truly,
W. R. MAXWELL.

have three 2½-inch overhead flow pipes and seven 2-inch returns.

ONE OHIO HOUSE.

"I am planning to build a greenhouse, running east and west. It will be 24x93 and eleven feet to the ridge. The sides will be three and one-half feet high. Two thicknesses of weather boards will be used on the sides. Both gable ends will be exposed to the weather. The boiler pit will be at the west end and will be about forty inches deeper than the greenhouse floor. Hot water will be used and I wish to maintain a temperature of 60 degrees in zero weather. How much radiation will be required? How large a flow and how many 2-inch returns will be needed? I wish to run the returns under the side benches. How large an expansion tank will be necessary and how high above the boiler should the tank be?" M. W.

To heat the house described to 60 degrees, about 1,000 square feet of radiation should be used, and this will make it desirable to put in three 2½-inch flow pipes. One of these can be about two feet below the ridge and one of the others on each of the plates. In addition to the flow pipes, about thirteen 2-inch returns will be needed, of which three can be on each wall and the others should be distributed under the benches.

It is generally best to have the flow pipes carried with a slight drop toward the farther end of the house, and the returns should, of course, be given a fall toward the heater, but all of the pipes should be kept as high as possible. The expansion tank should hold about ten gallons of water and may be anywhere from two to ten feet above the highest part of the flow pipe.

DETROIT.

The Market.

In the first part of last week business was not brisk, but it livened up as the week drew to a close and ended with a good total.

Stock of every description is good and moving nicely. Carnations are exceptionally fine. Sweet peas are also fine and are being used in large quantities for wear. White carnations are in good demand for St. Patrick's day.

Various Notes.

Robert Miesel joined the benedicts last week.

At the meeting of the club, March 20, Ferdinand Kolbe will address the members on "Carnation Growing."

E. A. Feters has placed an order for an Oliver auto delivery car. It is to have a specially designed body, suitable for florists' use, and promises to be something fine.

Ed Beard put on more help last week. This time it is a baby boy.

W. B. Brown is kept pretty busy attending to the chickens on his farm at Birmingham and looking after the store. He recently purchased a touring car, to reduce the distance between store and farm.

H. S.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The Market.

Trade continues good and flowers are plentiful. Roses are in good supply and bulbous stock is low in price. Freesias are about done, but alyssum is in good crop and is useful for funeral work, which has been good. Plant trade is booming; in fact, no fault can be found with the market at present. Violets are in good demand.

The weather is quite mild and retail prices range about as follows: Carnations, 60 to 75 cents per dozen; roses, $1.50; tulips, daffodils and Paper Whites, 50 cents; double Murillo tulips, 75 cents; snapdragons, $1; mignonette, 60 cents; violets, $1 per hundred, and sweet peas from $1 to $1.50 for the same quantity.

Various Notes.

Chas. F. Lawton, city forester, delivered an interesting address on various tree pests before the Horticultural Society last week.

The street fakers were out again last Saturday selling flowers at cheap prices.

Wm. P. Peirce, E. H. Chamberlain, Wm. H. Davenport and R. E. Nofftz had nice window displays last week.

Mr. Leahy, manager of the Star dry goods store, has offered 1,000 catalpa trees for planting by the school children of the city on Arbor day.

S. S. Peckham is cutting some nice snapdragons.

PUMPING ENGINE WORN OUT? — Not If It's a Standard WHY?

Because we make THE STANDARD so that it CAN'T WEAR OUT. No expense is spared in its manufacture to make it DURABLE.

In DESIGN, with VERTICAL ENGINE, VERTICAL ENGINE VALVES, long double connecting-rods, flange unions, MACHINE-CUT gearing and cast-iron foundation, it is the ACME OF DURABILITY, and the MATERIALS from which each part is made have been selected with much care and forethought. No matter how effective the design, if cheap materials are embodied in the machine it is going to give out in a few months or a few years. In THE STANDARD PUMPING ENGINE all the contact pieces are of HARDENED STEEL, the engine connecting-rods are DROP FORGINGS, all the heavy bushings are of BRONZE, and the pump valves are of BRASS, which cannot rust or corrode. The pump cylinder is brass-lined and has a brass plunger. In fact, each separate piece is of the material which OUR LONG EXPERIENCE has proved to be the best adapted to its particular use.

The Market.

Business has not up to this time been so badly affected by Lent as was anticipated. With favorable weather both day and night, stock is increasing in supply from day to day and is of good quality. Bulbous stock is quite plentiful, but is still holding its own. Good carnations find ready sale.

Various Notes.

There was not a more pleased bunch on Sunday, March 12, than the five-man team of the Florists' Bowling League, for in the return match with the Odahnas they beat them in three games straight. We hope this will not make them overconfident, in view of the match game with the Chicago boys, March 19.

The Currie Bros. Co. has been exceedingly busy of late, forgetting all about the much dreaded lull expected about this time.

To receive a large American Beauty order and then not be able to fill it, was the experience of J. M. Fox & Son on Monday of this week.

The M. A. McKenney Co. reports a steady demand for pot plants of late. The firm's show window, which contained good specimens of rambler roses, azaleas, genistas, etc., no doubt helped to increase sales in that line.

The Holton & Hunkel Co. is well satisfied with last week's business. Advance orders for white carnations for St. Patrick's day are numerous.

The C. C. Pollworth Co. has a heavier call for green carnations than ever before. Though in previous years the trade called for white carnations for St. Patrick's day, they now order them ready for sale.

Nic Zweifel and C. C. Pollworth have expressed their intention of attending the National Flower Show at Boston.

Mrs. H. V. Hunkel left in the first part of last week for St. Louis, to attend the wedding of her brother, Wm. C. Smith. Mr. Smith is well known to the local craft, having been in the employ of his uncle, Wm. Edlefsen, some ten years ago.

Spring openings of department stores are the order of the day, helping to break the monotony of some of the retail florists.

The following called on the trade: J. E. Matthewson, Sheboygan, Wis.; Martin Reukauf, representing H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia; Frank Farney, with M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia, and Mrs. C. B. Tremain, Hartford, Wis. E. O.

91-93 CHAMBERS ST. NEW YORK

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet.
An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

The Market.

Lent has put a quietus on business to some extent, although trade had not been any too rushing for a fortnight previously. Weather conditions have been partly the cause, as we are having some regular May days, which may help the coal pile some, but have put a crimp in the selling end. However, taking things on the whole, business is as good as at this time last year, and "then some."

Stock of all kinds is in good supply, and is increasing in variety daily. Home-grown violets are coming and prices have taken a tumble; they are retailing at $1 per hundred. Sweet peas are also coming in and are selling at the same price. Bulbous stock is coming in fast, and is selling fairly well. Good roses are not any too plentiful and the best stock sells readily.

Carnations are more plentiful than at any time this season, several growers having good crops on. The prices are holding up well, $1 per dozen being the regular price. Forget-me-nots, daisies, fre-sias and valley are in good supply. Orchids are in fair supply and sell as well as anything else. In the way of potted plants we are well supplied with azaleas, rhododendrons in the various shades, lilacs, cinerarias, cyclamens, primroses, hyacinths and tulips in pots and pans, single and double jonquils. A few peach and apple blossoms are to be seen. Green goods are as good as cash. The outlook for blooming plants for Easter is slim, as all stock is coming on fast.

CINCINNATI, O.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Bloomhurst Floral Co., for the purpose of electing directors, was held in the rooms of the Enterprise Building Association, in Lockland, on Wednesday afternoon, March 1. The following were elected: Directors, A. M. Stearns, John Mueller, Julius Hesterberg, William Sunderbruch, William Backmeyer, C. W. Skillman and John G. Heber. The newly elected directors organized by electing William Sunderbruch, president; Julius Hesterberg, vice-president; John Mueller, treasurer, and Albert Rolef, secretary. The report of the officers showed the company to be in a highly prosperous condition during the few months it has been in operation.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

Lent has at last had a telling effect on business, but not to such an extent as to cause any considerable decline in the market. Stock piled up somewhat, but by Saturday, March 11, was nearly all cleaned up, carnations and bulb stock being the leaders. Considerable funeral work has kept white stock moving. Violets are becoming smaller and have touched bottom prices. Beauties and Richmond are about equal to the demand. Lilies are plentiful and show a steady increase right along.

Plants are more in evidence every day and will increase steadily until Easter. Stock for Easter is in fine shape at most places, but is not in as great variety as is usually grown. The weather has been warm for early March and, on account of the bright sun, shading will be necessary to hold azaleas this year, as the buds swell rapidly at this season. A repetition of last year's weather would be a heavy blow to everyone.

Various Notes.

John Febelcorn, who has been in the employ of S. A. Anderson since boyhood, has embarked in business under his own name. His store is located on Broadway, and as he is a hustler he should make a go of it.

The one grand event of the Florists' Club was celebrated March 7, when the annual banquet was held at the Hofbrau in connection with the regular meeting, which included the election of officers for the ensuing year. The crowd was a surprise to everybody, the number being seventy-four. This was gratifying and in addition was the assurance of a lively time. The program was splendidly arranged by the committee in charge and the events moved along like clockwork. William Kasting was toastmaster and ably led the happy throng. Following the dinner, a picture machine was installed and character pictures, drawn and arranged by Mr. Gillis, were thrown on the screen. This brought out rounds of applause from the members. For four hours the fun lasted and without a doubt it was the most enjoyable affair ever given by the Florists' Club. The election resulted as follows: George McClure, president; Joe Sangster, vice-president; Jerome Deuscher, financial secretary; William Legg, recording secretary; Chas. Sandiford, treasurer.

A number of florists, not content with the celebration of the banquet, went to Rochester, March 8, in acceptance of the invitation from the Rochester Club for a return bowling match. About fifteen members were in the party. They were heartily received and served to a fine spread, after which all adjourned to the alleys. Two weeks previously the Buffalo boys trimmed Rochester for three games at Buffalo and they repeated the victory this trip in spite of the large scores of the Rochester boys. Neubeck, of Buffalo, was high, with an average of 188 for the three games. R. A. S.

A Parallel Proposition

A house 200 feet long on private grounds looks too commercial, but two 100-foot houses built parallel fashion like these, and you have an attractive, compact proposition. However, it is just as you say—"the way a house is planned depends pretty much on where it is to be located," and for what it is to be used.

Now that you mention the question of locations, we want you to have our catalogue—and see some of the different stunts we have accomplished in locating. Many of them were tough nuts to crack and the catalogue tells how we cracked them. Want the catalogue?

Randolph, Vt.—Harry M. Totman has been in business here ten years. He now has 17,500 feet of glass and is doing a good local trade and a wholesale trade that reaches all parts of New England. Mr. Totman is secretary of the Randolph Board of Trade, is one of the water commissioners and a director of the Randolph sanatorium.

THE RETAIL

FLORIST.....

SOME SIMPLE COLOR LAWS.

The Colors of the Spectrum.

If neither the growing nor the whole-sale branch of the business seems to attract the beginner as the retail and decorative department does; if, moreover, he has passed the few simple tests of ability in designing and color, as presented in my last article, he may now profit by a system of color study planned somewhat in the following condensed form:

White sunlight, as seen in a rainbow or spectrum, contains these colors: Violet, red, orange, yellow, green and blue. They are so blended by intermediate tints and shades as to be rather difficult to distinguish, but we can indicate them to ourselves by a straight line on which the names represent the colors in the spectrum ray. Divide the line into six equal parts, placing the names, in the order already given, in the proper places on the line. Now we will play that we are bringing the two ends of the line together, forming a circle. The sections which the colors occupy will be extended to the center, and the colors will follow in this order, violet, red, orange, yellow, green and blue, from left to right. By selecting any two opposite colors you may combine them correctly, as violet and yellow, red and green, orange and blue. Those which follow each other are the least harmonious combinations. Yellow and blue, when mixed in paints, form green. Red and yellow make orange. Blue and red produce violet.

Primary or Unmixed Colors.

Yellow, red and blue can not be produced from combining other colors, and they are called by color manufacturers the primary colors. Other authorities place the number of primary colors anywhere between these three and the six colors of the spectrum. But a settlement of this question is not essential to our department of color work, for we seldom have to do with pure colors. By pure colors are meant unmixed colors. There are no flowers of one pure, normal color. One which approaches a pure red is the Roosevelt carnation, and for purposes of comparison it will serve as a type. The single California violet will serve as an example of the violet color; an orange may be instanced as orange colored, a lemon as yellow, grass as green, and Lobelia compacta as blue.

If it were only a question of even as nearly pure color combinations as might be possible with the foregoing examples, the work of color combination might be easily acquired. But when we consider that all these color types, which at first glance appear to be pure, are in fact mixed with two or more colors, the question becomes extremely complex. No rule or set of rules could cover every case or possible combination.

A Guiding Principle.

When we consider that red mixed with yellow becomes scarlet, as seen in Beacon and America carnations, and that red diluted with white becomes pink, as found in Enchantress carnations, it is easily understood that the one type of green which is the color opposite to red in our color circle will not combine with all of the reds, but that the green, being capable of as many variations as the red, will furnish some one correct tone for every variation from the normal type of red. The selection of just this correct tone of green for any given tone of red depends upon your native color sense, which can be aided, but not entirely supplanted, by a principle which we are now ready to formulate, namely: A combination of colors must be based sense comes to the rescue, and, if of considerable strength, is practically infallible. Color affinities, however obscure, are true to one another, and what your eye chooses as harmonious may afterward, by patient examination, be found true to accepted formulas.

These hints on color laws will be continued in another issue of The Review.

A BRIDGE IN FLOWERS.

Retail florists may be divided, roughly, into two classes: one class includes those who seek to lead their customers away from the unique or bizarre in funeral flowers, and the other class embraces those who welcome with wide open arms the man, or committee, with the order for the unusual—the unusual usually means a little extra money for the florist. Kansas City recently has produced an unusual number of these orders for special designs. The Alpha Floral Co. thinks that everything that comes to the mill is grist and that these orders are exceptionally well worth grinding, for they run into larger money than can be had for wreaths or sprays, however fine. There is this to be said for the big and unusual pieces: usually they are ordered as the result of a dead man's friends or associates taking up a collection; when a committee has from $50 upward to spend for a design, something on a strain common to both colors which are parties to the combination.

Thus, a Prince Camille de Rohan rose will combine most happily with a Sunset rose, on account of the red strain so dominantly present in the Rohan and noticeably evident in the Sunset. This is a simple example of the principle, but it would take no wide search to find two different flowers whose subtle and delicate strains of color harmony could be traced in several different lines. And we might add that the more complex these lines of harmony are, the more delightful is the result. Here is where the native color showy is required; it will not suffice to put the money into orchids in a wreath, for the display is not apparent to those who do not know the value of flowers. In such a case a big piece is necessary, whether or not it may have any artistic qualities. When a committee has more money to spend than really is necessary for the purpose, the result is almost always an order to make something in a way to typify the occupation of the deceased. An Illinois florist not long ago was required to make for a glass-blower a bottle in white carnations, the piece standing more than six feet high. In the same class comes the railroad bridge recently ordered of the Kansas City florist and shown in the accompanying illustration. While most retailers will agree the price of the design, said to have been $250, is the best thing about it, they also will concur in the opinion ence to the florists' business, combined with artistic taste.

The store faces east on Broadway, about one-half square south from the company's old location, and has a frontage of forty feet and a depth of ninety feet. The walls of the salesroom are cov-with cement floor. The ceiling in the workroom below the conservatory has a height of only ten feet, making an easy climb to the floor above. Under the stairway is a small room for the cashier and operator of the private branch telephone exchange.

At the south end of the salesroom and adjoining it is the wrapping room. Directly back of that is the stock room for supplies, and still farther back is the wagon room with cement floor, which connects with the alley and also with the freight elevator, which runs to the conservatory and to the basement.

An artificial ice plant with two large cooling rooms is in the basement. Spacious lockers for the employees are also located here. At the front end of the basement, which is well lighted from the street, are the kitchen and dining room, both being completely equipped with all conveniences. An electric exhaust fan carries away all odors and insures plenty of fresh air. In the dining room are settees that can be readily converted into couches with mattresses. These will be used at rush times, like Christmas and Easter, when the clerks have been working most of the night and there is an opportunity to rest a few hours. The dining room is used only at rush times, and at such times good meals are served to employees without charge.

The offices are on the second floor, and the numerous windows make them light and cheerful. The office equipment is up-to-date and modern, and includes vertical files, billing and adding machines, rotary neostyle, dictaphone and addressograph.

ONE WAY.

And Several Better Ways.

It happened on a Saturday afternoon. A mechanic, his week's work done, was walking home. The street was one on which there are scores of small stores, pawnshops, saloons, tobacco shops and cheap hotels. Mr. Comeinski, proprietor of the Cutprice Suit Co., stopped Mr. Mechanic for a friendly chat, induced him to step into the store, and sold him a suit—coat, vest and pants, with a pair of suspenders thrown in.

that the florist met an unusual requirement in a capable way.

MR. VALENTINE'S NEW STORE.

The new store of the Park Floral Co., at 1643 Broadway, Denver, is finished, and it is so thoroughly up-to-date and convenient that a description will not be out of place.

At the time the lease was made the building had not been erected and Mr. Valentine, president of the concern, furnished the plans for his portion of the building, so that it is built in accordance with his ideas of convenience with referered with gray friar's cloth, divided into panels. The woodwork is Oregon fir, finished to show the natural grain. A mantel in dull finished tile is at one end of the room, and in the other a long mirror.

Copper lanterns from the ceiling and wall supply light for the store, and in the show windows are Tungsten lamps with holophane shades. A solid rubber carpet of dark green with a white border, and harmonizing beautifully with the other furnishings, was made to order at a cost of nearly $1,000. In place of counters, hardwood tables are used, finished to match the woodwork.

A wide stairway from the center of the salesroom leads up to a large conservatory

This was one way of combining advertising and salesmanship, not a method many florists care to use, but one that appeals to a certain class of people who carry money by the door. Inducing the man to come into the store was advertising; closing the trade was good salesmanship. Perhaps the first would have been sufficient to have made the sale; once in the store, the visitor may buy without the exercise of salesmanship, but the sale never would have been made had not Mr. Comeinski advertised in "One Way." Advertising and salesmanship go together, but salesmanship has little chance where there is no advertising.

"It pays to advertise!" It certainly does, and what is more, if you have something to sell, you must advertise. The more you advertise, the more you sell.

Ways for the Florist.

This coming Easter, if you have a fine stock of lilies, azaleas, bulbous stock or cut flowers, tell the flower buyers about it. Stop them for a moment at your printed word, induce them to come into your place of business and, if your goods are up to the standard, they will buy.

Advertising, to many florists, suggests only large sums spent with newspapers. There are ways, too numerous to mention, of advertising aside from the use of public prints. First of all, look to your store printed matter. Is it neat and attractive? Is your name on all your boxes, tags, etc.? Every article sent out from the store should carry a tag, even though there be a dozen pieces going to one funeral house. A clean delivery wagon in charge of a neat, if not uniformed, young man advertises you by commanding respect.

Possibly the best advertising medium you can have is the show window. Keep it so arranged or trimmed that it will stop the flower lover on his way and compel him to come into your store—then your plants or flowers, plus a little salesmanship, will cause him to open his purse-strings. If he buys a dollar box of flowers, see that it is neatly done up and bears your name; this may lead to some other sales later on.

Some say a florist can not afford to spend a large sum for publicity. It is not necessary. A small sum, spent in the right way, will do much good work. If I had headed this article with the word "Advertising," would you have stopped to read it? Perhaps, and perhaps not. At least, I might have used a dozen words instead of two, with no more effect.

Just how much a florist should spend for advertising depends on his circumstances. The old, established firm need not spend so much in proportion as the younger concern. Appropriate for advertising a certain small percentage of your year's business. Map out a campaign, and stick to it, and you will be surprised and pleased with the results. From two to three per cent is a good figure, once you are established, basing it on your preceding year's business. Of course boxes, tags and stationery would not come directly under the heading of advertising; they merely help a good cause.

TROUBLE WITH GIGANTEUMS.

I am sending you a few leaves of Lilium giganteum. They seem to be turning brown on the ends. I have had a night temperature of 55 degrees and 65 degrees in the daytime. They are otherwise strong and healthy. I have been keeping them on the dry side. Can you tell me what the trouble is and the cause of it?

J. K.

The foliage is evidently quite brown on the ends, as you state, and plants with such leaves would be hard to sell. I am inclined to think that the trouble may not be wholly a disease, but has been caused by their treatment. Giganteum lilies like to be grown warm at all stages of their growth. Even after being potted, it is a mistake to place them in a temperature a little above freezing to start in; 50 degrees at night is far better. Once the tops have appeared and the pots are nicely filled with roots, the plants like 62 to 65 degrees at night, with a 10-degree rise in the daytime. They will revel in such a temperature and the percentage of sickly plants will be much less than if grown cooler.

You have made a mistake in keeping your plants on the dry side. This treatment is all right after potting, but once the pots are full of roots, watering can be done freely and the pots should never really approach dryness; otherwise the lower leaves will turn yellow and browning of the ends is also likely. Heavy fumigation will brown the foliage like yours. Hydrocyanic acid gas should never be used among them, nor should any of the strong nicotine extracts, which are commonly vaporized. I would advise more heat—if possible 10 degrees higher—and more moisture at the root. Also spray the plants twice a day.

NEW ROSES WORTH GROWING.

[Extracts from a paper by S. W. Crowell, of Roseacres, Miss., read at the convention of the Tennessee Nurserymen's Association in Nashville, Tenn., continued from The Review of March 16.]

F. Von Marschall is a bright red. A free, constant bloomer. Buds and open flowers are equally well formed. A first-class rose.

Harry Kirk is deep sulphur yellow, passing into a lighter shade as the flower opens. Large, full, perfect form, constant and of good substance.

Helen Good is a sport from Maman Cochet. Pretty well known, but the rose, like this type, should be planted in every garden. I may be partial to this variety, owing to the fact that it originated on my grounds at Alpika, Miss., and thence was sent out by the Good & Reese Co., of Springfield, O. Yet, in every respect it is as good as Maman Cochet or White Cochet, with the same vigor and freedom of bloom, and in color no rose, to my knowledge, is equal to it. The color is a delicate yellow, suffused with pink, each petal edged deeper.

Mayflower is creamy white, with the edge of petals laced lavender pink. Buds are long and pointed. Of splendid vigor and constitution.

An Ideal White Bedder.

Molly Sharman Crawford is a white bedder that will stand in the front rank of good garden roses when well known. The color is pure and chaste; flowers of good substance and form; vigorous branching habit. An ideal rose.

Mrs. Dudley Cross is apparently an improved Marie Van Houtte. Buds extremely large, well pointed, opening into a mammoth bloom that stands the sun well. A vigorous grower and constant.

Mme. Edward Vicars is bright carmine, shaded rose. A promising variety.

Mrs. B. R. Cant is not a novelty, but the trade has the habit of overlooking good things every now and then. One of the best garden roses extant. Color, dark carmine, flushed crimson; free and constant; a rank grower and about the best of its color.

Paula is a vigorous, free flowering variety, of erect habit. Color, sulphur yellow, with deeper center. Of quite recent introduction, but it promises well.

W. R. Smith, like Helen Good, is of such exceptional merit that it may be well to include it in this list, as many nurserymen are not acquainted with it. It is so much like the Cochet roses that one would class it as a true Cochet in growth, vigor, freedom and formation of flower. It ranks with the Cochets and Helen Good, and this is the greatest praise that any garden rose can receive. In color it is rose-pink, salmon-pink shaded with flesh and various light tints, which make a combination difficult to describe.

Other Classes of Roses.

To this list might be added many teas and hybrid teas that are now being disseminated, but I am sure that herein are enough to appeal to those who desire to try out a portion, at least, of those that appear to be the most commendable. I have omitted the hybrid perpetual section, hardy types and various other novelties. Frau Karl Druschki you all know. J. B. Clark and Hugh Dickson are two splendid varieties in this class, and beyond these three varieties I do not care to go. In the Baby Rambler type, Baby Dorothy is a good pink, Catherine Zeimet a most excellent white, and many others are being sent out which must have further trials before being classed as commercial varieties.

Just now the hybridizer seems to give his labor to the production of hybrid teas, and so long as they give us such wonderful varieties as appear from year to year, we can well dispense with less desirable types, for a time at least. However, there are other desirable sections, suited for a wider range of territory, especially the colder climates of our country, yet suitable for various plantings throughout the south. I have reference to the hybrid rugosas and hybrid Wichuraianas. These two sections, with the hybrid teas, will within the next decade be our upper class in the rose family.

I was requested to embody within this paper something about the growing and selling end of roses. To do this, I am sure, would take up too much time. Besides, this topic should have its full quota of time in order to cover all the essential points. However, it should be known that to secure best results in the propagation of plants, and particularly the rose, the work should be done in a natural way and under natural conditions. All plant life requires a period of rest and repose for good results. I have tested roses that were summer-propagated and allowed to rest over winter in cold houses, alongside of the same varieties that had been grown under high temperatures from forced stock, both winter and summer, and I am sure the difference in growth and vitality of the plants by these two methods could be perceived by the most ignorant amateur. Overwork, overstimulation, overfeeding, everlastingly at it, can not make a strong, vigorous garden rose. A plant of this kind, when removed to the garden, usually sickens and dies, and should it survive the summer, a rest well taken, it begins its growth in late fall, only to be nipped by the first chilling frost from the north.

GERANIUMS FOR MEMORIAL DAY.

I have about 2,500 geranium plants that are from eight to twelve inches high and I am afraid they will get too big for the market by Memorial day. They are blooming now quite freely and there is not a good market here for geraniums until Memorial day. What is the best thing for me to do with these plants? If I were to take top cuttings from them, would the cuttings bloom for Memorial day? Would the old plants be in good condition for this day, or is there some way in which I can check their growth, without injuring the plants? Would it be the best plan to take cuttings from them now? I do not like to lose them, but they are growing too fast. J. H. N.

It is getting somewhat late to top your geraniums, but not entirely too late. I would advise you to take the tops out of the tallest and strongest plants and insert them singly in 2-inch pots of sandy loam. These will be rooted in a month, and in six weeks will want a shift into 3-inch pots. They will carry a truss of flowers each and, while somewhat small and late, will probably sell. The best geraniums for Memorial sales are grown in 4-inch pots. I do not know what size yours are in, or in what temperature they have been. A night minimum of 45 to 50 degrees is ample. Young stock rooting and after potting can have 5 to 10 degrees more. They should be spread out, so that they cannot become drawn and leggy. Give all possible sun and lots of fresh air.

Starving your plants would not be any remedy. Keep all flower trusses picked off until the first week in May. Avoid feeding with liquid manure and do not use any strong animal manure in the compost. Bone promotes firm growth and floriferousness; liquid stimulants cause a soft growth. Give a small shift to any of your plants really needing it, and any which you do not wish to move to larger pots can be kept in good shape by an occasional top-dressing of Clay's fertilizer or a weak watering with nitrate of soda. Do not keep your plants constantly wet at the root. Geraniums are not aquatics, but some growers treat them as though they were. Allow a thorough drying out between waterings and keep dead leaves, weeds, etc., carefully removed. C. W.

TROUBLE WITH GERANIUMS.

I have been having trouble with my geraniums and enclose a fair sample of my plants. The disease is spreading all over my stock. Will you please tell me what is wrong and what to do to stop it?
F. A. K.

The foliage of the specimens received was quite badly attacked with bacteria. Without knowing something of cultural and other conditions, it is difficult to suggest even what the cause of the trouble may be. I would advise you to throw away the worst affected plants. Pick the worst foliage from any others. Do not allow them to stand crowded. Do not keep them constantly wet at the root and do not grow them too warm. Avoid using any animal manure in the potting soil, unless it is old and decayed. This causes a too rank and soft growth, which is an easy mark for bacterial diseases. Give the plants the fullest possible sunshine, an abundance of fresh air and a night temperature of 45 to 50 degrees. Do not exceed the latter figure, unless it may be on warm nights. When watering, soak the pots well and always allow them to dry out quite well between the waterings. Do not syringe the plants overhead. This will also tend to make the foliage soft. C. W.

HOTBEDS WITHOUT MANURE.

The inquiry of K. L. K., who asked in a recent issue of The Review with regard to oil burners, leads me to send you the enclosed photograph, with some description of my apparatus. How many have been confronted with the necessity of making hotbeds without manure? Where I am located it is next to impossible to get together enough manure suitable for hotbed purposes. Last year, while planning my spring work, I was confronted by the same old difficulty in aggravated form. As a solution, it occurred to me that I might rig up a plant similar to those used in heating railroad coaches. I therefore bought an upright boiler, 18x36 inches, containing twenty 2½-inch flues. The picture shows the boiler in position at the end of a hotbed 6x50 feet. You will note I have marked the expansion tank, which I rigged up on a tripod, and also the valve for steam escape. The flow pipe drops six inches in the fifty feet and then there are four 1-inch returns level to the boiler. In twenty minutes from firing the entire system is hot, and I have performed the feat of making hotbeds without manure. The hotbeds last year gave me the best success I ever have had in a long and successful experience in the trade. There were only two difficulties. One of these was the necessity for firing and the other was that the ashes, smoke and soot fell on the glass and sifted into the hotbed whenever I attempted to ventilate. As a result, and this brings me to the inquiry of K. L. K., I decided to find an oil burner and got in touch with C. Y. Roop, 613 West Fifth street, Kansas City, whose name was given me as the manufacturer of oil burners for every purpose. I purchased a burner for the boiler and, while I have not yet given it a test that is conclusive, I think I have found the solution of the only trouble in heating a hotbed without manure.

THE HORTICULTURAL GRADUATE.

I noted the letter of F. Williams on page 10 of The Review of March 2, under the title of "The Beginner," and I certainly do not accept all that he says without certain reservations. I do, however, agree with him regarding the general impression among people who are not fully informed, that the vocation of a florist is the direct road to wealth.

I believe the commercial flower business would compare favorably, in regard to its opportunities for the inexperienced, with any other business. Take the grocery business, for instance, and you would find thousands entering it every day without previous training. I believe the average, fairly intelligent man would be as liable to succeed in one business as he would in another, providing all things were equal.

To my mind, the principal reason for so many failures is lack of capital with which to operate. A man must use much perseverance and sweet oil, plus the necessary capital, to succeed. Under any circumstances, a certain inherent business ability is necessary to success. There are many successful growers today who do not have the ability to conduct a business on their own account; and there are successful business men who could certainly succeed in operating a flower establishment without any previous experience whatever.

Mr. Williams seems to think lightly of the private gardener at "colleges presided over by learned professors," and he believes that the horticultural schools which do not give special attention to the teaching of commercial growing "only tend to increase the number of incompetents." It seems to me that the graduate of such a school is in a far better position to begin the practical cultivation of florists' crops than he who has spent only four years in the ordinary commercial establishment. The theorist can readily adapt himself to most conditions. He knows the principles of plant culture; his knowledge is so general that he can enter into almost any phase of the business; he can work at the branch he likes best. An intelligent man can readily acquaint himself with the "small details," and, though some few would balk at the hard work and drudgery, most men would knuckle down and take the pepper with the salt.

The private gardener at a college which boasts of a plant house and a campus of any size is obliged to have a far more extensive and general knowledge of the plant world than the florist

Starving your plants would not be any remedy. Keep all flower trusses picked off until the first week in May. Avoid feeding with liquid manure and do not use any strong animal manure in the compost. Bone promotes firm growth and floriferousness; liquid stimulants cause a soft growth. Give a small shift to any of your plants really needing it, and any which you do not wish to move to larger pots can be kept in good shape by an occasional top-dressing of Clay's fertilizer or a weak watering with nitrate of soda. Do not keep your plants constantly wet at the root. Geraniums are not aquatics, but some growers treat them as though they were. Allow a thorough drying out between waterings and keep dead leaves, weeds, etc., carefully removed. C. W.

TROUBLE WITH GERANIUMS.

I have been having trouble with my geraniums and enclose a fair sample of my plants. The disease is spreading all over my stock. Will you please tell me what is wrong and what to do to stop it?
F. A. K.

The foliage of the specimens received was quite badly attacked with bacteria. Without knowing something of cultural and other conditions, it is difficult to suggest even what the cause of the trouble may be. I would advise you to throw away the worst affected plants. Pick the worst foliage from any others. Do not allow them to stand crowded. Do not keep them constantly wet at the root and do not grow them too warm. Avoid using any animal manure in the potting soil, unless it is old and decayed. This causes a too rank and soft growth, which is an easy mark for bacterial diseases. Give the plants the fullest possible sunshine, an abundance of fresh air and a night temperature of 45 to 50 degrees. Do not exceed the latter figure, unless it may be on warm nights. When watering, soak the pots well and always allow them to dry out quite well between the waterings. Do not syringe the plants overhead. This will also tend to make the foliage soft. C. W.

HOTBEDS WITHOUT MANURE.

The inquiry of K. L. K., who asked in a recent issue of The Review with regard to oil burners, leads me to send you the enclosed photograph, with some description of my apparatus. How many have been confronted with the necessity of making hotbeds without manure? Where I am located it is next to impossible to get together enough manure suitable for hotbed purposes. Last year, while planning my spring work, I was confronted by the same old difficulty in aggravated form. As a solution, it occurred to me that I might rig up a plant similar to those used in heating railroad coaches. I therefore bought an upright boiler, 18x36 inches, containing twenty 2½-inch flues. The picture shows the boiler in position at the end of a hotbed 6x50 feet. You will note I have marked the expansion tank, which I rigged up on a tripod, and also the valve for steam escape. The flow pipe drops six inches in the fifty feet and then there are four 1-inch returns level to the boiler. In twenty minutes from firing the entire system is hot, and I have performed the feat of making hotbeds without manure. The hotbeds last year gave me the best success I ever have had in a long and successful experience in the trade. There were only two difficulties. One of these was the necessity for firing and the other was that the ashes, smoke and soot fell on the glass and sifted into the hotbed whenever I attempted to ventilate. As a result, and this brings me to the inquiry of K. L. K., I decided to find an oil burner and got in touch with C. Y. Roop, 613 West Fifth street, Kansas City, whose name was given me as the manufacturer of oil burners for every purpose. I purchased a burner for the boiler and, while I have not yet given it a test that is conclusive, I think I have found the solution of the only trouble in heating a hotbed without manure.

THE HORTICULTURAL GRADUATE.

I noted the letter of F. Williams on page 10 of The Review of March 2, under the title of "The Beginner," and I certainly do not accept all that he says without certain reservations. I do, however, agree with him regarding the general impression among people who are not fully informed, that the vocation of a florist is the direct road to wealth.

I believe the commercial flower business would compare favorably, in regard to its opportunities for the inexperienced, with any other business. Take the grocery business, for instance, and you would find thousands entering it every day without previous training. I believe the average, fairly intelligent man would be as liable to succeed in one business as he would in another, providing all things were equal.

To my mind, the principal reason for so many failures is lack of capital with which to operate. A man must use much perseverance and sweet oil, plus the necessary capital, to succeed. Under any circumstances, a certain inherent business ability is necessary to success. There are many successful growers today who do not have the ability to conduct a business on their own account; and there are successful business men who could certainly succeed in operating a flower establishment without any previous experience whatever.

Mr. Williams seems to think lightly of the private gardener at "colleges presided over by learned professors," and he believes that the horticultural schools which do not give special attention to the teaching of commercial growing "only tend to increase the number of incompetents." It seems to me that the graduate of such a school is in a far better position to begin the practical cultivation of florists' crops than he who has spent only four years in the ordinary commercial establishment. The theorist can readily adapt himself to most conditions. He knows the principles of plant culture; his knowledge is so general that he can enter into almost any phase of the business; he can work at the branch he likes best. An intelligent man can readily acquaint himself with the "small details," and, though some few would balk at the hard work and drudgery, most men would knuckle down and take the pepper with the salt.

The private gardener at a college which boasts of a plant house and a campus of any size is obliged to have a far more extensive and general knowledge of the plant world than the florist needs in his business. He must have a knowledge of landscape gardening, of vegetables, of flowers, of fruits, shrubs and trees, and he must also know the principles of growing plants under glass. Last, but by no means least, the college or horticultural graduate would know where to go for advice if he needed it—to his authoritative books, to coworkers in the line, and to the experiment station.

GET YOUR GUN.

In the accompanying illustration any one would recognize a typical Missourian, though one might not at first glance appreciate that this Missourian recently was transplanted from the Chicago wholesale market. It is Alex. Newett. The short mustache is as typically Missouri as would be a corn cob pipe. Newett has grown the mustache since he left Chicago. The objects about his neck are sixty-three mallard ducks. Count them! If you can't make it quite sixty-three, we have the word for it of Frank Stuppy, who was Mr. Newett's shooting partner March 13 and 14. Mr. Stuppy didn't have to be shown; he "Newett!" He avers that the bag was sixty-three mallards, that he got forty-one of them himself, and that it is the first time this season he has been able to outshoot his hunting partner.

AMERICAN SORTS IN ENGLAND.

How They Fared in 1910.

By force of habit, I annually report to you how the carnation novelties fare over here in England. But with so large a contingent of carnation men from over here visiting the great Boston show and seizing that occasion, undoubtedly, to tell you of your shortcomings, I prefer to write more in an appreciative manner, and as one who himself has raised for several years some 5,000 seedlings annually with great hopes and done too much good fortune. I have learned with bitter sorrow how difficult a thing it is to raise a really fine carnation. However, our own novelties in England are greatly improving and the time is not far distant when you will search this tight little island for new carnations.

We all agree that Scarlet Glow is the best novelty sent over here this last season. The shape of the flower is popular, while its bright, pure shade of color is what we all wanted. The habit is good, with stem and calyx quite up to the average.

Mrs. C. W. Ward is undoubtedly a fine variety. Its strong calyx, perfect stem and free habit are a revelation for our dull climate. The color has too much blue in it for general taste, but all progressive market growers will have it as the best of the Lawson shade.

Dorothy Gordon is exactly what we were led to imagine it would be—an improved Rose-pink Enchantress. However, it is a shade of color which has never been popular with us, and no one has plunged heavily on it.

Admiration is still suspended in the balance. The color is perfection, but the stem does not like our climate. Some have a high opinion of this variety and it may settle down to something good.

Alma Ward has proved more or less a failure. The flowers are inclined to come deformed in winter. It should, however, do well from now onward and may suit some of the private establishments.

Shasta received an award of merit and has a certain vogue of popularity, but, generally speaking, it is not quite as free as we had expected, while the build of the flower is not good as judged by our standard. But we shall all test it again.

Niagara also has its votaries, but to displace our present standard whites is no small undertaking. Some nice flowers of Niagara have been shown and it cannot yet be counted as a failure.

Sangamo has proved a disappointment. The flowers are thin and small, its only redeeming feature being its free habit of growth. We must have better quality.

Conquest is quite the best of the many recent novelties of the old Prosperity scheme of coloring; in fact, it is a Prosperity-colored Lawson. Good fancy varieties always have a market with us.

Mary Tolman has failed. The flowers come deformed or semi-double and the growth is miserably slow. But it hit the popular color and with a better habit would have lived on.

J. W. Riley has proved a great disappointment; not that we expected a yellow Enchantress, but we had great hopes of something better than what we already had. However, it blooms freely and may be a stepping stone to better things.

On the whole, the crop of last season's novelties was above the average, but if only some extensive test of carnation novelties could be held previous to their dissemination, something similar to the rose tests held in France, it would make those of sterling quality worth more and those of inferior merit worth less, and that is what every fair-minded man desires.

THE CARNATION.

[A paper by Wm. E. Tricker, of Madison, N. J., read before the Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society, at Madison, March 11, 1911.]

The carnation today is one of the most popular flowers in existence, a serious rival even of the rose. It is surprising when one considers its various effects and the purposes it serves. It is a flower that is practically within the income of all classes. There is hardly any purpose for which it cannot be used—the dinner table, weddings, hospitals, presentations, and also when we come to "shuffle off this mortal coil."

Many of us look upon the carnation as a comparatively new arrival, a flower that during the last two decades has run hard and gained practically the same recognition as the rose, or even greater recognition. Many of us are apt to forget that the carnation has been in cultivation upward of 2,000 years. Certainly the carnation, or gilly-flower, as it was then termed, would appear insignificant beside its progeny of today. Our greatest poet, Shakespeare, speaks of the carnation in one of his poems as the "flower of the season."

Origin of the American Carnation.

We read, and also learn from our one or two carnation pioneers, that the American carnation originated about sixty years ago on Long Island, not gaining much headway until 1890, when John McGowan introduced Lizzie McGowan, followed in 1893 by Dorner's William Scott.

One of our most successful originators is Peter Fisher, who introduced Mrs. T. W. Lawson, which was sold for $30,000, and which was followed by Enchantress, the only carnation that has stood the test of time with our growers, wholesalers and retailers of the present day.

Twenty years or more ago, when McGowan, Albertini, Scott and Keller were grown, a 2-inch flower was considered the limit and many a grower would puff out his chest if he espied one just a shade larger. It is also quite amusing when I think how in many cases we used to let three or even more buds develop on one stem, picking each bud short-stemmed and in many cases just the calyx stuck on a toothpick. We would send them to the begging wholesalers and net more than we do now for our best flowers.

Today we have varieties such as Dorothy Gordon, the Enchantress family, White Perfection, Mrs. Patten, C. W. Ward, T. W. Lawson, Pink Delight and Harlowarden. Some grow one or two varieties well, while they fail on others; therefore some recommend certain varieties, while others prefer other sorts. Then, with this year's distribution we have White House, the prince of whites, and Princess Charming, the queen of pinks.

Some of the Latest Arrivals.

Regarding Charming, the improved Enchantress, we go so far as to say that Enchantress here will meet its Waterloo before many more months have passed. It has not split under various conditions of weather and certainly this past winter has been a true test. We like it so well that we shall plant all the stock we can. Both Charming and White House are good shippers and well worthy of the recommendation they have received. These varieties are certainly an improvement on previous introductions. Of this year's batch there are also Washington, the improved Lawson, and White Wonder and Gloriosa.

While speaking here on novelties I should just like to mention the new variety called Wodenethe. It is going to take all before it next year. Most of you have heard of it. Now compare Lizzie McGowan with this variety and you will form a clearer idea of the strides in twenty years. It has been claimed by authorities to be the greatest carnation in existence. Just think! We have cut several flowers—I will not say all of them—just a shade under five inches across and three inches in depth, with a strong stem three to four feet long. This variety was scored ninety-three points by the committee of the New York Florists' Club; so you may be assured of its value. I wish you all could have seen it the day it was judged.

Some Cultural Hints.

Now, talking about varieties, etc., is not growing them, and I prefer to grow them rather than write or talk about them, but you have asked me to write these few notes and I could scarcely refuse to do so, since I feel somewhat indebted to you all. I will begin, therefore, by stating to those who have not had as extensive experience as a few of our worthy members here, that it is no sinecure to grow the carnation successfully.

While we do not profess to always have a lot of first-class flowers at our greenhouses, we certainly make a specialty of having the young stock in a proper condition to ship to our customers all over the world.

In these brief cultural notes it is hardly possible to go into details. As you all know, the cutting bench should be filled with clean, close sand, so that when the cuttings root they will have plenty of sand to cling to. The old idea of using gritty sand is misleading. Then they should be potted up in 2¼-inch pots, in beds or benches, and after being sufficiently established they should be pinched back hard and worked along in that condition until July, when they are planted into the bench. From then on is a most critical time. A wet summer will invariably cause a lot of stem-rot, which can be much checked by blowing slaked lime with a sulphur bellows in between the plants. After planting they should be kept sprayed three or four times a day until properly established, keeping plenty of ventilation on, but not allowing a direct draft.

As regards supports, some people prefer the round wire supports, which are useful in private places, but where one has many to handle it is better to use the long wires and thread them through crossways with string.

Temperature and Moisture.

There has always been a difference of opinion about the temperature in which carnations should be grown. I find that all white carnations will stand more heat than colored ones. The temperature should never on any occasion be allowed to drop below 50 degrees at night and 60 degrees in the daytime, and whites will take five per cent more heat.

The benches should never be allowed to dry out. When you permit this to happen and then water them, it gives too great an impetus to the plants, thereby causing a considerable number of splits. I do not believe any person ever lived who can prevent splits. It can be helped somewhat by watching the temperature closely, but one cannot rule the weather and you will always notice that when a period of dull weather is followed by two or three bright days, a large percentage of flowers split.

As regards pests, red spider is about the worst, but this cannot well be avoided in dull weather. One is afraid to syringe on account of getting rust, and if he does not syringe he will be badly annoyed by spider. A good, strong application of Aphine will eradicate red spider. Fumigation should be resorted to in case of aphids. I find a little tobacco powder and red pepper the best. As regards rust, the Aphine Mfg. Co. has a new solution that eradicates rust. I am glad to say that we are seldom troubled with the latter two pests.

From the Shipper's Point of View.

I should just like to mention here, from the shipper's point of view, how hard it is to please everybody. A lot of growers invariably buy the cuttings out of the sand. They have them expressed to them, and perhaps, on arrival, they lie around a few hours; then they are potted and often placed in a bright house, with no papers over them.

If people will buy rooted cuttings they must expect a certain amount of loss. One cannot guarantee, under the best of conditions, that they will be all right after their transfer to perhaps an entirely different continent. Speaking of this reminds me that we sent orders of 3,000 carnations to W. W. Wells, in England, and they were delayed ten days in addition to the ordinary voyage, yet we received word that they were in fine condition on arrival and not one cutting was lost. We had the same report from Germany. This is encouraging, especially when it is considered that in some other cases, when the cuttings have been shipped only twenty miles or so, the consignee reports that he has lost practically all of them.

Potting Rooted Cuttings.

My advice to those buying rooted cuttings is to pot them up in moist soil and place them in a north house for a week. Afterward they can be brought out in the sunshine and you will find that your percentage of loss is small.

In conclusion, gentlemen, I would say that any question you wish to ask I shall be pleased to answer. It is somewhat difficult for a commercial man to prepare an essay without mixing his business with it. I may state that our carnations practically have the same attention as our chrysanthemums, and I consider we have started well in the field of carnation novelties, with Wo-denethe as a beginner. It is certainly going to take everything by storm.

I think you will excuse this remark, but I am proud, after starting with Lizzie McGowan, as I did, that I should be connected with one of the best whites of today, namely, Wodenethe.

THE PINK BOSTON MARKET.

In these days when so many growers think nothing will do but the biggest carnation, it is interesting to find one who gets his best profit out of a medium sized flower. Pennsylvania is described as a pink Boston market. It originated with P. M. De Witt, Bridge-water, Pa., as a seedling of Boston market and Harlowarden. Mr. De Witt has been growing it for five years and thinks more highly of it every season. The accompanying illustration shows one of his houses in which the variety is planted in elevated solid beds. He says it does fully as well so handled as when grown on a bench and he expects this house to give him a continuous cut of high grade blooms for weeks after the bench grown stock has run out.

bedding variety in Europe, will soon be running up to flower. Like the herbaceous section, it likes to be grown cool. This will be found a valuable plant for Memorial day work, either to sell as a pot plant or for cutting. It lasts splendidly and does not shake out or bruise like the large flowered section. The variety Golden Gem is the best of the type. There is also a hybrid between this and the herbaceous section, with much larger golden yellow flowers, named C. Stewarti, which is a fine variety for florists to grow.

Pansies and Myosotis.

Pansies and myosotis are valuable for spring sales and sell specially well when put up in small handle baskets, which purchasers can conveniently carry home. The demand for these commences as soon as frost has left the ground and continues until Memorial day. If you grow a few hundreds or thousands of these, you have probably wintered them in coldframes and given them a light winter mulch of leaves or hay. This should now be removed and the plants well watered. If kept moderately close for a few days, they will start away to grow in good shape and a month hence will be flowering freely. If, however, an earlier batch is needed, lift a quantity and plant them closely in some spare bench in your violet house. As single violets are now practically done, part of the bench or bed space can be profitably utilized by pansies, myosotis or double daisies, all three of which are popular flowers.

Pansies Outdoors.

While it is time to remove the mulch from pansies in coldframes, it is not safe to take away the covering from those in the open. We often get a spell of hot weather in March which tempts us to do foolish things, as these warm spells are generally succeeded by a breath of Arctic weather and the biting winds and hot sun's rays raise havoc with the little plants if prematurely uncovered. Always make haste slowly in removing winter mulch, not only from pansies, but many other plants. It is best removed by degrees. Take a little away where it seems thick, but leave enough to cover the plants until well into April.

Pruning Hardy Climbers.

Such climbers as wistarias, Bignonia radicans, Aristolochia Sipho, actinidias and any of the ornamental grapevines, such as Vitis Labrusca and V. Coignetiae, if not yet pruned should be attended to at once. The popular Clematis paniculata should be cut back quite hard. Even if headed to the ground, it will soon cover all its allotted space. Except in the warmer states, it is still a little early to prune the climbing roses. They must not be cut back hard. All they need is to have the dead and weak wood removed, and if the long, strong canes which start from the ground can be bent down somewhat, they will flower more abundantly than if tied up erect. The climbing hydrangea, Hydrangea scandens, does not require any pruning, unless it be dead wood, but speaking of hydrangeas reminds us that this is the time to head back the shrubby varieties, paniculata grandiflora and arborescens, quite hard.

Perennial Phlox.

If you want to increase your stock of herbaceous phlox of any particular varieties, lift a few clumps as soon as the ground is open. Place them in a cool greenhouse and they will soon yield an abundant crop of cuttings, which, if inserted in the cutting bench in the same

SEASONABLE

SUGGESTIONS

Show Pelargoniums.

Where show pelargoniums were not pinched late the plants will already be carrying flower trusses, and these should be in nice flower for the middle of April. Give them a sunny house, yet one where a low night temperature of 45 degrees or so is maintained. Give the plants an occasional fresh stand and do not omit a weekly fumigation. Feed liberally with liquid manure. An alternate top-dressing of Clay's or some other equally highly concentrated fertilizer will also assist in making the wood firm and cause the plants to flower freely.

Potting Foliage Plants.

Spring is almost here and to the south has already arrived. The blooming of early bulbs, the songs of early birds and the passing of ice and snow indicate that the strenuous season is at hand. Any repotting of palms, ferns or foliage plants of any description whatever should be done now, as there will be so many jobs crowding in a few days that if work like this is not done now it will probably not be done at all. Crotons, dracenas, araucarias, ficus, aralias, marantas and many other useful foliage plants, if intended for pot culture throughout the summer, will pay for a little overhauling now.

Rambler Roses.

The flower trusses on rambler roses should now all be showing prominently and if these show color by the end of March they will be all right for Easter, if grown in a night temperature of 55 degrees. Do not resort to any hard forcing, unless it is an absolute necessity. It only means softer plants, which fall an easy prey to mildew, and flowers of a paler color than those grown cooler. Now is the time to feed the plants well with liquid manure twice a week. Discontinue it, however, when the flowers are opening, as if continued it will take away some of their color. The old Crimson Rambler it will be found opens somewhat earlier than the pink varieties. As an Easter plant its sale has heavily decreased since the advent of the pink varieties. Of the latter Tausendschon promises to be in heavy demand the coming Easter, while Dorothy Perkins is being grown by almost everyone. Those who have the white Dorothy will also find it a great seller. Hiawatha, single scarlet, is another popular sort, which, while a true single, is charming and preferred by nearly all lady purchasers to Crimson Rambler.

Calceolarias.

As the flower stems begin to run up on the herbaceous calceolarias, it becomes necessary to do a little staking. These stakes should be light and are better if painted green, as indeed are all stakes in pot plants. Nothing disfigures a well grown plant more than a number of heavy brown, yellow or white stakes. As these stakes can be purchased inexpensively, their increased use is to be commended. You can hardly grow the calceolarias too cool; 40 degrees at night is quite high enough, unless you are in a hurry for them, and as they are much more attacked by aphid in 10 degrees more heat, they will need closer attention. The sun's rays are now getting strong and the plants will be benefited by some shade. As the pots are well filled with roots, apply liquid cow or sheep manure once in four or five days until the flowers are opening. Calceolaria rugosa, the popular way as chrysanthemums, will root within a month. If bench space for them indoors is limited, they will root in an ordinary coldframe, only it will take them a little longer. Keep them well watered and shaded and few will fail to root. These cuttings planted out in nursery rows six to eight inches apart will produce splendid heads of flower in late summer, much superior to those carried on the older clumps, and these are what nurserymen sell as "strong field-grown plants" each fall. Phloxes are probably the most valuable of all herbaceous flowering perennials and every florist should have a good bed of them.

New Carnation House of Dobbs & Son, Auburn, N.Y.

Annual Climbers.

It is a mistake to sow annual climbers too early under glass, for being in nearly every case of rapid growth they become too tall before the selling season arrives. A few varieties which are popular can now be started. These include Cobæa scandens and C. scandens alba, balloon vine, cypress vine (Ipomœa Quamoclit), moonflower (Ipomœa grandiflora alba), Lophospermum scandens, canary creeper (Tropæolum Canariense) and the various thunbergias. The latter are not really climbers, but are useful as trailers for vases, piazza boxes, window boxes and baskets. For the same purpose the maurandias and Kenilworth ivy (Linaria Cymbalaria) are also valuable. Start all these seeds in a brisk, moist heat and pot off singly as soon as they can be handled, their growth being made so quickly that they will spoil or become entangled if neglected even a few days.

Spiræa Queen Alexandra.

Spiræa Queen Alexandra requires a longer season of growth than the ordinary white forcing varieties. It succeeds much better when treated as a Memorial day plant than when forced for Easter. For Memorial day use it is now time to start the plants. Hard forcing will not be necessary, but to have them strong and vigorous give them a house kept at 50 to 55 degrees at night. As soon as the plants show color move them into a cooler house, where the glass is well shaded, as when exposed to bright sunshine the beautiful peach-pink flowers fade out almost white. For bouquet work this spiræa is one of the finest things introduced for many years and growers who sent in batches of it in a cut state last year easily realized $6 per hundred for them. Buy some clumps at once if you want to get something good and have not yet grown it.

Azaleas.

It can be seen with tolerable certainty now whether plants wanted for Easter will be in season or not. If the plants are each opening a few flowers when April comes in, they will be all right. If not, they will need some pushing. Give late plants 65 degrees at night and spray freely until you are sure they are going to be on time. A few good Easter varieties are Bernard Andre alba, Niobe, Ver-væneana, Professor Wolters, Apollo and Empress of India. Dwarf plants of such sorts as Indica alba and Charles Encke are also salable. Plants in flower can be held quite cold. Shade the glass well in the house where the plants are in full flower.

Gladioli.

The earliest batch of Gladiolus The Bride and G. Peach Blossom will soon be in flower and make a welcome addition to the list of spring flowers. To keep up a good succession, bring a few boxes into heat every ten days. Do not force them hard; 50 degrees at night is as warm as they require. The batch wanted for Memorial day, a time when there is a practically unlimited demand for flowers of this description, need not be housed yet for a couple of weeks. Benches where the large flowering varieties, such as America, May and Shakespeare, are growing should be scratched over once a week and when spikes appear water should be given abundantly. Just as soon as the ground can be worked outdoors an early batch can be planted. The ground should be well manured and the bulbs planted six inches deep. From bulbs planted thus early spikes can be cut through the month of June. It is a mistake to merely cover the bulbs. Deeper planting prevents the plants from being blown over during wet, windy weather and the plants are much finer, the roots being down in moist earth before the summer droughts arrive.

Primula Obconica.

Many of the later sown plants of Primula obconica are still in good condition and there is certainly no flowering plant which is more generally satisfactory as a house plant than P. obconica. Its poisonous properties have prejudiced many against it, but it is satisfactory nevertheless to see that it remains popular. Plants in small pots, if massed together in 6-inch or 8-inch pans, one color to a pan, will sell much better than in the small pots. They are one of the finest of all plants in window boxes and if well watered will flower for months in even a warm room, the only attention needed being the removal of dead flowers occasionally.

BUSINESS BOOMING.

With all the talk that is going on of the marvelous rate at which the greenhouse business is growing in the west, sight should not be lost of the fact that the business also is growing in that part of the country where florists already are most numerous. The state of New York has more florists than any other state in the Union and The Review has more subscribers in the state of New York than in any of the forty-seven other states. In such towns as Auburn, in central New York, greenhouse building is proceeding at a rate that seems to increase each year. The accompanying illustrations show the exterior of the old plant of Dobbs & Son, at Auburn, and the interior of the new carnation house at the new plant this firm recently started. They are planning to make an extensive addition to the new plant this season, for business is booming with them all the time, running far ahead of any previous year.

FERTILIZERS

FOR FLORISTS

WHAT THEY ARE AND HOW USED.

Natural and Artificial.

A fertilizer is defined as "any substance which, when added to the soil, adds directly or indirectly to the amount of nutritive substances available to the plants growing in that soil." However, to better understand the role that fertilizers play in the growing of plants, one should understand what elements are necessary for the development of the plant itself.

Among the elements necessary for plant growth are carbon, oxygen, hydrogen, sulphur, potassium, phosphorus, calcium, magnesium, iron, chlorine, sodium and silicon. Although the last three are found in nearly all plants, the plants will grow without them. The question then arises as to where the plant secures these elements. With the exception of carbon, all are taken from the soil. The soil, then, is the source of all the mineral elements which are represented by the ash of the plant. All this mineral food-stuff is taken up in solution through the minute root-hairs of the plant.

The carbon which is used in building up food substances which are later used in the construction of plant tissues is taken through the breathing pores of the leaves and other green parts of the plant. Carbon is taken up in the form of carbon dioxide and is decomposed by the energy of sunlight acting on the chlorophyll bodies of the living cell; the carbon and part of the oxygen are combined with other elements to form foods and the remainder of the oxygen is given off to the air. As carbon dioxide is always present in the air, there is no need to worry about the source of the supply of this food-stuff. To give the plants a sufficient supply means merely good ventilation.

The Most Important Elements.

It is well to study the role of some of the more important mineral elements.

Nitrogen is necessary for cell building or growth. It is specifically directed to increasing the vegetative parts. An excess of nitrogen tends to make the plant grow for too long a period, forming more leaves and shoots and retarding the development of the flowers and seeds. It also tends to deepen the color of the leaves.

Phosphorus is necessary for the formation of protoplasm and tends to increase the ripening process, particularly seed formation. It thus causes an early ripening of the crop.

Potassium is necessary for the formation of carbo-hydrates, such as sugar and starch, and plays an important part in the development of the wood and the fleshy parts of the fruit.

Magnesium is a constituent of chlorophyll.

Calcium is present in all plants and serves to neutralize the acids formed during growth.

Iron is necessary for the formation of chlorophyll, and its absence produces chlorosis.

All these elements are found in the soil in varying quantities, but three of them—nitrogen, phosphorus and potassium—are used in such large quantities that they are likely to become exhausted. These, then, must be added from time to time to secure the best developments. Also, to get the best results, they must be in the proper proportion. The effect of their presence in insufficient quantity or absence of the necessary elements entirely is perhaps best expressed by the law of minimum: "The nutrient present in the soil in minimum quantity gives a standard for the amount of production as a whole," or, in other words, the limited element determines the size of the crop.

The availability of an element also affects the growth of the plant. The availability is determined by the form in which it is found in the soil.

Necessity for Natural Manures.

Fertilizers are of two general types, known as natural manures and artificial fertilizers. By natural manures are meant the cleanings from cow barns, horse stables, hen coops, etc., mixed with decaying vegetable matter of various kinds.

Natural manures, when added to the soil, serve two functions: First, they add to the supply of the elements necessary for growth; second, they improve the physical properties of the soil. Those soils that are clayey and compact are made more open and porous by the separation of the particles so that air and water can enter more freely, thus acting directly on the insoluble constituents. The roots of the plant can also penetrate more readily. Those soils that are light are also benefited, by the filling of the spaces between the particles, thus making it more compact. Artificial or commercial fertilizers, on the other hand, merely add to the fertility without making any great change in the physical properties of the soil. This is not always true, as a few are sometimes injurious if used by themselves.

It must also be kept in mind that bacteria do much to increase the fertility of the soil, by making many of the insoluble compounds soluble. To give these helpful forms the best chances for development, the soil must contain decaying organic matter. It is well, then, to keep in mind that a small quantity, at least, of natural manure should be added to our greenhouse soils.

In the past the tendency has been to use nothing but natural manures, but their scarcity in the present day has made it necessary to add commercial fertilizers to the florist's list.

Of the natural manures the two that are in most common use are barnyard and stable manures. These differ somewhat in character. Barnyard manure is a cold manure and ferments rather slowly, so that there is less danger in its use when it is not thoroughly decayed. Stable

THE WILSONS OF ROCHESTER.

More than a quarter of a century ago Hiram E. Wilson began the cultivation of flowers on an extensive scale, first as a wholesale grower and later in the retail field. As the business increased in volume, Mr. Wilson soon discovered that one of his most valuable assets was a trio of ambitious sons, who believed there was an opportunity to establish a trade that would increase from year to year and eventually give each of them a department under his own management.

So these three boys—Edwin P., Hiram W. and Ransford W.—were introduced to the routine work of the greenhouse and potting benches, as well as the outdoor tasks in the hot sun. And the boys stuck to the job, learning the unpleasant parts of the work as well as the pleasant, until any one of them could perform any task about the place and do it right, too. Then came a course of training in the retail store. Here, again, the spirit of "staying on the job" showed itself, and it soon became apparent that the time had come for a change in the management of the business, and that each one should be given a special department.

Edwin P. Wilson, the oldest son, had developed a talent for managing a retail store, and to him fell the work of caring for the store located at 88 Main street, east. As Rochester increased in population the Wilson business increased, and the greenhouses were taxed to the utmost to supply the demands made by this store.

Then came another change. The old greenhouses were remodeled, new ones of the most improved type were erected, and the entire supervision of the greenhouses and fields was assumed by Hiram W. Wilson. When a man loves his work he usually makes a success of it; here is, indeed, a successful greenhouse manager, one who watches details, who handles a force of from fifteen to twenty men without friction and gets the best there is in them. In connection with the houses is a retail store that is also under Hiram W.'s management. Some idea of Hiram W. Wilson's duties may be gleaned from the fact that over two acres of land are under glass, and over twenty acres under cultivation. Carnations, mums and roses receive the greatest attention, although somewhere on the place one can find almost anything needed for a general retail florist's trade.

About four years ago the time seemed opportune to open another retail store and the Rochester Floral Co. made its first opening at 375 Main street, east, under the management of Ransford W. Wilson. This store was a success from the start, but building changes on Main street made a removal necessary a little more than a year ago, and new quarters were found at 245 Main street, east. Ransford W. is the real estate manager for H. E. Wilson, looking after something like twenty-five pieces of investment property in various parts of the city, as well as the property interests in the town of Irondequoit.

Hiram E. Wilson is still an active man, but has in a great measure placed the responsibilities of the large and increasing business on the shoulders of the boys, and serves now in an advisory capacity. During the last summer, however, he took an active part in the planting of a 16-acre field of stock, hardly a day passing that he was not on the ground, noting the progress of the plants, offering advice and suggestions and otherwise showing that his heart was still in the work of growing and caring for flowers. E. F. R.

BOSTON.The Market.

Business was quite poor last week. We had a hot spell followed by a severe cold wave and later by rain. Of white roses there is as yet no surplus, but all other varieties are abundant and lower in price. Among other varieties some excellent Chatenay are noted and My Maryland is seen of improved quality. The Killarneys, however, remain the most popular varieties. Carnations are arriving in unwieldy numbers and are increasingly difficult to clean up. Among the light pinks Fair Maid is beginning to assert itself. This is an excellent summer variety and one which holds its color well. Single violets are still abundant and of good quality. The present month will, however, finish all of these, except such as are growing in coldframes. Sweet peas continue abundant and many are of grand quality. There is still a wide range in prices, the short-stemmed ones being difficult to dispose of.

Callas and lilies continue overplentiful, as is lily of the valley. Marguerites continue to sell freely and there is no trouble in selling all good flowers of both white and yellow. Dutch bulbous stock is still somewhat of a glut, tulips, narcissi and hyacinths all being overabundant, with prices tending downward. English primroses are becoming quite plentiful and sell well. Myosotis is a glut and hard to move. Antirrhinums of taking shades of color are selling well. Mignonette moves slowly. Gardenias are abundant and selling slowly. In orchids, cattleyas are getting scarce, but cælogynes and dendrobiums are plentiful. Adiantum is now of better quality. Asparagus Sprengeri and plumosus are a slower sale. Plant sales continue to pick up.

Club Meeting.

A big and enthusiastic gathering March 21, this being the meeting immediately preceding the S. A. F. show and convention. The report of the banquet committee was read and showed a balance on the right side. Donors of cut flowers and plants were thanked and special thanks were tendered George M. Anderson for his decorations. Thomas Pegler, chairman of the S. A. F. entertainment committee, reported that contributions had come in satisfactorily and that everything pointed to a record gathering at the club reception to be tendered to visiting guests in Paul Revere hall March 29, and not March 30, as incorrectly announced in the official program. All arrangements had been perfected for the reception and a first-class caterer and orchestra engaged. W. H. Elliott spoke for the Rose Society, Wm. Sim for the Sweet Pea Society, Mr. Farquhar and others for the S. A. F. show committee. Every foot of space is taken in the trade display and there are as many as twelve entries in some of the competitive classes. The club offers a prize of $50 for six acacias.

Owing to the near approach of the big show, exhibits were fewer than usual.

The membership list again received an addition, there being ten new members admitted. The question box contained a number of queries, which were taken up and answered, relating to gardenia culture; whether Carnation Pink Delight is a superior variety to Enchantress, which brought out a diversity of opinions. Whether hybrid amaryllis should ever be completely dried off was answered in the negative. What caused forced tulips to make healthy roots and growth and all flowers turn brown, might be due to one of several causes, premature lifting, too little moisture at the root, or too early forcing of naturally mid-season or late varieties. One query was of what benefit the S. A. F. was to the private gardener and this brought out some discussion.

An invitation to hold a field day in August at the gladiolus fields of B. Hammond Tracy was received and referred to the executive committee. It was announced that at the April meeting Mr. Tracy will lecture on "The Gladiolus and Its Culture."

Various Notes.

Some of the larger exhibitors at the S. A. F. National Show were getting their exhibits in position as early as March 20. Farquhar & Co. are busy at work on their elaborate Dutch garden, so is Philip Carbone on his Italian garden, while some of the larger trade exhibitors are here in person making active preparations for their stands. The reception by the Gardeners' and Florists' Club in Paul Revere hall will be Wednesday evening, March 29, and not as on the official program. The carnation meeting will come on the following evening. There will be entertainment in plenty for all visitors, as automobile excursions, theater parties, etc., are arranged for. From all parts of the country are coming advices of visitors coming and the coming show and convention will undoubtedly bring together more gardeners and florists at one time than ever before in America.

The severe cold wave which suddenly struck us March 15 caught some florists napping. With the wind blowing sixty miles an hour and temperature little above zero, those who retired figuring on a mild night awoke to get a disagreeable surprise. F. W. Fletcher, of Auburndale, had one house of bedding stock destroyed. A few squares of glass out gave the wind an entrance which soon demolished the roof. William Patterson, of Wollaston, lost a house of carnations. The end doors blew open during the night and everything was found stiff in the morning. The fierce wind blew over a horse and delivery team laden with boxes of roses belonging to the Waban Conservatories, but no great damage was done. Many minor losses were reported.

Everett E. Cummings, of Woburn, has broken ground for three new houses, 40x150, to be devoted to single violets. He has had phenomenal success with Princess of Wales, and March 18 easily sold 25,000 of grand quality. He follows the violets with cucumbers, except one house of Comet tomatoes.

Thomas Roland's stock for the show is of grand quality. His rambler roses are just right and he has a superb lot of acacias, ericas, genistas, bougainvilleas, hydrangeas and other plants.

A. Leuthy & Co., of Roslindale, have a superb lot of giganteum lilies, many thousands in number, for Easter. They have also a beautiful lot of gardenias, azaleas, crataegus, genistas, etc. They will have a large group at the S. A. F. show and will compete in many classes.

The Sutermeister estate, of Readville, lost a load of plants by fire a few days ago. A team was being sent into Boston. The heater set fire to the wagon and, a strong wind blowing, the driver did not notice anything amiss until the heat caused him to look around. Wagon and contents were a total loss.

J. W. Simpson, of Woburn, is one of the heaviest shippers of yellow marguerites to the Boston Co-Operative Market. His Fair Maid and Beacon carnations are extra fine, with stems of remarkable length.

John McKenzie, of North Cambridge, is sick in bed with the grip.

B. J. McGinty, at the Boston Co-Operative Market, has just recovered from an attack of laryngitis.

J. T. Butterworth has a superb lot of valley in pots. These and orchids will be among his exhibits at the show.

Penn Bros. are keeping busy during the lenten season. Henry Penn will be back for the show and the firm will be among the exhibitors in its special lines. Gardenias, violets and valley are all selling well here.

J. A. Zinn, on Park street, made a fine window display March 18 of Rose Mrs. Aaron Ward, from W. H. Elliott, and Princess of Wales violets from Everett E. Cummings. The two colors contrasted nicely and attracted much attention from passers-by.

J. Newman & Sons continue to have a heavy business in funeral work and find business for the dull season quite good. They had a pretty table decoration of lavender sweet peas and lily of the valley in one of their windows last week.

J. Leach & Son have their new light pink carnation, Pink Supreme, in excellent shape and it should render a favorable account of itself at the big show next week. W. N. Craig.

The Flower Growers' Sales Co., capital $25,000, has been granted a charter. The incorporators are E. Allan Peirce, Louis J. Reuter, John F. Edgar and William Jurgens.

DENVER.

The Market.

Business picked up considerably in the middle of last week, a great deal of it being due to funeral work. The first of the week was rather dull and for a time it looked as though it might continue all week, but on Wednesday there was a great rush that has kept up pretty well.

White carnations have been scarce, and the price for St. Patrick's day was advanced. This was a banner day for the florists. Everyone colored just a few more carnations than he thought he would need, but several were sold out before noon and it was impossible to buy any at wholesale. American Beauties are off crop, and the few that come in are easily disposed of. Smilax is "worth its weight in gold." One florist was fortunate enough to buy twenty-five strings, but when asked where he got it he refused to tell.

Easter stock looks quite promising, but many of the Easter lilies have practically no stems. Bulb stock is fine, and there will be quantities of it.

The California violet peddlers keep one busy watching their movements. They are here one week, and away the next.

Hiram W. Wilson.

Last week they appeared with violets of especially poor quality, but the bunches were large and only 20 cents was asked, so that quantities were sold.

Club Meeting.

The Colorado Florists' Club met Tuesday evening, March 14, at the offices of the Park Floral Co. An effort had been made to get some of the members to give a five-minute talk on any subject that they wished, but most of those on the program got stage fright, or something else, and failed to respond. G. A. Rolin, when called on, told of his experiences here in the early days, and from that time up to the present. Mr. Rolin evidently spent a great deal of time on his paper, and deserves credit for it. E. S. Kennedy read an article on a visit to the cliff dwellers in Aztec, N. M. J. A. Sked tried to get some information in regard to growing Easter lilies, but all were silent on the subject. Even those who have been successful refused to tell the secret, and Mr. Sked is still in the dark. Geo. H. Cooper had charge of the music, Mr. Valentine having loaned his Victrola for the occasion. A quartette was organized, and we expect to have some good singing at future meetings.

The meetings of this club will hereafter be held on the first Tuesday in the month, instead of the second Tuesday.

Various Notes.

Thos. Chapman has obtained the final patents on a device with which he has been working for years. It is an orchard lighting apparatus, to be used in the spring when there is danger of frost. The orchard thermometer can be set at any degree, and when the temperature drops to that point a gong is sounded in the farmer's house, or at some other convenient place, and in ten minutes an orchard of ten acres can be lighted by simply throwing a switch, which causes an electric spark to travel quickly from one smudge pot to the next. Mr. Chapman is justly proud of his success, and expects his invention to net him a great many dollars in the next few years. When his expectations come true, he is going to retire from the florist business.

John Emsbach, who for the last twenty years has been with the Elitch-Long Greenhouses, has given up his position there, and is now working for the Park Floral Co.

A Ford torpedo runabout, fully equipped, will be given away June 12 by the Park Floral Co.

W. H. Grimes has gone into the geranium business quite heavily this spring. Just now he has 30,000 geraniums in 4-inch pots.

J. A. Jensen has entered the employ of the Park Floral Co., and will have entire charge of the landscape work. He was formerly with John Withers and Theodore Wirth.

The only Denver florists who will attend the National Flower Show are J. A. Valentine and Emil Glauber. They left Denver last Sunday evening, Mrs. Valentine going with them as far as Omaha, and from there to Minneapolis, Minn., to visit her father. Before returning home she will go to Blue Island, Ill., to be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Rudd.

Visitors: C. A. Espelin, Fort Collins, Colo.; Ed. Johnson, Wm. H. Evans and John Berry, Colorado Springs, Colo.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

While business remained good the greater part of last week, it was not active enough to keep pace with the supply. Especially was this true with violets, valley and bulbous stock. Roses were quite plentiful and moved pretty well. Good carnations held their own, while the poorer grades were at the mercy of the buyers. The demand for white carnations for St. Patrick's day was ahead of any previous year. Owing to the spring openings at the different department stores, asparagus strings moved well.

Various Notes.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Currie left for Montreal March 19, for a short visit. From there they intend to go to the National Flower Show at Boston, at which city Mrs. Currie will make a month's visit. Mr. Currie will return in about a fortnight.

Nic Zweifel, of North Milwaukee, will stage some of his white seedling carnation, No. 274, at the Boston show next week.

The Aug. F. Kellner Co. came in for their share of the spring openings of several of the large department stores. With the spring-like weather they are daily booking orders for outdoor work.

Bowling.

March 19 the Chicago bowlers and rooters put in an appearance and, with ideal weather, the whole affair moved on without a hitch. On arrival the guests were tendered an automobile ride in the cars of H. V. Hunkel, W. A. Kennedy, Nic Zweifel and Fred Holton. After dinner, which was taken at the Charlotte hotel, the auto trip was continued till 2:30, at which time they landed at the bowling alleys at Eleventh and Prairie streets and got right down to business. The line-up and scores were as follows:

NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW.

The National Flower Show, which the S. A. F. and the special flower societies have had in preparation for three years, will open at Boston Saturday evening, March 25, and continue to the evening of Saturday, April 1. It will be the great trade event of the year and the floor space of the large Mechanics building will be none too great to accommodate the flower show and the trade's display. As reduced railroad fares have been granted as far west as the Mississippi river, a large attendance of those in the trade is assured.

THE NATIONAL SHOW MANAGER.

Frank R. Pierson, chairman of the committee of the S. A. F. charged with the arrangements for the National Flower Show of next week, congratulates himself that the happiest stroke in the months of work which have been done was the selection of Chester I. Campbell as general manager of the exhibition. The committee discovered, early after its organization, that it was impossible to find a florist who had all the necessary qualifications for handling the infinite amount of detail connected with the management of the show. No florist could take from his business a sufficient amount of time, and no florist could be found with experience in the management of such a mammoth and costly affair as was contemplated. In Mr. Campbell the committee found a professional showman of wide experience, a man of such infinite tact and pleasing personality that it was habitual with him to get what he wanted, and get it without friction. Mr. Pierson and the committee early realized the happiness of their selection, and the exhibitors and the trade at large will come to appreciate it when they find with what rare foresight every contingency has been provided for.

LADIES' S. A. F.

F. R. Pierson, chairman of the National Flower Show Committee, has requested the secretary of this society to issue orders for members' season tickets to all who have paid their dues for 1911. Members will find the secretary at exhibition hall ready to receive dues and issue orders. Be sure to bring your order, as no duplicate will be issued. Please wear your badge pin.

Mrs. J. V. Phillips, Pres.,

Mrs. Chas. H. Maynard, Sec'y.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

At next week's rose show in Boston the Brant-Hentz Flower Co. will exhibit a new rose, Madison, and says of it: "This rose is a cross between Bride, Pearl and Meteor, has foliage resembling holly foliage, flowers white, resembling Bride, large buds, foliage nearly impossible to take mildew on account of its hardness; the plants will bloom five flowers to Bride's three. There is little blind wood and cuts continually throughout the whole year." E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., will show Sunburst, to be distributed next year. Stockton & Howe, Princeton, N. J., will bring out one called Princeton. S. J. Reuter & Son bring out two new roses: Double Improved White Killarney, a pure white sport from the Waban strain of White Killarney, which they describe as much larger bud, double the size of the ordinary Chester I. Campbell,

(General Manager, National Flower Show.)

White Killarney, stronger and more vigorous in growth, making a larger plant, with heavy foliage, an excellent summer white and the ideal white for winter; Cerise Pink Killarney, a deep pink sport from Killarney, having a velvety sheen and beautiful shading, deeper than Killarney at its best and having a heavier bud.

The State Florists' Association of Indiana a year ago invited the Rose Society to go to Indianapolis in 1912 and the invitation has now been renewed. Benj. Hammond, Sec'y.

MR. WIRTH DISCLAIMS CREDIT.

On the list of guarantors of the National Flower Show Theodore Wirth's name appears in the schedule. Credit should be given not to Mr. Wirth personally, but to the Minnesota State Florists' Association, of which Mr. Wirth is president. The Minnesota State Florists' Association, wishing to show its interest in the affairs of the national association, was among the first to subscribe to the guarantee fund. Proper credit is given on the stationery of the National Flower Show, but through some inadvertence in the schedule only Mr. Wirth's name appears. It should be the Minnesota State Florists' Association, Minneapolis, Minn.

ANOTHER SHOW IN BOSKOOP.

In commemoration of the fiftieth anniversary of the Pomological Society, a flower exhibition will take place from April 5 to 20.

His Royal Highness Prince Henry of the Netherlands has accepted the patronage of this exposition, while the Secretary of Agriculture, Industry and Commerce and the Commissioner of the Queen for South Holland have accepted the place of honorary chairmen. Furthermore, the Under-Secretary of Agriculture and the Mayor of Boskoop will act as honorary president and president of the committee of honor.

The great number of exhibits, which will demonstrate the great variety of plants Boskoop produces for export, will be judged by an international jury composed of sixty of the best known horticulturists from twelve different countries. J. C. de Marez Oyens, L. D. D., chairman of the Dutch Horticultural Council, has kindly consented to act as chairman of the jury.

D. A. Koster, Chairman,
D. Frets, Secretary; of the Committee.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY.

The E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., has offered the following special prizes for the exhibition of the Chrysanthemum Society of America to be held at St. Louis in November: For the best ten blooms of Emberta, $10; for the best ten blooms of Wells' Late Pink, $10; for the best ten blooms of Golden Gem, $10.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, '01.
 Officers for 1911: President, George Asmus,
 Chicago; vice-president, R. Vincent, Jr., White
 Marsh, Md.; secretary, H. B. Dörner, Urbana,
 Ill.; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.
 Special convention and National Flower Show,
 Boston, Mass., March 25 to April 1, 1911.
 Annual convention, Baltimore, Md., August 15
 to 18, 1911.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
 We both have them.

SPEAKING by the almanac, spring is here; arrived Tuesday at noon.

No, gentle reader, this is NOT a special number of The Review. The specials come March 30 and April 6.

THE rains in California have interfered with the picking of Mexican ivy and the supply therefore has been temporarily short.

IF L. S. J., Cleveland, will send his full name and address his questions will be answered. Anonymous inquiries never are answered.

IN other lines of trade it certainly is not the custom to allow wholesale rates simply because the would-be buyer asks for them or may know what they are.
 Why, then, should it be done with florists' or nurserymen's products? There is only one answer—the fear that "the 'other fellow' will if I don't."

A COPY of "The Carnation Year Book," published by the Perpetual Flowering Carnation Society of Great Britain, has reached The Review. It is a volume of seventy-six pages, not counting the advertising section, and gives in concrete form the status of the carnation in England today. The volume is edited by J.
 S. Brunton, Burnley, and is sent post free on payment of 30 cents.

THE failure of the new rose, Rayon d'Or, distributed last year by Pernet-Ducher, has been the subject of much comment in the trade in Europe. The raiser acknowledges that the stock sent out was not as strong as it might have been, but places the blame on climatic conditions, over which he had no control;
 he had "either to deliver the best stock he had or default on his contracts."

IN commenting on the paper of E. G.
 Hill, read before the Illinois State Florists' Association and printed in The Review for February 16, the Horticultural Advertiser (English) says: "Mr. Hill's name is familiar to most of us as a leading American authority on new plants.
 His opinions are the result of actual observation, and not mere gleanings and excerpts from catalogues which are often served up in the press as 'information' on novelties and which are often of less value than the paper they are printed on."

IN an address to the florists of his state the venerable Mr. Burrell, vice-president of the University of Illinois, had this to say: "It is an axiom that demand creates supply, but you flower growers have also to consider the opposite law, that supply creates demand. It is your work not only to produce flowers but to show them to the people, that their love of the beautiful may be quickened and that the supply you have provided may beget the demand that brings you profit.
 Fortunate are you flower men in this land of ninety million prosperous people that you can create your supply and so easily create the demand to keep pace with that supply to your own enrichment."

OBITUARY.

John Lavey.

John Lavey, ground foreman at the nurseries of F. E. Grover & Co., at Brighton, Rochester, N. Y., died March 8, of valvular disease of the heart. He fell to the floor while engaged at his duties in one of the storage rooms, and died almost instantly. He was 50 years old, unmarried, and had been employed about the nurseries for eight years.

William A. Blaedel.

William A. Blaedel, 402 West Twenty-third street, New York, died Friday, March 17. He was one of the pioneer retail florists of New York and was highly respected by all, conducting a prosperous business for nearly half a century.

George Lorenz.

Announcement is made of the death of George Lorenz, Woodside, N. Y., who was one of the oldest growers on Long Island and well and favorably known in the New York market. He was a member of the Society of American Florists for the last ten years.

M. E. Longfellow.

Marcus E. Longfellow, a florist of Yorktown, Ind., died recently at his home in that town, at the age of 51 years. He had returned only a few days previously from Florida, where he had spent the winter. He is survived by his wife, one daughter and two sons.

B. F. Washington.

Benjamin F. Washington, of North Stoughton, Mass., died at the home of his daughter, Miss Adeline Washington, March 14, at the age of 71 years. He was born in Boston and had resided in Stoughton for about thirty years. He was a member of Gen. Nelson A. Miles' command, Union Veterans' Union, of Brockton, and for several years had been quartermaster of Post 72, G. A. R., of Stoughton. Besides his daughter, he leaves one son, Benjamin Washington, Jr., a resident of Somerville, Mass.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Last week was carnation week, while this is rose week, for with bright skies and spring-like weather, "the melancholy days have come, the saddest of the year"; the days when scarcity and high prices are still fresh in mind, but the ice-boxes are so crammed with stock that no offer, reasonable or otherwise, is refused for the accumulations of fast deteriorating flowers. Once every spring we get the glut. This year it has been longer delayed than most of those in this market thought possible. There is a large volume of business being done, but the receipts of flowers are so far beyond the legitimate demand that it is impossible to make any sort of clearance.
 While fair prices still are being received for the selected stock required by the high class stores, the accumulations are jobbed off for whatever they will bring. By far the greater part of the cut goes at the job-lot prices, with the result that averages returned to growers are extremely low.

The only item in the list which can be called short is the American Beauty, which is extremely scarce in the longer grades. Cuts of Beauty are not nearly

READY TO BOOK YOUR ORDERS FOR LILIES

FOR EASTER

Really good Lilies will not be plentiful this Easter—too many ready too soon, too much disease, too many short stems. But our Lilies will be fine—all true Giganteums, clean, healthy and even; mostly long stems. Protect yourself by placing your order with us now.

Long stems, the best in the market.....	100	1000
Medium stems, fine flowers.....	$15.00	$125.00
Short stems, good flowers.....	12.50	100.00
	10.00	85.00

These will run three to five flowers to the stem, will be packed at the greenhouses in boxes of 100 and shipped without rehandling.

ROSES

These are very fine and plentiful.

We ask retailers to order freely of our Killarney and White Killarney, for we are certain that these roses, at the prices we now are able to make on them, will win friends for us by making friends for those who buy of us.

Finer Killarneys never were seen—better flowers, stronger stems or more perfect foliage—the crop is so large that we are able to give the trade the advantage of lower prices than they ever before were able to get such fine roses at. All lengths can be supplied in quantity.

Order some of these roses today and you will reorder every day.

CARNATIONS

We have never had a finer lot of stock, nor do we recall a season when prices have been more reasonable. Write for quotations on thousand lots—push for business and you will find this one of the most profitable seasons of the year.

SWEET PEAS

For years we have been headquarters for Sweet Peas, but we never have had at this date such fine stock or such large quantities as now. Extra long stems, carrying large, perfect flowers. All the fancy colors as well as white and pink. We are shipping these Peas, fresh picked, in great quantities and they never fail to give buyers the best of satisfaction.

Valley

Fine Valley is something you need every day in the year. We always have it. Order of us and get the best.

Violets

You get the cream of the crops, double or single, when you order of us. Thousand lots our specialty.

Place orders with us for home-grown Orchids and Gardenias.

so heavy as cuts of other roses. There is a fair supply of medium and shorter lengths, but hardly any of the extra long stems with perfect flowers.

Heavy as are the supplies of Killarney, White Killarney and other roses, the growers say the spring crop is just coming on and that the next few days will see much larger cuts. The quality of a large part of the stock is exceptionally fine. Those who can use good roses in quantity at a price are having their inning.

Going back to St. Patrick's day, anticipating a special demand for white carnations, the growers saved them up, with the result that, after the shipping demand had been supplied, the continued heavy receipts carried prices much below what had been anticipated by the growers. Some of the special sales people bought heavily March 17 and served to clear the market of all the carnations that were offered at cheap prices. March 18 values were a little better, but the present week opens with another heavy supply and the prospect of steady accumulation until Friday, when the special sales are again expected to afford some relief.

Bulbous stock has been as plentiful as carnations and it has been impossible to find a market for all of it. Easter lilies have been one of the chief problems; many growers are weeks too early with their Easter crop. The single violets are approaching the end of their season and the eastern stock is not coming in so heavily as a week or two ago. There is, however, no improvement in the salability of double violets.

The flower market is famous for its unexpected changes, but it seems fairly certain that the next fortnight will see all flowers in oversupply, prices at a low level, with the cheap sales people operating extensively; the big buyers at small prices always respond to a condition such as the present.

Mexican ivy was scarce for several days last week, said to be due to the excessively rainy season in California. Florida asparagus bunches are plentiful.

Various Notes.

Fred Lautenschlager is the advance guard of the Chicago delegation at the National Flower Show. He went to Boston March 18.

Work on the organization of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association is progressing. Pending the receipt of the charter no election has been had, but it is the plan that J. F. Kidwell is to be president and George Weiland secretary and treasurer. Some of those interested want to open their wholesale house early in May, while others favor opening in September.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The tone of the cut flower market improved during the week ending March 22. Saturday, March 18, saw the best clean-up since Lent began, with good business on some of the following days. The weather has shown March to a degree—a drop in temperature to 14 degrees, a snow stormlet, then balmy, spring-like hours of sunshine, followed by high wind to remind one that it is not May yet. The supply of flowers has not increased particularly under these rather adverse conditions. The features of the market are the continued scarcity of fancy Beauties, the wide range in the quality of sweet peas, the retrogression of single violets and the increased importance of southern daffodils. White carnations advanced in price in anticipation of St. Patrick's day, an anticipation hardly jus-

Easter Plants at Craig's.

The Robert Craig Co. is the largest grower of Easter plants in the neighborhood of Philadelphia. Many at a distance, besides the principal florists of the city, depend upon Craig for their supply of blooming plants. More than usual interest centers in the selection of varieties, based, as it is, on a wide experience of market requirements. An appointment was made with Robert A. Craig last week to go over the houses and see what is being grown for Easter. The point most strongly brought out in the walk through the range of houses was the clever timing that is being done to have the stock in condition at Easter. Mr. Craig emphasized the importance this year of the stock being ripe, but not overripe. "Easter is so late," he said, "that the three weeks just before it will probably be equal to five weeks earlier in the season. It is important to have the stock hard and not too far advanced; consequently all our stock is being grown cool, with plenty of air."

The lilies are all giganteum, some 18,000 pots in number, ranging in height from eighteen to thirty inches, averaging four or five flowers to a plant. They look well, especially so when compared with the short giganteum lilies so common this season. The buds are developed just enough to show that they will be perfect as the foliage beneath. There are three houses of Hydrangea Otaksa, chiefly in medium sizes, timed for early, midseason and late orders. These hydrangeas promise well; they are thickly set with heads of good size, are short and stocky and even throughout.

The roses are a feature of the display. Crimson Rambler has resumed its place in the front rank. American Pillar, with splendid foliage, makes its first appearance this season as an Easter rose. Lady Gay, Dorothy Perkins and Hiawatha have a large house to themselves. Foremost among the rose novelties are the plants trained in basket shape. Fancy a long-handled basket of growing roses, with room to drop a blooming plant of, let us fancy, golden genista, to contrast with its scarlet clusters. Then there are Tausendschon, a magnificent bench of Magna Charta and an assortment of the best hybrid teas. Baby Rambler, with its pink cousins, not forgetting Phyllis, completes the list.

The spiræas present a vast scene of glossy foliage with flower spikes pushing well through, all Gladstone and in superb condition. The azaleas looked clean and promising, well set with buds, in the standard Easter varieties. It is too early to say more than that the buds were full and plump and plenty of them. The rhododendrons are fine, some of them of unusual size. They will be better, Mr. Craig thinks, than even in the past. A moderate number of genistas are being grown in 6-inch pots, but the bulk of the stock is in 4-inch, for basket work. They look particularly nice, with the temperature at 45 degrees and the cool air blowing over them.

The side tables in many of the houses are devoted to basket plants, small stock of all the leading varieties especially grown for use in this way. The list closes with valley, now being potted in 5-inch and 6-inch pans for blooming at Easter.

The place contains more Easter blooming plants than ever before and shows that it is considered better to concentrate all energy on standard or staple stock rather than attempt a number of unknown and untried sorts.

Chief among the foliage plant section, pushed forward to some extent at Easter, is Ficus pandurata, a specialty here for many years. Ferns, too, are featured in all the best Boston types, while dracaenas, crotons, begonias and cyclamens await their turn that comes April 17.

Before closing, there is always the last thought. This time it is the daisies in yellow, white, in big and bigger, all the picture of health. The P. P. S. is a little house of Spiraea Queen Alexandra, pink, the delicate beauty of which depends on a light shading just before the flowers unfold.

mindful one of the Baltimore flower shops, with their white and green effects so generally adopted as to become almost typical of the florists of that city. Now all is changed and the old Sign of The Rose in new garb has blossomed forth. The shop looks familiar in the quiet air of refinement, yet different in a certain commercialism that is in harmony with its artistic decorations. There is more room and Mr. Fox says there is even more business, though it is Lent.

been shown year after year. A careful inventory of the larger flowering plants made at Mr. Aschmann's place last week gives the facts from which the following table has been compiled. This table shows that in an average order for a hundred large flowering plants the number of each variety ordered is:

Lilies	32
Azaleas	25
Spiraeas	9
Hydrangeas	10
Ramblers	2
Cinerarias	15
Primula obconica	7

Total.....100

This list does not include the smaller plants, such as hyacinths, grown in quantity, daffodils and tulips; neither does it include the araucarias or the ferns of four divisions of the Boston family that are grown to the larger sizes: Scottii, Whitmani, Scholzei and Grandpa Boston himself.

The lilies are all multiflorum and look remarkably well. They range from short to medium tall, from three to ten buds nicely developed, and have foliage down to the pot. When asked regarding his choice Mr. Aschmann said that Lilium multiflorum is "the only variety worth house room; it can be depended upon to force well for Easter and it can be depended upon to grow to a satisfactory height." The spiræas are all Gladstone—fine stock. The hydrangeas are all Otaksa, with the buds sufficiently advanced to assure their being in time without rushing. The cinerarias are beautifully marked, in great variety, many of them bright colors strikingly contrasted. The Primula obconica form a pretty contrast to the more garish cinerarias. The azaleas fill the last new house, chronicled in this column last fall, and many houses more. They comprise the leading commercial sorts in the popular sizes and are enjoying that careful sorting and straightening so necessary to the azalea that is to be properly timed. Variety, stage of advancement, evenness of buds are considered as the plant is put in a cooler or warmer house or with the undeveloped buds turned to the sun.

Mr. Aschmann prides himself on the fact that he never advances the price. His prices, he says, are exactly the same this year as they have been for many years past, which probably means that his price is lower this year, value considered, as the stock has advanced with the times.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Spring has arrived and the express strike is not yet over as the week opens. Flowers have arrived hours behind time and when they do arrive the wholesalers cannot get them, even when they send their own wagons. So the unsatisfactory conditions existing in the New York market can better be imagined than described. Some boxes have been found after days of searching. Yet there is enough of everything to supply all legitimate demands, with a surplus that only the street can handle. These sidewalk merchants are the salvation of the overcrowded market.

The best roses, except American Beauties, are down to 5 cents in large lots, and $6 per hundred is considered high. Straight slips sometimes are passed out at half that quotation. The quality of the rose stock is superb. The Beauty supply is increasing and prices are on the down grade. As to carnations, 2 cents will buy the best of them. St. Patrick's day brought a fair demand for everything white. The orchid supply is sufficient for all demands, but has not yet descended to the street for patronage, though its sister flower, the gardenia, is obliged to seek that outlet. Lilies of all kinds are lower, including valley. Only the best of the sweet pea varieties sell, and of tulips, narcissi and daffodils there is no end. The southern shipments are fast increasing. Much of the violet stock is inferior. Even the street and the big department stores cannot take all that come in, even at their own figures.

The Banquet.

The banquet of the Florists' Club, March 18, came up to general expectation. An attendance of 250, beautifully decorated tables, a splendid menu, good orchestral music, a vaudeville entertainment and addresses by J. S. Brunton and J. Brown, of the English visitors, and by F. R. Pierson and P. O'Mara, of the club, and Chester I. Campbell, of Boston, with dancing afterward, made up a program of unusual interest.

Chairman Weathered presented ex-President Miller with the club's memento of his services during 1910, a handsome diamond pin.

President J. B. Nugent, Jr., ably presided as toastmaster. Will Macdonald, of the Yonkers Horticultural Society, sang splendidly, and the greatest of good fellowship prevailed.

Tables of eight permitted friends to be seated congenially, and the whole affair was voted the most brilliant gathering of ladies and gentlemen in the club's history. Regrets came from Messrs. Asmus, Valentine, Kasting, Hill, Craig and many other notables. Messrs. Farquhar, Edgar, Stewart and Campbell and Mr. and Mrs. P. Welch were the galaxy from the Hub.

Various Notes.

The new plant market opens April 1 at Fifty-ninth street and First avenue, under the new bridge.

The British Horticulturists arrived on the Lusitania March 18 and were met at the pier by R. Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, and by Messrs. Nugent, Shaw and Pepper. After lunch at the Broadway Central the party spent the afternoon visiting the wholesalers on West Twenty-eighth street. In the evening they left for Philadelphia, where they were the guests of W. Atlee Burpee. They returned to New York Saturday evening in time for the banquet and were the guests of the New York Florists' Club. The reception given the visitors was a most enthusiastic one.

Woodrow & Marketos is the name of the new firm that has rented the store on West Twenty-eighth street, formerly occupied by August Millang. Mr. Millang will give all his attention to his new retail interests in Brooklyn.

J. B. McArdle and his bride were the center of congratulation at the Florists' Club banquet. Mr. McArdle, who has had seven years' experience with one of the New York seed stores, will make Greenwich, Conn., his headquarters and launch his own ship on the business sea in the line of seeds, bulbs, nursery stock, etc.

W. A. Sperling, of the Stumpp & Walter Co., is back from a successful western trip.

The Growers' Cut Flower Co. will be in its new store at 109 West Twenty-eighth street, before Easter. The store will be one of the best on this wholesale street.

Kessler Bros. already have their big greenhouses at 11 West Twenty-eighth street covered. The store and greenhouses give them four times the room of their present quarters. They expect to be located by April 1.

Percy B. Rigby, of the Pennock-Meehan Co., is back from his southern trip.

Herman Warendorff opens his new store at the corner of Nassau and Liberty streets, in the Wall street district, April 1. The Forster-Mansfield Co. has a contract for fixtures amounting to $2,000.

Jas. McManus says he looks for more orchids to be used this Easter than ever before.

A. C. Zvolanek is shipping sweet peas to Phil Kessler.

Hart's store on Madison avenue is completely renewed since the fire. The front will be changed, and one large window substituted. The greenhouse is restocked, new marble fittings installed in the store, and no evidences of the burn-out remain. Hession's store, in the same locality, is one of the landmarks in this part of Madison avenue, and with the Flatbush greenhouses as a basis of supply there is no decrease in the regular trade of this house. Further down this avenue are Nugent, Warendorff, Hanft Bros., Myer, Hauser, Bunyard and Dards, so that in comparison even with Broadway and Fifth avenue, you perceive Madison holds its own.

Six Pages of Retailers' Cards

This department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand. If you are the only florist in your city represented here, you get the orders coming into your territory from other florists. If you are not represented and "the other fellow" is—we can leave it to you what becomes of these desirable orders.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

BATAVIA, N. Y.

The new greenhouses erected by L. C. Stroh & Sons are attracting considerable attention. Among the recent trade visitors are David J. Scott and Wm. Ehmann, Jr., of Corfu, and W. E. and Arthur A. Kirchhoff, of Pembroke.

The range is up-to-date in every way and is stocked with several thousand fine and thrifty carnation plants of the most popular varieties, which are at present in the pink of perfection. They also have cyclamens, freesias and violets that are certainly grand.

The members of the firm are L. C. Stroh, W. W. Stroh and Albert L. Stroh; they are well trained for their vocation, and because of their ability are enjoying a satisfactory business in Batavia and the surrounding territory. W. W. Stroh was for several years with Palmer's, of Buffalo, and is an expert both at growing and design work. A. A. K.

The Market.

During the last week the market was firm and prices kept up well, considering that stock of all kinds is plentiful. The store men must have had a good week's business, as the wholesalers say they bought quite heavily in all lines, especially white stock. There is not much social work going on; still, the west end florists say they had quite a few dinner decorations and a few small weddings.

The plant men are becoming busy now, as the fine weather put all hands to work preparing ground for flower beds and planting out shrubs and other hardy stock.

The wholesale houses during all the week had plenty of stock of everything in season, especially carnations and sweet peas. In these it was a hard matter for the wholesalers to clean up daily. Roses, however, sold well, with hardly any waste.

Violets are holding their own, but the warm weather is having an effect on them and they are coming in much smaller. There are plenty of callas and Harrisii lilies. Other bulb stock is not so plentiful. Lily of the valley is fine; so, also, are freesias and Dutch hyacinths. Ferns are scarce, but other greens, such as asparagus, smilax and galax, are plentiful.

Various Notes.

A committee composed of W. J. Pilcher, Hugo Gross, A. Woerner and W. J. Edwards, representing the Kirkwood growers, on the evening of March 16 presented to Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Smith a solid silver loving cup, in their home at Shenandoah and Grand avenues. The cup is a handsome one and the recipients are justly proud of it.

Quite a few florists will leave this week to attend the National Flower Show at Boston. Among those who will make the trip are Fred C. Weber, Theo. Miller, Otto G. Koenig and F. H. Meinhardt.

The W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. is handling a big lot of California violets and sweet peas for their Kirkwood growers.

The preliminary list of the St. Louis Horticultural Society has been mailed out. The list contains some excellent prizes for cut flowers and plants. Any one wishing a copy can have one by addressing the secretary, Otto G. Koenig.

A number of Belleville florists were here last week, buying supplies. They say that Lent so far has not seriously hurt the trade in cut flowers.

On Wednesday, March 15, Mrs. Chas. E. Schoenle entertained a large number of lady friends at a card party in her newly fitted up apartments over their store, at Lafayette and Jefferson avenues. The prizes were all plants and there were a large number of them.

MILLEPEDS IN FERN SOIL.

Please give me some advice as to how I can destroy these worms, a sample of which I am sending you. The soil in which my Boston ferns are planted is just full of the pests. E. P.

The insects in question are millepeds, which are frequently found in green-houses. Scientists tell us that these insects commonly feed upon decayed vegetable matter, but in fern houses they sometimes attack the young fronds which are just starting from the crown of the plant. Fumigating with nicotine paper will destroy them, though it may need several applications to clear them out entirely. W. H. T.

Samples of CRAIG'S will be at the NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW in BOSTON, March 25. Our Mr. Wm. P. Craig and Mr. Duncan Macaw will be in at to stop off at Philadelphia, to inspect our two places. We will endeavor to make your visit to Philadelphia a most pleasant and Price List, Easter 1911 CRAIG SPECIALTIES are known all over the country and are in greater demand each year. Easter season is superior in quality to any we have ever grown, notwithstanding the high state of prices. We are repaid by inspecting our immense stock of Lilies, Azaleas, Crimson and Pink Ramblers, Hydrangeas, Rhododendrons, Spiraeas, Hybrid Rose and give the best attention.

LILIES.

Our stock of this grand Easter plant is exceptionally fine this year, and having 18,000 plants we can positively please the most critical buyers.

Plants with from 4 to 10 flowers, 12c per bloom.

Made up pans, from 15 to 25 flowers, 12c per bloom.

Plants with less than 4 flowers, 15c per bloom.

Cut Lilies, $12.00 per 100 blooms.

AZALEAS.

We have the largest and finest stock of Azaleas we have ever had, including all the best varieties, being particularly strong on Van der Cruyssen and Vervaneana. Our plants will not be too forward, as they are grown very cool. This will be a great advantage for a late Easter.

Plants, all well budded, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $2.00, $2.50, $3.00, $3.50, $4.00, $5.00, $6.00, $7.50 and $10.00 each.

ROSES.

This year we have grown over 8,000 roses in the following varieties. The stock will surely please our many customers, as it has been grown cool and will prove very satisfactory:

CRIMSON RAMBLER.

These plants are unusually fine.

6-inch and 7-inch pots, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 each.

8-inch and 9-inch pots, trained in fan and globular shapes, extra fine, $2.00, $2.50, $3.00 and $3.50 each.

PINK RAMBLER ROSES—Lady Gay and Dorothy Perkins.

In grand condition, trained into fan, globular and pyramidal shapes, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $2.00, $2.50, $3.00, $3.50, $4.00 and $5.00 each.

Special Ball Shapes, wire frames, $2.50, $3.00, $4.00 and $5.00 each.

Special Fan Shapes, wire frames, $3.50 and $4.00 each.

Special Lady Gay, Umbrella Shape, $3.50 and $4.00 each.

Special Lady Gay and Dorothy Perkins Baskets, very handsome, $7.50 each.

We want to call your attention to the umbrellas and baskets, which are in exceptionally fine condition. These, we believe, cannot be duplicated anywhere.

TAUSENDSCHON—Thousand Beauties.

This was our finest and most popular climber last Easter, and this year our stock is large and the plants are much finer. We cannot recommend the Tausendschon too highly.

Strong plants, 6-inch and 7-inch pots, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 and $1.50 each.

Trained plants, fan, globular and pyramidal shapes, $2.00, $2.50, $3.00, $3.50, $4.00, $5.00 and $6.00 each.

HIAWATHA.

The best variety of its color—brilliant red with yellow center.

6-inch, 7-inch and 8-inch pots, trained in globular and fan shapes, $1.25, $1.50, $2.00, $2.50 and $3.00 each.

Special Baskets, $7.50 each.

STANDARD BABY RAMBLERS—Both Red and White Varieties.

Exceptionally fine plants, 3 to 5 foot stems, $1.25 and $1.50 each.

BABY RAMBLERS.

Good, strong stock, well flowered, $3.00, $4.00, $6.00 and $9.00 per dozen.

MRS. CUTBUSH (New)—Pink Baby Rambler.

This variety is one of the popular ones.

5-inch and 6-inch pots, $5.00, $6.00 and $9.00 per dozen.

BABY DOROTHY (New)—Pink Baby Rambler, Very Beautiful.

4-inch and 4½-inch pots, heavy, $4.00 per dozen.

5-inch pots, heavy, $6.00 per dozen.

6-inch pots, heavy, $9.00 per dozen.

PHYLLIS (New)—Pink Baby Rambler.

This variety we consider the most beautiful of its class.

5-inch and 6-inch pots, $6.00 and $9.00 per dozen.

HYBRID ROSES.

We have an unusually large stock of Hybrids and Teas, which will be just right for Easter. All the best varieties, including Richmond, Killarney, My Maryland, Frau Karl Druschki, etc.

6-inch and 7-inch pots, $6.00, $9.00 and $12.00 per dozen.

MAGNA CHARTA.
